One Of Mightiest Earthquakes In History Devastates Alaska

Anglo Planes Flatten Fort To Retaliate

Yemen Fortress Bombed, Strafed After Warnings

LONDON (AP) — Eight British warplanes acting under high level official orders strafed and destroyed a Yemen fort on the frontier of the Aden Protectorate Saturday.

A Defense Ministry spokesman said the attack, by a squadron of fighters, was in retaliation for two assaults by Yemeni aircraft on protectorate territory within the past two weeks.

The spokesman said warning leaflets were dropped on the fort by two reconnaissance planes before the attack and that "there was no sign of life either before or during the attack."

ACT APPROVED

He added that approval for the British action was given in advance by Defense Minister Peter Thorneycroft and Colonial Secretary Duncan Sandys in London.

The Defense Ministry said the Yemeni attacks this month followed two others in 1962 and 1963 which resulted in strong British protests.

Despite these protests, the ministry said, two Yemeni planes attacked Bedouin shepherds and their flocks on March 13, killing two camels and burning two tents, and a Yemeni helicopter crossed the frontier Friday, machine-gunned a fort and fired on a camel caravan.

The ministry statement said "The need for this counterattack is regretted but the responsibility for it rests with the Yemeni republican authorities.

"It is hoped that this will make it clear that federal territory cannot be attacked with impunity, and that the British government intends to discharge to the full their treaty obligations to defend the federation."

MOSCOW (AP) — A dispatch from Cairo by the Soviet news agency Tass charged a British warplane "carried out a sneak attack" on the Yemeni town of Harib Saturday, killing 25 persons, including women and children.

Plane Carrying 45 Slams Into Mount Vesuvius

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — An Italian airliner with 45 persons aboard crashed on Mt. Vesuvius Saturday night in a driving rainstorm. Police said all aboard perished in the Easter eve tragedy.

Seven Americans were reported among those killed.

The plane was coming in for a landing at Naples' Capodichino Airport 90 minutes before midnight when it rammed into the side of the famous volcano.

It smashed into the mountain just a third of a mile away from a tourist hotel, a restaurant and an observatory. No one in the group of buildings was hurt.

Search parties toiling up the side of Mt. Vesuvius sent back word that they had located the wreckage Easter morning about three hours after midnight.

The airliner hit not far from where a road ends and a funicular rail line starts toward the top of the 4,000-foot volcano.

Mt. Vesuvius is the most famous of volcanoes. Its eruptions in 79 A.D. destroyed the ancient Roman cities of Pompeii, Herculaneium and Stabiae. Minor eruptions have occurred since the 18th century, the last in 1944.

In Rome, a spokesman for Alitalia Airlines confirmed that 45 persons were aboard—40 passengers and a crew of 5, including a hostess. At least one child was among the passengers.

The flight originated in Turin in north Italy. Some passengers got on and some got off at Rome before the plane left on the last 110-mile leg, from the Italian capital to this largest city in southern Italy.

The control tower at Capodichino Airport lost contact with the plane as it was approaching to land during a heavy downpour.

LBJ Asks Probe Into Wide Gaps On Food Prices

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson called Saturday for an investigation of the gap in food prices—the spread between what producers get and consumers pay. The emphasis would be on meat prices.

OTHER POINTS

—Took issue with Sen. J. W. Fulbright's critical views of administration policy toward Cuba and Panama.

—Said he is planning to visit pockets of poverty and unemployment at some time not yet set. But he does not intend to make a flying trip to view Alaskan earthquake areas.

—Hailed the release of two American pilots who were shot down by the Russians over East Germany.

Johnson covered these and an array of other topics in the crowded, pine-paneled, library-office at the big LBJ Ranch on the banks of the Pedernales River.

He was attired in range country garb, from brown high-heeled boots to wide-brimmed hat, and matching beige shirt, slacks and jacket with his initials monogramming the pocket.

Mrs. Johnson listened in at the back of the room. She was wearing tan stretch pants, a tan turtle neck sweater and embroidered tan boots.

One announcement was that the President was preparing to ask Congress for legislation to create a bipartisan commission of 15 to study changes he said are taking place in the food industry.

Christians Mark Good Will Easter

NEW YORK (AP) — Christians by the millions around the world will observe Easter Sunday in a theme of ecumenical good will.

Pope Paul VI extended to Roman Catholic "well wishin laint Easter salute to the Oriental churches" and "greetings and peace to all the Anglican churches."

CHURCHES TO FILL

Catholics and Protestants alike will flock to churches to observe the resurrection of Christ.

Sunrise services will be held at such varied locales as mountain tops and in Radio City Music Hall in New York City.

Kennedy International Airport in New York reported an all-time record for operations, with 1,352 landings and takeoffs in a 24-hour period, topping a previous mark of 1,147.

President Johnson had arranged a quiet weekend at his ranch outside of Austin, Tex.

The weekend began with something of a religious rarity —Good Friday and the start of the Jewish Passover falling on the same day.

"It was as if the calendar were trying to underline the brotherhood of man," said the New York Journal-American.

Good Friday marked the crucifixion of Christ; Passover the Jewish exodus from slavery.

In another quirk of the calendar, most Eastern Orthodox Christians will observe Easter on May 3 because of a variance in calculating the day of the resurrection.

The Easter Story

Now upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they came unto the sepulchre, bringing the spices which they had prepared, and certain others with them.

And they entered in, and found not the body of the Lord Jesus.

And it came to pass, as they were much perplexed thereabout, behold two men stood by them in shining garments:

And as they were afraid, and bowed their faces to the earth, they said unto them, Why seek ye the living among the dead?

He is not here, but is risen; remember how He spake unto you when He was yet in Galilee, Saying, The Son of man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again.

All-Out U.S. Aid Pledged By President

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Alaska counted its dead and marshaled forces to care for the living Saturday amid widespread devastation from one of history's mightiest earthquakes.

President Johnson declared the state a major disaster area and pledged all the government's resources in providing aid.

The known death toll still was surprisingly low. Fears it would mount into the hundreds were diminishing.

Less than 100 were listed as dead or missing at midday.

Anchorage, Alaska's largest city with a population of nearly 100,000 in the metropolitan area, took the brunt of the great Good Friday shock which struck at 5:36 p.m.—10:36 p.m. (EST).

Giant seismic sea waves generated by the quake smashed into half a dozen smaller cities rimming the Gulf of Alaska south of here and on Kodiak Island, causing death and destruction.

The waves raced on, leaving a trail of devastation down the Pacific Coast from Canada to California.

The waves slashed against the Hawaiian Islands, without major damage or injury, and finally spent themselves as they lapped Japan and Siberia.

The death toll rose to 16 in Anchorage as rescue workers searched through wrecked and damaged buildings and homes in freezing foggy weather.

There were unofficial reports of possibly 100 missing.

John Alcantra, assistant to Gov. William A. Egan, said seven dead were found in the Turnagain residential area of swank homes, where dozens were flat-

Churches Stage Special Easter Services Today

Easter sermons, prayers, and churches today will echo the glad tidings of the resurrection of Christ.

Starting with two community sunrise services in the area, the observances at churches will include special services and cantata presentations.

The Monroe Memorial Park Cemetery sunrise service was scheduled for 5:45 a.m. under sponsorship of the Pilot Club of Monroe-West Monroe, and the sunrise service at New Light Baptist Church, Prairie Road, near Monroe, at 6:30 a.m.

Several churches are climaxing revivals today, and some will launch new revival series.

Most of the Easter cantata presentations at local churches are scheduled for this evening.

Cantata programs announced include:

Central Baptist Church, 7 p.m.; Emmanuel Baptist Church of Monroe, 7 p.m.; McGuire Methodist Church, 7 p.m.; Trinity Baptist Church, 7:30 p.m.; West Monroe First Baptist Church, 7:30 p.m.

A gospel music program is set for 5:30 p.m. at Auld's Chapel Congregational Church, about 10 miles west of West Monroe.

Several churches will sponsor egg hunts for children during the day, and a film, "I Beheld The Glory," will be shown starting at 7 p.m. on the parking lot of First Baptist Church of Monroe.

U.S. Questions 2 Freed Fliers

WIESBADEN, Germany (UPI) —Air Force intelligence specialists questioned two American fliers Saturday released by the Soviets after a 17-day ordeal in which their reconnaissance plane was shot down over Communist East Germany and they were held captive.

Official spokesman at Air Force Headquarters for Europe here said nothing about the airmen's condition, activities or plans, but a statement is expected later.

Aftershocks Deal Areas More Misery

By United Press International

Sickening aftershocks and killer tidal waves, backlash of possibly the strongest earthquake ever recorded, dealt additional casualties and grief Saturday to Alsakans counting their dead by the scores and homeless by the thousands.

BITTER COLD

Quake-caused fires, snow and bitter cold added to the misery in areas blacked out and isolated by cut communications lines. Damage was estimated at $850 million. Casualties occurred in California and Oregon.

As many as 85 persons were reported dead and at least 100 missing. Hundreds more were injured in the Good Friday quake that wrenched an 800-mile arc of the 49th state from Sitka west to Kodiak.

The governor's office downgraded its original estimate of as many as 600 dead.

"Another quake . . .bad. . .bad . . .bad. . .God, why can't they stop this business?" an amateur radio operator tapped out from shattered Anchorage, until Friday a bustling, modern city of 100,000.

The new shock registered 7 on the Richter scale at the Coast and Geodetic Survey in Honolulu and 5 on University of California seismographs at Berkeley. It was recorded shortly before 4 p.m., EST.

Friday night's massive quake, which sent tidal waves surging against the West Coast and across the Pacific, had a reading of 8.6 on the Richter scale — more powerful than the 1906 quake which devastated San Francisco.

President Johnson, spending the weekend at his Johnson City, Tex., ranch, quickly set in motion the full power of the federal government to aid the disaster victims.

Clear Weather Forecast Here

Easter egg hunters will have a pleasant day for searching with clear weather on tap, marred only by a few scattered clouds in Monroe and vicinity.

MILD

Temperatures will be mild, with a predicted high 64 to 68 today, but the mercury will climb into the 70s Monday. Cooler air is scheduled for the area tonight, dropping temperatures to 36 or 40. However, no rainfall is expected in this area today or Monday.

Winds will be northeasterly 8 to 18 mph. Saturday's high recording was 69 and the low was 51.

FOUR TIDAL WAVES HIT

25 Dead, Missing On West Coast

CRESCENT CITY, Calif. (AP) — This wrecked Pacific coast logging and fishing seaport counted at least 10 dead and 15 missing Saturday, victims of four tidal waves flung inland by a violent earthquake in Alaska.

More than three score were injured.

The sea blows between 10 p.m. Friday until just after midnight devastated 29 blocks of stores and houses of this northern California town 340 miles north of San Francisco.

More than 300 buildings were flattened or knocked askew. Property damages were estimated in the millions of dollars, perhaps in excess of $30 million.

The town's 3,000 residents fled — but belatedly. Although two radio stations broadcast warnings, residents were deceived by the first two light waves.

Then two mammoth waves struck. Some witnesses said these waves were up to 15 feet high. Powerful suction as great masses of water recedeed did the big damage.

Short-circuited wires set Texaco and Union oil gasoline storage tanks ablaze near the waterfront. One went up with a roar. Towering flames shot into the night sky. They still burned long after daylight.

The McKenzies were sleeping on the beach at a State park near Newport, Ore., when the giant waves hit.

In a telephone call to his pastor here, McKenzie said the first wave swept over the children and they began screaming. Then a second wave hit.

"There was only a foot of air at the top of the lean-to we were in and we had to struggle to get to it," McKenzie said. "Logs were thrown at us like match sticks."

When the wave receded the McKenzies found their four children had been swept to sea. The body of Ricky, 6, was recovered. Still missing were Louie, 8, Bobby, 7, and Tammy, 3.

LBJ Appoints More Women To Positions

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP)—President Johnson named four more women Saturday to top government posts paying up to $22,500 and announced he expects to name many more women.

For the first time, a woman was placed on the Atomic Energy Commission and on the Export-Import Bank.

AEC POST

Mary Ingraham Bunting, president of Radcliffe College and trained in microbiology and biochemistry got the $22,500 post on the Atomic Energy Commission.

A native of Brooklyn, N.Y., 53 years old, she has had long academic experience and did research at Yale from 1950 to 1955 under AEC sponsorship.

Miss Marguerite Jay Tibbets, a State Department foreign service officer, will be ambassador to a country not yet disclosed. She has been with the State Department since 1946 and is the second woman to whom Johnson has given an ambassadorial post. He recently named Katharine Elkus White of Red Bank, N.J., as ambassador to Denmark.

Miss Tibbets, born in Maine, about 45, is a graduate of Bryn Mawr. Her new post usually pays around $22,500, too.

The Republican vacancy on the Export-Import Bank, a $20,000-a-year post went to Elizabeth S. May, 56, currently dean of Wheaton College in Norton, Mass., a former professor of economics, who has worked as an economic analyst with the U.S. Treasury Department and Budget Bureau. A widow, she is a graduate of Smith College and studied at the London School of Economics.

HAPPY HUNTING GROUNDS

Women 'Raid' Hotel As Managers Smile

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — It was the stuff hotel managers' nightmares are made of—1,500 women dashing through halls and ransacking rooms.

But the managers of the Neil House here stood by Saturday, assisting their guests and smiling broadly as thoughts of good will and public relations danced in their heads.

Surprisingly, the chaos was orderly, if such could be the case—and no one was injured.

It was tagged the "Great Neil House Raid" and 100 rooms of furniture were up for grabs. The stunt preceded the start of a $3-million renovation program, designed to turn the aged structure into a modern hotel.

The women began lining up outside the hotel at dawn. There were minks, tennis shoes, flowered chapeaus, babushkas, suits, slacks and one teen-ager wearing football padding beneath a light blue sweatshirt.

Most of the women were lured by the sport of bargain finding, rather than need for the mediocre, but sturdy, hotel furnishings.

"I'll take a tall lamp if I can find one. But I'm here more for curiosity and fun than need," said Mrs. A. J. Fielding of Columbus, who arrived at 6:30 a.m. and had ticket No. 1 into the hotel.

The mechanics of the raid worked like this: The women had to purchase a $2 ticket to a creamed chicken and salad brunch. The tickets were numbered and denoted the order in which the women were taken to the eighth floor and turned loose. They claimed a single item by taping a stub to the furniture. Double and triple tagging were permitted with the hotel's promise to duplicate the item from another floor.

FOUR TIDAL WAVES HIT

25 Dead, Missing On West Coast

CRESCENT CITY, Calif. (AP) — This wrecked Pacific coast logging and fishing seaport counted at least 10 dead and 15 missing Saturday, victims of four tidal waves flung inland by a violent earthquake in Alaska.

More than three score were injured.

The sea blows between 10 p.m. Friday until just after midnight devastated 29 blocks of stores and houses of this northern California town 340 miles north of San Francisco.

More than 300 buildings were flattened or knocked askew. Property damages were estimated in the millions of dollars, perhaps in excess of $30 million.

The town's 3,000 residents fled — but belatedly. Although two radio stations broadcast warnings, residents were deceived by the first two light waves.

Then two mammoth waves struck. Some witnesses said these waves were up to 15 feet high. Powerful suction as great masses of water recedeed did the big damage.

Short-circuited wires set Texaco and Union oil gasoline storage tanks ablaze near the waterfront. One went up with a roar. Towering flames shot into the night sky. They still burned long after daylight.

The McKenzies were sleeping on the beach at a State park near Newport, Ore., when the giant waves hit.

In a telephone call to his pastor here, McKenzie said the first wave swept over the children and they began screaming. Then a second wave hit.

"There was only a foot of air at the top of the lean-to we were in and we had to struggle to get to it," McKenzie said. "Logs were thrown at us like match sticks."

When the wave receded the McKenzies found their four children had been swept to sea. The body of Ricky, 6, was recovered. Still missing were Louie, 8, Bobby, 7, and Tammy, 3.

LBJ Appoints More Women To Positions

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP)—President Johnson named four more women Saturday to top government posts paying up to $22,500 and announced he expects to name many more women.

For the first time, a woman was placed on the Atomic Energy Commission and on the Export-Import Bank.

AEC POST

Mary Ingraham Bunting, president of Radcliffe College and trained in microbiology and biochemistry got the $22,500 post on the Atomic Energy Commission.

A native of Brooklyn, N.Y., 53 years old, she has had long academic experience and did research at Yale from 1950 to 1955 under AEC sponsorship.

Miss Marguerite Jay Tibbets, a State Department foreign service officer, will be ambassador to a country not yet disclosed. She has been with the State Department since 1946 and is the second woman to whom Johnson has given an ambassadorial post. He recently named Katharine Elkus White of Red Bank, N.J., as ambassador to Denmark.

Miss Tibbets, born in Maine, about 45, is a graduate of Bryn Mawr. Her new post usually pays around $22,500, too.

The Republican vacancy on the Export-Import Bank, a $20,000-a-year post went to Elizabeth S. May, 56, currently dean of Wheaton College in Norton, Mass., a former professor of economics, who has worked as an economic analyst with the U.S. Treasury Department and Budget Bureau. A widow, she is a graduate of Smith College and studied at the London School of Economics.

HAPPY HUNTING GROUNDS

Women 'Raid' Hotel As Managers Smile

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — It was the stuff hotel managers' nightmares are made of—1,500 women dashing through halls and ransacking rooms.

But the managers of the Neil House here stood by Saturday, assisting their guests and smiling broadly as thoughts of good will and public relations danced in their heads.

Surprisingly, the chaos was orderly, if such could be the case—and no one was injured.

It was tagged the "Great Neil House Raid" and 100 rooms of furniture were up for grabs. The stunt preceded the start of a $3-million renovation program, designed to turn the aged structure into a modern hotel.

The women began lining up outside the hotel at dawn. There were minks, tennis shoes, flowered chapeaus, babushkas, suits, slacks and one teen-ager wearing football padding beneath a light blue sweatshirt.

Most of the women were lured by the sport of bargain finding, rather than need for the mediocre, but sturdy, hotel furnishings.

"I'll take a tall lamp if I can find one. But I'm here more for curiosity and fun than need," said Mrs. A. J. Fielding of Columbus, who arrived at 6:30 a.m. and had ticket No. 1 into the hotel.

The mechanics of the raid worked like this: The women had to purchase a $2 ticket to a creamed chicken and salad brunch. The tickets were numbered and denoted the order in which the women were taken to the eighth floor and turned loose. They claimed a single item by taping a stub to the furniture. Double and triple tagging were permitted with the hotel's promise to duplicate the item from another floor.

Newsman Gives Vivid Description

By WILLIAM AJ. TOBIN
Managing Editor,
Anchorage Daily Times

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)—It seemed unbelievable at the beginning. Then you knew this was a mighty earthquake and thousands were in danger.

You thought, first, of your family. Then you wondered what was happening to your newspaper plant.

Finally, you realized there was no safety as you and scores of others stood in shock and panic in the middle of a weaving, buckling street.

I was just parking my car in front of the new five-story J. C. Penney building of the largest in downtown Anchorage, when everything began to shake.

IN RUINS

Before it was over, the center of Anchorage was in ruins, residential areas were devastated and tidal waves and fire had carried death and destruction for thousands of miles.

I leaped from my car, with the motor still running, and ran into the street. A woman there was about to fall, and I grabbed her. As we stood supporting each other, the Penney building weaved and rocked.

As I watched, my car was smashed flat.

Nearby, great fissures opened up in the ground. Two of the largest were to top 60 feet across, 10 feet or more deep and a block or two long. Some buildings just slid in, almost quietly. Others teetered on the edge.

Most of the structures in the heart of the city are only one or two stories.

After learning with grateful relief my family was all right, there was the business of trying to find out the gravity of the disaster and give any help I could. Hundreds of others forgot their own losses and did the same.

The night was incredibly silent and dark. All power had been knocked out, gas lines were broken and there was no water.

Workers and those on guard against looters gave a firefly effect as they moved through the devastated district with flashlights and lanterns.

City, Civil Defense, and business and military leaders met at 3 a.m. in the fire hall to piece together reports on the impact of the disaster and plan how to restore emergency services.

Two of the men there were Mayor Perry Stockton and City Manager James W. Harrison of Seward, which only two days ago had been named one of 11 all-America cities by a national magazine.

They were here to plan for a celebration next weekend for the all-America award. Instead, they heard much of the waterfront section of their city had been destroyed, with oil storage tanks afire and Alaska Railroad facilities destroyed.

No attempt will be made to restore services in the downtown area immediately. Underground pipes and lines are too badly damaged. The first need is to get power, water and gas to homes, which are cold and uncomfortable in below-freezing weather.

Sewage disposal also is an acute problem.

Plane Believed Down In Pacific

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A large business plane, en route here from Honolulu with nine persons aboard, was believed to have gone down Saturday in the Pacific after it radioed that one of its four engines had burst into flames.

"There's a bad fire in the No. 2 engine and we might have to ditch," was the last message sent by the pilot to Flight Service Headquarters, flight center for the Federal Aviation Agency here.

At the time of the distress message the DC4 transport-type aircraft was some 1,000 miles southwest of here, beyond the halfway mark in the 2,400-mile journey, which is called "The Point of no Return."

"We can't officially say it is down, but it looks like it," said Walter Shirley, supervisor of the flight center. "It's too far overdue to still be in the air, and we feel we would have heard something by now."

The plane was due to arrive at Los Angeles International Airport at 8:40 a.m., PST (11:40 a.m., EST), but carried enough fuel to keep it aloft for five more hours.

Two Coast Guard planes from San Francisco began scouring area rea in the Pacific Ocean where the plane was believed to have ditched, and at least three Coast Guard cutters were speeding to the scene.

The pilot of the plane was identified as Harry Baker, 60, of Fallon, Nev., pilot for Facilities Management Corp., headquartered in Hawthorne, Calif.

Mary Baker, wife of the pilot, said her husband was a World War II pilot with 30,000 hours flying time.

He was identified as part owner of Stockman's bar and casino in Fallon.

The co-pilot was identified as Jerry McGovern of Muskegon, Mich., and the navigator as Robert Storey of Concord, Calif.

TO THE JUDGE'S DEFENSE

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Judge William Copland was holding court in Gastonia when there was a loud noise. A 10-pound piece of brightly colored ceiling came loose on Copland's head.

The judge reported a sore head, but he felt well protected.

So loud was the noise that a police officer, thinking the judge had been attacked, drew his revolver before he realized what was happening.

Walton was being sought by police when he surrendered at Monroe City Hall at 12:50 a.m. Saturday.

8-Feet Tidal Waves Smash State Coast

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Alaskan earthquake kicked up a tidal wave as high as eight feet along 400 miles of the Louisiana-Texas coast.

The wave damaged boats and docks, broke mooring lines and scared people. No injuries were reported and the damage generally appeared minor.

The wave, Friday night, traveled east to west. Along the South Louisiana coast and in lakes, bayous and canals the water rose as much as eight feet.

Westward in the Houston ship channel, the tidal wave was five feet.

The Rev. Louis J. Eisle, director of the seismographic observatory at Spring Hill College in Mobile, Ala., said the tidal wave was not generated as most such waves are.

Waves pushed toward shore by an earthquake or hurricane generally cause tidal waves. In this case, the wave was caused by a jelly-like quivering of sedimentary deposits along the Gulf Coast.

There was no water connection between the West and Gulf Coast waves. Shock waves from Alaska traveled deep under the surface of the earth 3,600 miles to the Louisiana delta.

In Mobile the earth moved half an inch.

"The Louisiana coast is delta land and is very, very deep with Mississippi River sediment, which is quite flexible like jello," Father Eisle said.

Quake Most Powerful In North America

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI)—University of California seismologist Michael Blackford said Saturday that Alaska's devastating earthquake was "equal in magnitude to the most powerful quake ever recorded in North America."

Blackford said Friday night's temblor measured about 8.5 on the Richter scale. A reading of 5 is considered severe enough to cause damage in heavily populated areas.

The only previous temblor of this magnitude occurred near Yakutat, Alaska, in 1899, Blackford said.

The seismologist said the epicenter, or point of maximum shock, of Friday night's quake "appears to have been near Prince William Sound," about 100 miles due east of Anchorage.

"The earth is still resonating from the main shock," Blackford said. He described this after effect by comparing the earth to a hard metallic object which continues to vibrate long after it has been struck.

Asked if past records supported fears another heavy temblor might be forthcoming, Blackford said: "Major quakes are often followed by shocks of continually decreasing magnitude, but this is usually due to the reflection of the main shock waves back and forth through the earth."

12-Foot Cracks Made By Quake

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (UPI) —Lt. George W. Carter told his father Saturday troops near Anchorage, Alaska "reported 12-foot crevices in the ground" in the aftermath of the massive earthquake which struck late Friday.

Carter, of Chattanooga, talked with George W. Carter, Sr., by long-distace telephone from Ft. Richardson, near Anchorage. The elder Carter described the telephone connections as "excellent."

Carter said his son, a medical service officer, had been trying since early Friday night to contact him. The call was completed early Saturday afternoon.

Meal Halted By Alaskan Earthquake

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)—"My wife and I were just sitting down to the dinner table when the first shock came. The meal didn't last long.

"We had experienced many earthquakes in our 14 years in this city, but never anything like this.

"The first thing we always tried to do in other quakes was to get out into the open away from everything. My wife made it, but I didn't.

"I was in the dining room unable to move because of the severe shaking.

"I looked out the window and could see my car in the driveway. It seemed to be bouncing up and down as if it were on a spring.

"I hung onto the kitchen stove to keep from falling down, and noticed plates flying off the table.

"The next thing I knew, I was out in the yard. I had run out there, but don't even remember doing it.

"My wife and I stood out there holding onto a fence. We watched a 150-foot-high chimney crumble and fall directly across the street.

"Then the shaking stopped and it was all over."

TO THE JUDGE'S DEFENSE

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Judge William Copland was holding court in Gastonia when there was a loud noise. A 10-pound piece of brightly colored ceiling came loose on Copland's head.

The judge reported a sore head, but he felt well protected.

So loud was the noise that a police officer, thinking the judge had been attacked, drew his revolver before he realized what was happening.

Floor Fight Looms For Elector Bill

BATON ROUGE (AP) — A proposal by Rep. Parey Branton to require a Democratic Party vote next fall on two slates of presidential electors drew promises Saturday of a floor fight from two lawmakers.

"I guarantee you he can expect a fight," said Sen.-elect J. D. DeBlieux, Baton Rouge.

And Sen. Michael O'Keefe, New Orleans, who helped kill a similar measure in the Senate last May, said, "I'm against them tampering with either the Democratic or Republican electoral slate."

He said he was ready to oppose the measure on the Senate floor again.

Branton, Webster Parish segregationist, said he prefiled for the legislature bills to require the Democratic State Central Committee to submit two slates of electors to the voters at the second primary in October.

"One slate would be bound by a signed pledge to support the national party nominees," he said, "and the other to support some southern conservative. . . like George Wallace."

He referred to Gov. George Wallace of Alabama.

Branton said he also had a legislative package to revise state voting laws, abolish party primaries, and remove all functions of state party central committees.

The latter proposal also drew opposition from DeBlieux, who said it obviously came from the camp of arch - segregationist Leander H. Perez Sr. of Plaquemines Parish.

"What they're mad about," DeBlieux said, "is that the people have decided they don't like their type of government."

The electors and elections issues apparently are interwoven. Proposed changes in election laws may include voting on presidential electors.

O'Keefe has prefiled legislation to provide a single nonpartisan primary. Voters and candidates of all parties would take part. A runoff would be held if no candidate drew a majority.

He said his legislation would not do away with political parties, and he would oppose any that did. O'Keefe said the parties serve a definite purpose in bringing out advantages and disadvantages of programs and proposals.

Proposals such as Branton's, he said, seek to confuse the people and keep them from voting for whom they wish.

In presidential voting, O'Keefe favored a system of allowing Democrats, Republicans, States Rights, independents or others to put forth slates of pledged elector candidates.

"If somebody wants to go up with a blank ckeck," he said, "let them qualify."

He believed the legislature "would be very much against" the Branton proposal.

Secretary of State Wade O. Martin, Louisiana's top elections officer, has expressed concern and urged caution regarding numerous proposals to alter election laws.

He gave guidelines for any change, Louisiana's top elections officer, has expressed concern and urged caution regarding numerous proposals to alter election laws.

He gave guidelines for any change. He suggested as perhaps the best system two "wide open" rounds of voting in choosing public officials.

O'Keefe said Martin's suggestions were similar to his own.

Martin said it was unlikely his proposed changes could apply to election of presidential electors or party committees because of legal and constitutional complications. He withheld any suggestions in this area.

Gov.-Elect John J. McKeithen has declined to take sides yet in the electors issue. So has C. H. (Sammy) Downs, his legislative coordinator and chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee.

McKeithen refused to make any recommendations to the Democratic committee on the "Independent Presidential Electors" question and said he would not consider any committee action a mandate.

The governor-elect said he wants to remain "uncontrolled" in the race for president until he can see further ahead.

The issue is building up for a new scrap in the committee in mid-April, when a presidential elector primary set up by a Perez resolution will be challenged.

On the Branton proposal, Downs declined comment until he knows more about it.

McKeithen has called for a revision of state election laws to eliminate the two primaries, since he had to fight through two tough ones and then meet Republican Charlton Lyons Sr. in an unusually close general election.

He too has suggested a single all-party election with a runoff if needed.

The governor-elect said he had attorneys studying the proposal. And Downs said he was preparing such a bill along those lines.

Meanwhile, Tom C. Hall, chairman of the Republican state central committee, said Martin's suggestions for change in the election laws could get Republican backing.

German Measles Spreading From East To South

ATLANTA (AP) —A nationwide epidemic of German measles appears in progress with the disease spreading into the South and West.

In New York City, the cases of rubella, medical name for the disease, were 17 times greater than one year ago, reports the Communicable Disease Center of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

A rise in reported cases was noted first late last fall in the northeast with peak incidence observed in the past few weeks.

"The outbreak appears to have spread rapidly to the South and West," CDC said in its weekly report.

Most victims are school-age children. The disease also has occurred among pre-school children and adults to a lesser extent.

CDC said gamma globulin had been widely used for treatment of pregnant woman exposed to rubella and "in a few instances physicians have elected to perform therapeutic abortion" of expectant mothers who contracted the disease.

In the South, Atlanta area physicians report a marked increase in incidence of a rash disease similar to rubella. Kentucky's incidence is 60 per cent above normal; the demand for gamma globulin is the greatest ever in the state.

Louisiana physicians estimate the state's outbreak is more extensive than any observed in the past 20 years.

Two Women Found Slain In Nevada

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Two Southern California women, a mother and her married daughter, were found shot to death Saturday on the desert outskirts of this gambling city.

A man who left the victims bloodsoaked car at a downtown parking garage was booked for investigation of homicide.

The bodies of Mrs. Inez Mulloy and her daughter, Mrs. Norma Widick, were found lying face down on the sert in a remote area 10 miles southwest of here near a county road leading out Interstate 15, the main Los Angeles - Las Vegas highway. Both had been shot in the head, and the contents of their purses dumped out onto the sand. One of the women had been run over as the killer fled in a car.

Police said the two women checked into a downtown motel Friday night but failed to use their room. Early Saturday their 1957 Chevrolet sedan was left at a parking garage. The attendant called police when he found the interior soaked with blood and a 38-caliber revolver on the seat.

Officers staked out the car and arrested Roy Warman Osborn, 36, of Portland, Ore., when he returned to the garage. Detectives said his fingerprints were found on the gun and on the car. He denied any knowledge of the slayings.

Weird, Spooky Describes Quake Effects In State

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—It was just a little twitch of the earth under the Louisiana-Texas coast but people who saw the result will never forget it.

"Weird," they called it. "Spooky." "Wild."

The twitch, measured in a few sixteenths of an inch, was so slight few humans felt it. It was enough to make the waters leap.

Striking with complete surprise, waves up to six feet high swamped moored small boats and even snapped ship lines along the coast, from New Orleans to Galveston.

Fortunately, the rare earth movement—apparently a sympathetic reaction to earthquake violence far to the north in Alaska—did little major damage.

But it really stirred up a mighty sloshing of water, both along salty waterfronts and quiet inland bayous late last night.

In swampy south Louisiana, bayous for miles inland were sloshed over their banks, in some instances flooding highways and leaving behind debris.

Even in high, dry Baton Rouge, La., 80 miles inland, a homeowner admiring his new swimming pool, was astonished when water suddenly sloshed over one side of it.

Ships, boats and barges bobbed and bounced as the waves rolled up canals, rivers and bayous in varying heights. Many of them ripped away from mooring lines but were quickly retrieved.

"It was weird," said a Houston Pilots Association spokesman. "The water was rolling and bubbling up throughout the ship channel as if something was underneath it."

In Golden Meadow, La., a fisherman's bar rapidly empties when Bayou Lafourche sent a wave over its banks and through the bar door.

Crews on offshore oil rigs in the gulf reported sea level suddenly sagged five feet below normal, then came back with a surge that went five feet above normal.

The earth movement happened at about the same hour as the major quake in Alaska.

A COUPLE OF MINUTES

Earthquake Seemed Like It Lasted For An Eternity

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)—It might not have lasted more than a couple of minutes, but the earthquake that devastated Anchorage on Good Friday seemed to last an eternity.

Imagine yourself standing out on a street, the ground bucking and weaving beneath you like a ship in a stormy sea, high voltage utility poles swaying menactingly over your head, big trailer trucks in a nearby van lot toppling over like dominoes.

Imagine yourself standing on what you had always considered solid ground and seeing it crackle and fissure in a kind of unearthly silence that was suddenly dispelled by the sharp explosion of a bursting watermain.

And then imagine yourself, once the earth stopped reeling, driving downtown from your demolished office, to see whether your apartment house—with your wife and small child inside—was still standing or leveled like many another buildings you pass en route.

Your apartment is a shambles, but thank God your family is unhurt. But a brand-new, nearly completed apartment building in your block is razed.

You know, instinctively, that the ordeal was a terrible one for the city—a young, thriving community of some 100,000 in the Greater Anchorage area. People stand in little clusters outside their homes, talking in quiet voices and with drawn faces of the sudden disaster that has only begun to sink in.

Then the rumors start. One man, bleeding from a cut leg, has heard there are "hundreds of dead." You know he may be right, because you drove past buildings which were torn asunder, and you are sure there are casualties.

But just how many, and where, and how far the quake affected Alaska you don't know. You hear of an impending tidal wave. After awhile, the radio stations comes back on the air with Civil Defense instructions, and at least you get a feeling that somebody is struggling to regain control of the situation.

And you begin to congratulate yourself on your own escape. The apartment is a shambles, but wife and child are unhurt. You suffer through faint, but unspeakably sinister, aftershocks of the quake—more tremors, which, you know, are now working on buildings whose foundations are loosened.

My own office is partly obliterated by debris, and the rear wall of my newspaper plant is gone. But you're too numb to try and assess the damage immediately.

After seeing to my family, I got back down town, to the public safety building where police, fire department, and Civil Defense officials are directing emergency operations.

High-ranking officers of the military bases are here, and city councilmen, public works officials, and others drift in. By midnight you hear of only three confirmed dead, but you also hear, from an Army patrol, that some 50 to 100 houses in one residential area alone are destroyed.

DAMAGE WIDE-SPREAD

Tidal Waves Deal Fatal Coast Blows

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Spread damage down the West Coast of North America;

Caused city evacuations in Hawaii and Japan;

Overturned boats in the Gulf of Mexico.

Crescent City, Calif., 340 miles north of San Francisco on the Pacific Coast, appeared to be the hardest hit. The backwash of a creek fed by the tidal wave action rolled five-foot-high waves into the town. There was no warning.

Bodies of 10 who drowned were recovered. Three persons were missing. Fifty-nine were injured. All 150 downtown stores were damaged. Power lines short-circuited by the water touched off big gasoline plant fires.

At Beverly Beach State Park, near Depoe Bay, Ore., 80 miles southwest of Portland, Mr. and Mrs. Monte McKenzie and four children were camping out in sleeping bags. One child drowned, the other three are missing and feared washed out to sea.

At San Francisco's famed Fisherman's Wharf, the snug harbor where the little boats bring in the fish suddenly dropped four feet, and as abruptly rose that much.

"The water rose about six feet above normal all at once," said O. C. Boxton, night watchman at Faraway New Orleans' Industrial Canal on the Gulf of Mexico.

In many distant spots, fear of what might happen surpassed what actually did.

In Hawaii, where all major islands were washed by six tidal waves there was minor flooding only on Maui. But on the big island of Hawaii, hundreds fled the city of Hilo, remembering bygone death-dealing tidal waves. Similar evacuations took place at Kushiro, on Japan's Hokkaido Island, and in the Philippines.

Along the North American West Coast:

The Canadian pulp and logging center of Port Alberni on Vancouver Island was hard hit by water surging 40 miles through an inlet. The lobby of it's main hotel was flooded.

Policeman Describes Earthquake

By Patrolman Robert Clemens
As Told to UPI

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI)—I was in the police station when the quake struck shortly before six o'clock Friday night.

It started light, but then it began roaring.

We're in the downtown section, which got the worst of it. About a 15 to 20 block area of the business section was almost leveled. The city covers about 15 square miles.

It was shaking so bad, it felt like the building was going in.

We ran out of the building when it first started. Everybody got out because it started with only little shakes. Then it got worse.

The station got only a little bit damaged, so we went back in, after the really bad shocks stopped.

U.S. Military Flooded With Anxious Calls

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department, flooded by telephone calls from anxious relatives and friends of military men in the Alaskan quake zone, said Saturday night that the next of kin of any person killed or injured will be notified promptly.

A Pentagon statement said that "it is not necessary for the next of kind to send telegrams or make expensive long distance phone calls" to the Defense Department or the armed forces to ascertain the status of military personnel. Notification to relatives is being made by the "most expeditious means," the statement said.

Hundreds of phone calls and telegrams poured into the Pentagon throughout the day.

Up to late in the day, the Alaskan Command had reported only one military death and one serious injury in the quake area.

Quake Toll Very Heavy Over Years

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Earthquakes have taken a toll of hundreds of thousands of lives over the years.

Relatively, the United States has largely been spared.

The shock in Alaska one Friday night appears to have been the most severe in this country since 1906 when the San Francisco earth quake and resulting fire cost 452 lives.

The greatest quake toll of all time was a reported 830,000 deaths in China in 1556.

The last major quake prior to Alaska's took about 80 lives in Kashmir last Sept. 2. Six weeks previously 2,000 died in a quake at Skopje, Yugoslavia.

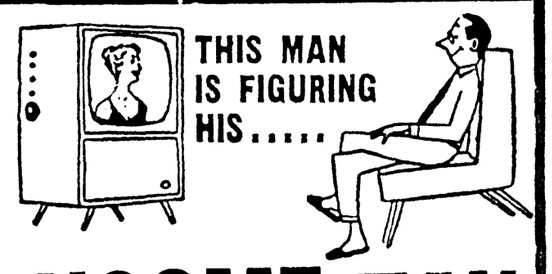

Other major quakes of the 20th Century and the reported dead:

Messina, Italy, 75,000 in 1908.
Avezzano, Italy, 29,970 in 1915.
Kansu, China, 70,000 in 1932.
Quetta, India, 60,000 in 1935.
Chile, 30,000 in 1939.
Erzingan, Turkey, 23,000 in 1939.
Agadir, Morocco, 12,000 in 1960.
Northwest Iran, 10,000 in 1962.

Firm To Observe 60th Anniversary

People's Homestead and Savings Association will celebrate its 60th Anniversary on Tuesday. The institution was founded on March 31, 1904 by local group of citizens whose avowed purpose was "to encourage habits of thrift by rewarding the practice of saving money with substantial earnings and to encourage home ownership by making credit available on a sound repayment plan."

The association's first building was located in the 300 block of DeSiard Street. In the late twenties they built at the present site of their Monroe office at the corner of DeSiard and Catalpa. A complete remodeling and modner of DeSiard and Catalpa. A complete remodeling and modernization program of this office was accomplished in 1955.

Salinger Gives Pledge Of Hard Primary Race

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pierre Salinger pledged Saturday to run a 5 a.m.-to-midnight campaign in what he concedes will be an uphill battle for the Democratic Senate nomination in California.

The pudgy former White House press secretary returned to a noisy capital welcome from a five-piece brass band of high school boys playing "California Here I Come."

His Virginia residence, where he is a registered voter, had stood as a possible bar to his hopes of bidding for the Democratic nomination for the Senate seat now held by Democrat Clair Engle.

Course In Civil Defense Slated Here By LSU

A Radiological Monitoring Course for Instructors is being offered here beginning Wednesday by the General Extension Division of Louisiana State University.

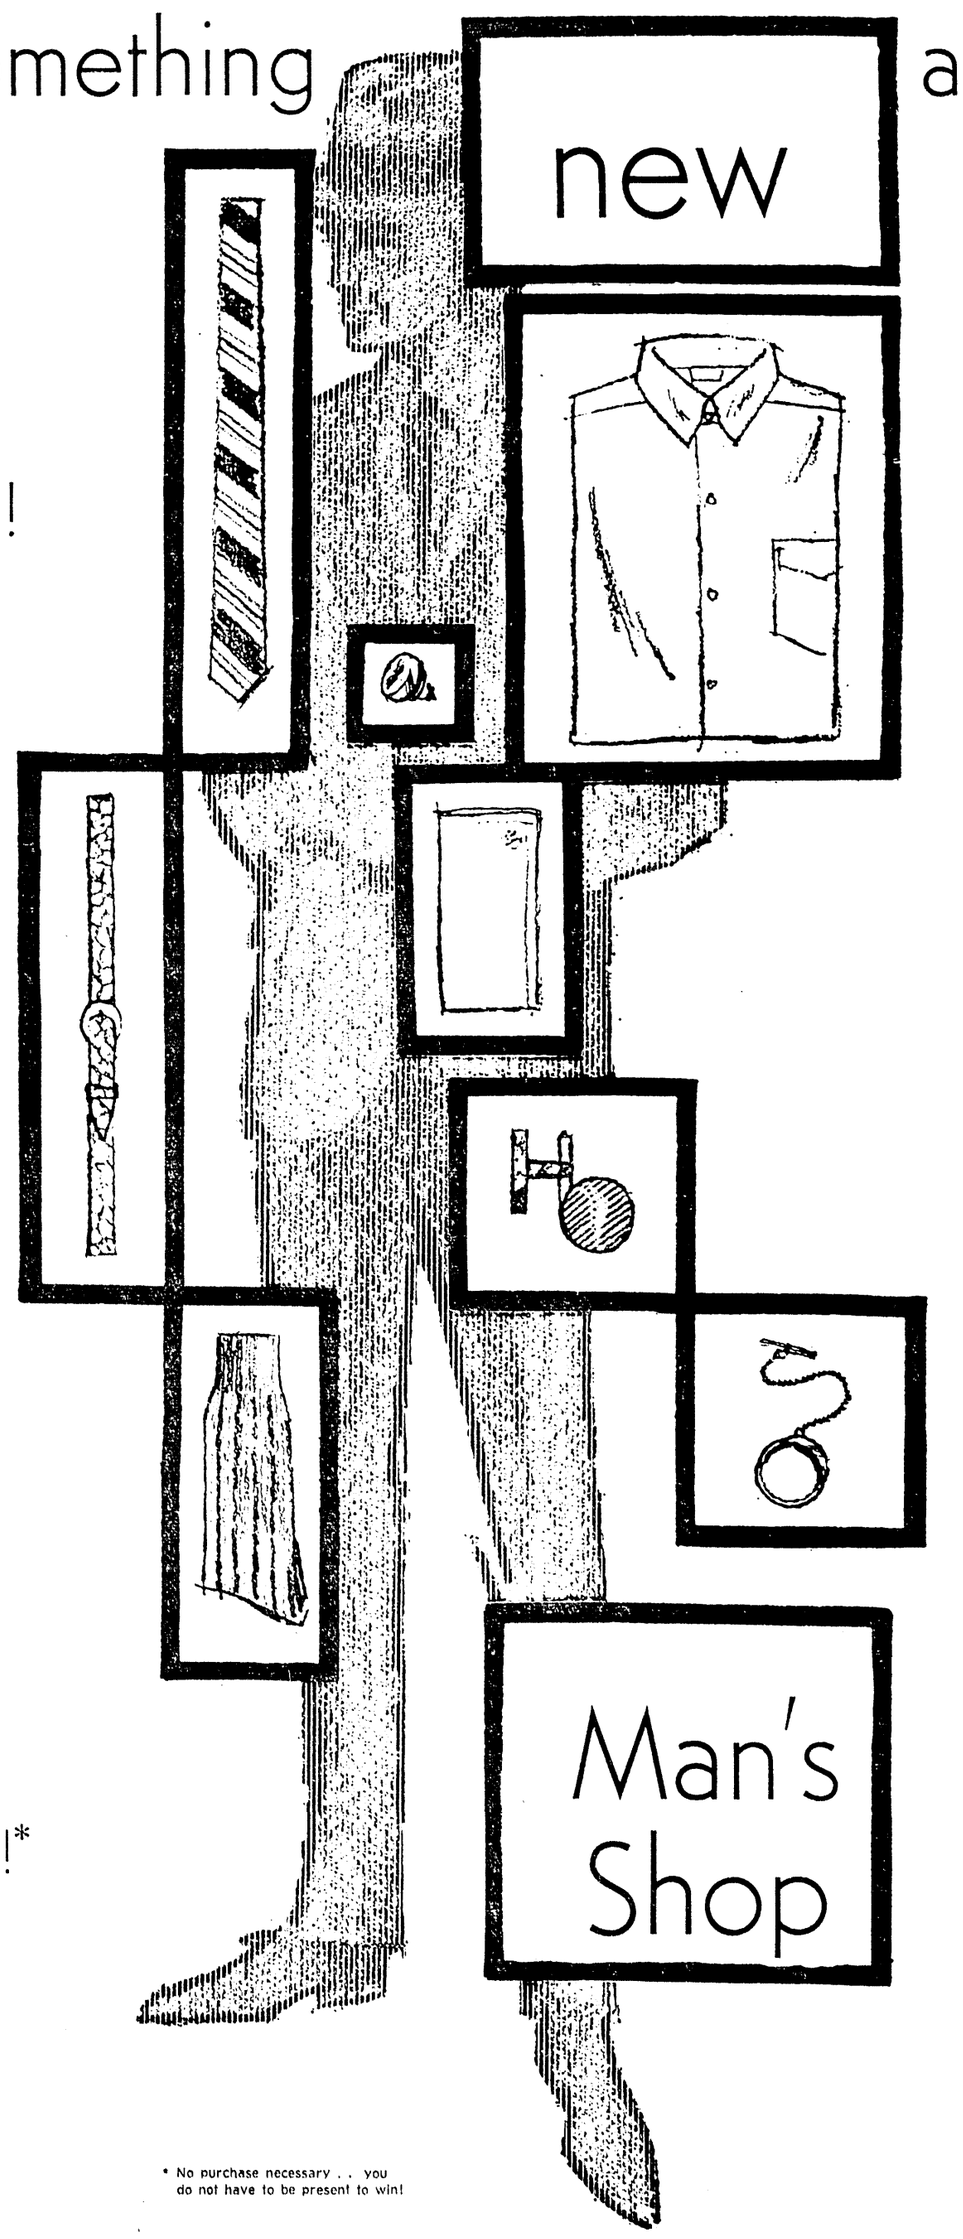

Paul C. Strohschein, associate for the LSU Civil Defense Instruction, said Saturday that classes in this course will be held every Wednesday through June 3 in the Old Ouachita Parish High School library from 6:30 - 10 p. m. He added that the purpose for offering such a course is to have qualified personnel to operate radiological monitoring kits in bomb shelters in case of an enemy attack. He added that each fallout shelter in Louisiana is equipped with such a kit but are useless without qualified personnel to operate them.

Salinger Gives Pledge Of Hard Primary Race

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pierre Salinger pledged Saturday to run a 5 a.m.-to-midnight campaign in what he concedes will be an uphill battle for the Democratic Senate nomination in California.

The pudgy former White House press secretary returned to a noisy capital welcome from a five-piece brass band of high school boys playing "California Here I Come."

His Virginia residence, where he is a registered voter, had stood as a possible bar to his hopes of bidding for the Democratic nomination for the Senate seat now held by Democrat Clair Engle.

Olin Driver Given Award By Red Cross

Lester C. Cox, an Olin Mathieson Forest Products Operations truck driver, was presented a Merit Award Saturday morning by the Ouachita Parish Red Cross Chapter in recognition of his aid to an accident victim in Mississippi.

The presentation was made to Cox by A. S. Huffman, Red Cross Safety Services chairman, at Olinkraft Cafeteria.

Cox was recognized for the aid he rendered near Woodville, Miss. to Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. Cauldwell of Oakland, III, after their car crashed on U. S. Highway 61. Acting on first aid training received as part of Olin's driver training program, Cox removed Mrs. Cauldwell's body from the smashed car and according to statements from a Mississippi surgeon, probably saved her life.

The surgeon, Dr. Robert H. Barnes of Natchez, wrote a letter to Olin following the surgery in which he said, "Nearly all of Mrs. Cauldwell's ribs were fractured. It was a miracle how Mr. Cox removed her from the car without a single lung puncture. Had Mr. Cox not removed her from the car when he did, she could not have survived."

M. H. Collet, vice president and manager of Forest Products Operations, congratulated Cox for his "resourcefulness and courage" and said that Cox "displayed exceptional bravery and quick thinking in a dangerous emergency situation. In a similar instance, many people would have simply passed by or would have hesitated to act."

"All this is part of our continuing training program to make all Olin drivers safety conscious," said Floyd Adams, Forest products transportation manager. Cox's first aid background came as a part of the safety training given to all Forest Products operations truck drivers.

'64 Corvair Monza Club Coupe (108-in. wheelbase)

'64 Corvette Sting Ray Sport Coupe (98-in. wheelbase)

Things have changed a lot since a Chevy was only a Chevy. Especially your ideas of what you want a Chevy to be.

So now you have the Jet-smooth Chevrolet—17½ feet of pure luxury, bumper to bumper. The size alone might make it a luxury car, even if nothing else did. And everything else does, but the price.

Or you can choose the thrifty Chevy II, a 15¼-foot family car with all kinds of passenger and luggage space—and three kinds of engines (4, 6 or extra-cost V8) to choose from, besides.

This year, your choice might be the new 16-foot-plus Chevelle, sized to fit nicely between Chevrolet and Chevy II (and between parking meters, with five whole feet left over), but with its own special looks and room.

Then, too, there's the sporty 15-foot Corvair, so right for so many people (you girls, in particular) that we've never touched an inch of it—except for things like bigger rear engines for '64. And finally, Corvette—still 14½ feet and still too much for any true sports-car lover to say no to.

The long and short of it is, you don't have to go to any length to find exactly the size and price and kind of car you want. Just see the five different lines of cars at your Chevrolet dealer's.

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) —Navy Lr. Cmdr. George E. LeBlanc sustained a dislocated hip when his Sky Hop Jet skidded off the flight deck of the Enterprise and plunged into the Mediterranean.

The plane's nose landing gear collapsed as LeBlanc landed aboard the carrier. A helicopter fished him from the sea within minutes.

A Navy spokesman at Norfolk said LeBlanc's condition was good. He is the son of George E. LeBlanc Sr., of Metairie, a New Orleans suburb. He now lives at Virginia Beach.

'64 Chevy II Nova Sport Coupe (110-in. wheelbase)

'64 Corvair Monza Club Coupe (108-in. wheelbase)

'64 Corvette Sting Ray Sport Coupe (98-in. wheelbase)

Things have changed a lot since a Chevy was only a Chevy. Especially your ideas of what you want a Chevy to be.

So now you have the Jet-smooth Chevrolet—17½ feet of pure luxury, bumper to bumper. The size alone might make it a luxury car, even if nothing else did. And everything else does, but the price.

Or you can choose the thrifty Chevy II, a 15¼-foot family car with all kinds of passenger and luggage space—and three kinds of engines (4, 6 or extra-cost V8) to choose from, besides.

This year, your choice might be the new 16-foot-plus Chevelle, sized to fit nicely between Chevrolet and Chevy II (and between parking meters, with five whole feet left over), but with its own special looks and room.

Then, too, there's the sporty 15-foot Corvair, so right for so many people (you girls, in particular) that we've never touched an inch of it—except for things like bigger rear engines for '64. And finally, Corvette—still 14½ feet and still too much for any true sports-car lover to say no to.

The long and short of it is, you don't have to go to any length to find exactly the size and price and kind of car you want. Just see the five different lines of cars at your Chevrolet dealer's.

By FRANCES FLANDERS,

This week we have a number of books of fiction, especially in the field of mystery and suspense. "The Big Runaround" by Darwin Tellhet is a superb tale of industrial espionage, which grips the reader's interest from the beginning to end. There are three new mystery stories and a number of reprints. The new ones are: "Shannon Terror" by Theodora DuBois, "The Crime of Colin Wise" by Michael Underwood and "The Faces of Danger" by Rufus King. The reprints are all works of Agatha Christie and will be eagerly read by her devoted following. The titles are "Cards On the Table"; "Death in the Clouds", "Taken at the Flood," "Murder on the Orient Express", "The Mysterious Mr. Quin" and "The Sittaford Mystery. Those who enjoy a good Western story will find two new titles to interest them. They are: "Wagons West" by Leslie Turner White and "The Bitter Iron" by Carter T. Young.

Students of government will welcome two new titles in this field. They are: "Modern Governments" by Harold Zink and "Ogg and Ray's Introduction to American Government" written by Frederic A. Ogg. "Mao Against Krushchev" by David Floyd is an excellent short history of the Sino-Soviet conflict. Carroll V. Glines is the author of "The Compact History of the United States Air Force", a book which will interest many young men. A book which fills a gap in our collections is "Cheerleading" by Newt Loken.

There are several new books in the field of education. "The Blight on the Ivy" by Richard B. Gordon discusses conditions in many of our colleges today. "When a Child is Different" by Dr. Maria Eng is devoted to the problems of the slow learning child. "Stretching Their Minds" by Benjamin Fine is a discussion of the work at the Sands Point Country Day School and Academy of Nassau County New York, where the education of gifted children has made remarkable strides. "The Guidance Nursery School" by Evelyn Pitcher is another of the fine Gessell Institute books for teachers and parents. "The March of Medicine" by H. S. Glasscheib is a very interesting study of the subject.

In the field of the fine arts there are several very fine new books. "A Catalog of the World's Most Popular Coins" by Fred Reinfeld is the latest book for coin collectors. "Festive Decoration the Year Round" by Dorothy Waugh is a useful and attractive book. "Folding Paper Toys" by Shari Lewis will be widely used by parents as well as teachers. "The Better Homes and Gardens Decorating Book" contains excellent ideas in the field of decoration, while musicians will certainly want to see the "George and Ira Gershwin Song Book."

There are two new books added to the literature collection. They are "Thoughts of Thoreau" edited by Edwin M. Teale and a book of poems by Cecil Day-Lewis, "Requim for the Living". Books about expeditions in search of long ago cultures are always popular. A new one in this field is "In Quest of the White God" by Pierre Honore.

Running the Scales

By JOHN CALE

The 1963-64 season of plays, concerts and other happenings behind the footlights is about to assume the status of those Easter eggs that didn't get found last week. If we don't take a look now for what's remaining, we might not know until it's too late. Sometimes we get a pretty bad feeling when a late-season attraction we really wanted to see gets past us. As for the eggs, they have their own way of announcing their ill feelings when overlooked for too long.

CLOSE LOOK

Locally, the Northeast Concerts series will close its season of guest attractions with the appearance of the Dallas Symphony at Neville auditorium Tuesday at 8:15 p.m. Monroe Pianist LeRoy Anspach will perform as guest soloist with the Dallas aggregation in the "Concerto No. 1 in E-Flat Major" by Franz Liszt. Donald Johanos, conductor of the group, has chosen the "Symphony No. 4" by Tchaikowsky for the post-intermissions portion of program.

To wind up the year, the Northeast series plans to include another concert by the Twin City Symphony at a date to be announced later.

The Little Theatre of Monroe will open the British light comedy, "Breath of Spring," somewhere around April 10. Please confirm this in today's "Curtain Call" column.

Louisiana Tech has remaining the Clebanoff Strings, a violin ensemble with a variety program, booked for Wednesday of this week, also duo-pianists Ferrante and Teicher, popular with many who attend the Tech concerts, will hold forth in the Memorial Gymnasium on April 20. The Tech series will also offer a bonus attraction to be announced.

FARTHER OUT

If you're so inclined, there's a Mozart opera playing over in Houston this week. The Houston Grand Opera Association will present "Don Giovanni" with Giorgio Tozzi of the Metropolitan Opera in the title role. Spiro Malas, basso, will take the part of Don Giovanni's servant and sidekick, Leoporello. Two performances are scheduled Thursday and Saturday — at the Houston Music Hall, with curtain time set for 8 p.m.

For ambitious young pianists, other instrumentalists and vocalists, the New Orleans Philharmonic - Symphony will hold auditions for elementary and high school performers on Saturday, April 11. Deadline for filing application is April 1, and requirements call for the preparation of "at least one movement" of a recognized concerto or an operatic aria. The Philharmonic - Symphony society is located at 605 Canal Street, New Orleans, La., 70130.

ART AND MORALS

The question of art and good works often gets under the cerebral skin of art writers and philosophers, and this is a good season of the year to venture into such probing of the spirit.

The problem, stated simply, is this: does the creation of a good piece of art require that the artist possess some measure of moral idealism?

We'd like to say yes. There's still enough of the crusading spirit in many of us to hold out the hope that Da Vinci was trying to leave us a sermon in his painting of the "Last Supper." Then there's Beethoven's pitch for clarity in the "Fifth Symphony," especially in the first movement. This moment of musical truth is so well put until it should serve as a model for journalists trying to screen out unnecessary words. Too bad it's in musical notation.

Back to the question: how could artists create such things if they had no moral fiber in their own souls? Well, they must have been faithful unto something, or they never would have finished their tasks. But, then, so were the unknown artisans who made the golden calf only to draw the wrath of that critic of old, Moses.

In that case, the position of morality versus art was clear cut. It's not always that way. Even now, some artists — and scientists, too — become so involved in the work they're doing until they come close to idol worship in the process. And who's to say they're not doing good work in many cases?

So the question remains unanswered. Art might be judged "good" by artistic standards only to be worked into a product that's downright unholy by moral standards. On the other hand, there is plenty of fine art in the world that rings true-blue right down the line from the shaper to the beholder.

The easy way out is to say art and morality follow different sets of standards. But we hate to leave it at that. Maybe the old black-face recording artists, Moran and Mack, the "Two Black Crows," had the answer. One, boasting of his experience on the stage of the Metropolitan Opera" and saying he was "the best man in the show," tooted an off-key phrase on the kazoo. Said the other, "Man, even if that was good, I wouldn't like it."

So we leave the issue for this time, tied in just such a philosophical knot.

Running the Scales

By JOHN CALE

The 1963-64 season of plays, concerts and other happenings behind the footlights is about to assume the status of those Easter eggs that didn't get found last week. If we don't take a look now for what's remaining, we might not know until it's too late. Sometimes we get a pretty bad feeling when a late-season attraction we really wanted to see gets past us. As for the eggs, they have their own way of announcing their ill feelings when overlooked for too long.

CLOSE LOOK

Locally, the Northeast Concerts series will close its season of guest attractions with the appearance of the Dallas Symphony at Neville auditorium Tuesday at 8:15 p.m. Monroe Pianist LeRoy Anspach will perform as guest soloist with the Dallas aggregation in the "Concerto No. 1 in E-Flat Major" by Franz Liszt. Donald Johanos, conductor of the group, has chosen the "Symphony No. 4" by Tchaikowsky for the post-intermissions portion of program.

To wind up the year, the Northeast series plans to include another concert by the Twin City Symphony at a date to be announced later.

The Little Theatre of Monroe will open the British light comedy, "Breath of Spring," somewhere around April 10. Please confirm this in today's "Curtain Call" column.

Louisiana Tech has remaining the Clebanoff Strings, a violin ensemble with a variety program, booked for Wednesday of this week, also duo-pianists Ferrante and Teicher, popular with many who attend the Tech concerts, will hold forth in the Memorial Gymnasium on April 20. The Tech series will also offer a bonus attraction to be announced.

FARTHER OUT

If you're so inclined, there's a Mozart opera playing over in Houston this week. The Houston Grand Opera Association will present "Don Giovanni" with Giorgio Tozzi of the Metropolitan Opera in the title role. Spiro Malas, basso, will take the part of Don Giovanni's servant and sidekick, Leoporello. Two performances are scheduled Thursday and Saturday — at the Houston Music Hall, with curtain time set for 8 p.m.

MAY VOTE PREDICTED

Rights May End In Compromises

WASHINGTON (AP) — What will be the outcome of the marathon civil rights debate in the Senate?

The most likely answer, based on experience and the candid views of many senators, is that a bill will pass but not until important compromises have been made.

The time is anybody's guess, but many senators expect the final vote in May.

The principal architect of the final version may well turn out to be Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., floor manager for the bill, says his side wants the House-passed version without change. So does President Johnson.

Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., the Southern leader, says his forces will fight to the bitter end to defeat any bill.

But many on both sides are willing to concede that amendments will be adopted, as usually is the case in the Senate, and that the best bet is that these changes will dilute the House bill.

Dirksen, who declares he wants a bill passed, supports much of the pending measure in line with an agreement he reached last year with President John F. Kennedy.

But he feels that major changes are needed in two sections — fair employment practices, which was not in the original Kennedy bill, and public accommodations.

The Senate starts debating the provisions of the bill itself Monday, with the proponents planning to take all week to lay down their case for the measure.

THEY FLY BY

ELIZABETHTOWN, Ky. (AP) — One Elizabethtown kindergarten teacher was using an oversized clock to show her students how to tell time.

"These are the hours," she said, "and these are the minutes and these are the seconds. Any questions?"

Orange Street Traffic Detour Starts Monday

A portion of Orange Street will be closed temporarily starting Monday for construction of an overpass over Interstate - 20 Highway, announced officials of the Monroe police department.

Major George Whitlow, head of the traffic division, said the portion of Orange Street between South Eighth Street and Milhaven Road will be the part affected.

"A detour route will be plainly marked in both directions to guide motorists," Major Whitlow added.

The detour will take drivers from the intersection of South Eighth and Orange, down South Eighth to Louise Anne, then from Louise Anne back onto Texas Avenue.

RFK Silent On Future Candidacy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy was represented by associates Saturday as doing what comes naturally by keeping his mind open and his mouth closed about the Democratic vice presidential nomination.

Kennedy has committed himself only to leaving the Cabinet after the November election. This was no new decision. He told this reporter two weeks before the assassination of his brother, President John F. Kennedy, that he intended to resign as attorney general after the election.

Then, as now, Kennedy said he had not made up his mind what he would do. He had not ruled out the possibility that he would remain as a presidential adviser. But it seemed to his interviewer he was leaning toward a temporary turn to nonofficial life that could lead to a future bid for office on his own.

Kennedy's relationship with his brother was one that could not possibly be duplicated with anyone outside his own family circle.

Kennedy recognizes that no such relationship would be possible with President Johnson. He seems to have meticulously avoided any intrusion into the decision-making process unless specifically asked for an opinion by Johnson.

The attorney general clearly goes along with the proposition that the President — and he alone—will choose his running mate at the convention in Atlantic City, N.J., next August.

Under these circumstances, Kennedy's course is to wait and see.

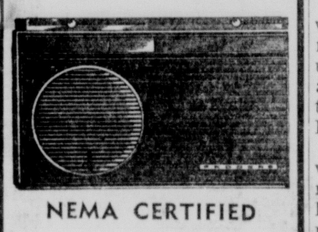

A more attractive alternative might direct Kennedy back to Massachusetts to practice law in preparation for a bid to become governor in his home state.

DEAD STICK LANDING

BELOIT, Wis. (AP) — A bronze plaque at the side of a highway on the eastern edge of Beloit now marks the site of a development in the history of aviation.

The marker is in the field where the late A. P. Warner, inventor and industrialist, took off and landed his Curtiss pusher biplane several times in November 1909. He experienced engine trouble on one flight and became one of the first aviators to manage a "dead stick" landing.

Warner sent a telegram to Glenn Curtiss telling him the plane was manageable with a dead engine.

NEW ENGLAND AND NORTHERN Appalachians can expect snow and snow flurries today as can upper Lakes region, upper Mississippi valley, central Plains and northern Rockies. Northern Pacific coast can expect occasional rain and showers. It will be colder in Lakes region and Ohio and Tennessee valleys, and warmer in southern and central Rockies. (AP Wirephoto)

25 Dead, Missing On West Coast

topping on streets was sheared off.

Streets and U.S. Highway 101 were clogged with debris, bushes and tree limbs.

Fear gripped the fleeing populace. One man, Oren Magruder, died of a heart attack.

There were reports of at least three cases of premature births at Seaside Hospital.

Two married couples were among the identified dead. They were Mr. and Mrs. Earl Edwards and Mr. and Mrs. William Clawson.

The force of the water was awesome. Houses were tossed out onto highways.

Cars were flipped about like straws. Some were piled on each other. Others were hurled into and under buildings.

Harley Forkner, Del Norte County road commissioner, said it would take at least four days to clear the roads.

At 5 p.m. as fog rolled in and shrouded the scene of tragedy, a curfew was declared. All persons were barred from the wrecked blocks.

William Parker, city and county director of Civil Defense, said some of the victims were trapped in waterfront restaurants and bars.

Seven others were reported flung into the bay from an overturned boat. Two bodies floated ashore and searchers grappled with hooks for others.

THEY NEEDED A COACH

LOUISVILLE (AP) — No one challenges Joe Kirchdorfer's claim that he introduced basketball at St. Xavier High School in 1911. He did it the hard way.

Kirchdorfer, a sophomore at the time, asked officials to adopt the game but was turned down.

He then collected some classmates and played an unofficial game with Louisville Male High.

pers knelt at the Tomb of Christ.

Protestants as well as Catholics attended Holy Saturday Mass in Jerusalem's Church of the Holy Sepulcher, where Pope Paul VI celebrated Mass last January.

Reflecting the good will stirred by the Pope's pilgrimage, the Rev. Benedict Stolz, prior of the Basilica of the Dormition in Jerusalem, said:

"We are celebrating Easter in the Holy Land this year with a feeling of renewed hope and optimism."

Bishop Reuben H. Mueller, president of the U. S. National Council of Churches, spending the weekend in West Berlin, Germany, said in an Easter message:

"Facing our problems today, as Christ's followers faced theirs in their day when the first Easter dawned, we, too, can find help in the living Christ no matter what our problems are."

Weather was a factor in the Easter observance.

The prediction for the traditional fashion parade on New York's Fifth Avenue was noncommittal—cloudy followed by clearing.

London reported the coldest Easter Saturday in five years, with no immediate prospect for warmer weather.

A cold and snowy holiday was in store for the few who celebrate Easter in Moscow, where the ground was covered by several inches of snow. The day will be observed there by Western diplomats and residents who attend the city's one Roman Catholic church.

Thousands of persons in Communist-ruled Poland turned out for Easter weekend church services while other thousands headed for a wekend in country resorts. Hundreds of young Poles planned to marry during Easter, considered the luckiest time of the year.

In Canada unseasonable cold gave residents the prospect of wearing fur hats and heavy coats instead of lighter, brighter Easter finery.

Probably the earliest Easter Sunday service in the world was planned for the Matson liner Mariposa steaming across the International Dateline in the Pacific.

Francis Cardinal Spellman will be the celebrant at Solemn Mass in St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York.

The Rt. Rev. Horace B. Donegan, bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of New York, will participate in a traditional ceremony before preaching at the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine.

tener or tumbled oevr a bluff into Cook Inlet.

Four died in debris of the new five-story J. C. Penney Building. Four more bodies were found in an area of coin-machine arcade buildings.

At Seward, 60 miles south of Anchorage, 3 were reported dead and 20 missing. At Valdez, 150 miles south, 3 were dead and 24 missing.

Fire destroyed the Valdez business district and the waterfront facilities at Seward, including Standard Oil and Texaco storage tanks, which sent flames towering hundreds of feet and lit the night sky.

First reports from Kodiak indicated much of the town was destroyed and 50 had been killed. But later, Adm. R. E. Riera, commander of the Alaska sea frontier with headquarters in Kodiak, said there had been no casualties.

The village of Kaguvak on the southern tip of Kodiak Island radioed 2 were missing and 60 were evacuated by fishing boats.

Another village on the same island, Old Harbor, said 60 to 70 were evacuated and about 160 were homeless on the beach. Both settlements were wiped out.

A fragmentary report from the village of Chenega in Prince William Sound south of Whittier said half the population was missing, but the number was not given.

The giant quake, which experts said possibly reached 8.7 on the Richter scale, the heaviest ever recorded, came at the homeward-bound rush hour in Anchorage in the gathering gloom of Good Friday.

Streets buckled, buildings collapsed, electric, gas and water lines snapped and yawning fissures opened in the pavement.

Survivors ran for their lives and most spent a harrowing night in dark, heatless homes. Scores joined police and military units searching through the wreckage for those possibly trapped but still alive.

About four inches of snow on the ground and temperatures from 5 to 10 degrees below freezing added to the misery.

Ward T. Sims, Associated Press correspondent in Juneau, said in his first dispatch from Anchorage that "several houses and apartments along L Street simply dropped down 16 to 20 feet into a chasm about 50 feet wide just as though they had purposely been built this way."

A program providing on-the-job training while attending high school is giving some students in Ouachita Parish a head start in preparing for careers in the business world.

By RICHARD TYLER
Staff Writer

"No experience, no job; no job, no experience."

So runs an old adage in succinct description of a situation facing many of today's young people as they enter the national labor market for the first time.

The saddest part about it is that it's true.

"Come back later, kid, when you've got some experience," says the businessman all too often to the bright-eyed young prospect, usually fresh out of school.

Rarely, if ever, does he suggest where the novice will get the experience he needs to snare and hold a non-professional job.

Forward-looking educators have concerned themselves with that problem for some time. About the only organized answer in the schools so far, however, is one currently generating a lot of comment — distributive education.

PROGRAM BASIS

Available for high school juniors and seniors in a two-year program or only for seniors if the individual student prefers one year's work, DE, as it's called, entails on-the-job training in the distribution fields.

In addition to the usual subjects required for graduation (English, history, math, the academics), the young people spend an hour each day studying courses related to distribution — salesmanship principles, merchandise information, display advertising, business principles and management.

This, in substance, is the idea at present, and educators are agreed generally on its importance.

FLUID, GROWING

By recent reckoning, jobs in the distribution fields account for something like 40 per cent of the employment opportunities in today's economic picture. The figure, as well, is fluid and growing as, more and more, improved technology shrinks the number of workers engaged in agriculture, relocating them, for the most part, in manufacturing and distribution.

And, even in the face of unemployment totalling more than five million, trained people are hard to find.

DE is a significant reflection of the school's recognition of that fact. Devel opments foreshadow an even sharper response to the problem.

A recently-enacted federal law, for example, provides for six years of business education — two prior to the junior and senior high school years currently available and two following them, in a junior or senior college or university.

MAJOR ADDITIONS

According to local officials, the result will be major, but yet unspecified additions to the present parish program.

If longevity is a criterion, distributive education has been a success in the Ouachita Parish school system.

It gave birth in 1938 to a fledgling program at Ouachita Parish High School, now full grown after 26 years and guided by H. E. Ruppert. Prior to 1945, it was called "diversified occupations."

Lloyd Puckitt's West Monroe High School program originated with the school in 1953.

Actually, distributive education stems from a federal act of 1936; the Ouachita Parish program was among the first in the state.

Louisiana became generally active in 1940 when Donovan Armstrong, now with the U. S. Office of Education, came to the state as supervisor of Diversified Occupations. He and Louisiana Education Supt. John Cox thrashed out early problems with then-parish-Supt. T. O. Brown.

PARTICIPANTS

The two program coordinators are experienced in the field. A veteran of three years service at Lafayette, Puckitt is in the 11th year at OPHS. Ruppert, meantime, is half-way through his 19th year in DE, the ninth in Louisiana and Ouachita Parish.

Together, the local programs, numbered among 28 such courses in 23 Louisiana high schools, have trained approximately 1,150 students.

"High school credit is given for both the related class work and the job training laboratory," Ruppert explains. "Distributive education students have one or two years' experience upon graduation and are ready to step into the business world full-time."

Types of businesses in the program are varied, but limited to retail, wholesale and service establishments — men's and women's shops, department stores, variety stores, retail and wholesale grocery firms, hardware, office supply, shoe stores, feed and seed stores, flower shops, jewelry, furniture, drug stores and numerous other distributive businesses.

PURPOSEFUL PLACES

Students take purposeful places on the sales forces, in the stock rooms, in the display or credit departments.

Both Ruppert and Puckitt attribute success in large measure to the cooperation of local business firms, which become in a very real sense the proving ground of future employees.

"The program serves a very useful purpose in the schools and community," declares J. A. Mullis, president of the Eastgate Merchants' Association.

"We have found the students to be very good employees, enthusiastic and energetic," he says. "They fill in well during busy parts of the day and during peak seasons.

"Many of the DE students whom I have had the pleasure of working with have become successful business leaders in the occupations they chose as their vocations.

"They were able to advance more rapidly," Mullis feels, "because of their on-the-job training during their school years."

TRAINING RECOMMENDED

Fred Beckett, past president of the Greater Monroe Downtown Association, concurs in stating, "We have been using DE students for many years.

"They have been found to be honest, intelligent and sincere workers and are an excellent source of regular full-time employees."

Local educators seem to think of DE in the light of integral values.

Parish Supt. Milton C. Hall calls it "an important part of our total education program.

"The field of retail selling is a growing field in Ouachita Parish," he adds. "We think it is our duty to help train competent people for this field and we think this program goes far toward doing that."

S. T. Howell, principal at Ouachita Parish High School, says DE is a vital part of the curriculum and cites plans "to expand the program to meet the growing needs of our students.

AWARDS, HONORS

"The outstanding success of the program is attested to by the many awards and honors won by our DE students," Howell reports.

"Not only do they receive valuable training in sales and related fields, these students also excell in leadership qualities, community service projects and loyalty and support of their school.

His remarks are grounded in hard facts. His school's club walked away at an early March conference with the title, "Outstanding DE Club in Louisiana." It will compete at a national conference in Chicago, Ill., April 30-May 2.

As a unit, OPHS has been a top contender for primary honors since 1959 and earned the oustanding club award earlier in 1961.

At West Monroe High School, Principal S. R. Braley says, "I would not be without the DE program in my school.

PRACTICAL PLAN

"It offers a practical plan for the schools to cooperate with business and industry in training students under actual working conditions.

"It offers the student a natural method of choosing an occupation and through the organized training the student is able to make more rapid advancement."

The feelings of the youth who are availing themselves of the program are reflected in comments by two young officials of the Ouachita organization.

Harry Moore, club president, expresses confidence that "DE" has prepared me with a basic understanding of merchandising, stock control, sales promotion and credit which is of vital importance to my future in distribution."

The treasurer, Pat Thomas, suggesting that "all students should seriously consider DE as a part of their curriculum," avers that the program "has much to offer to America's youth.

OPPORTUNITY

"It teaches more than the usual material found in textbooks, for it offers the opportunity to apply textbook knowledge to practical situations."

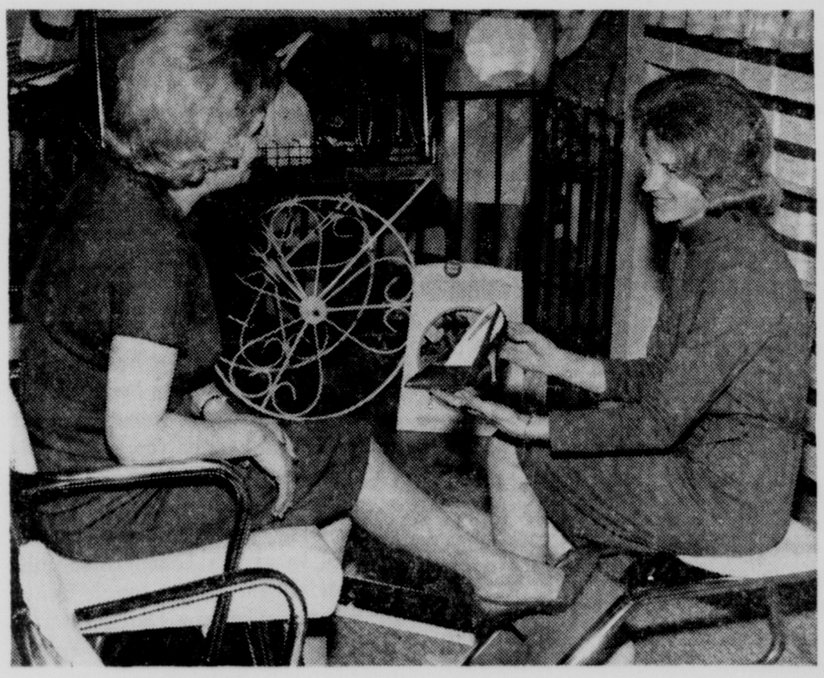

Since DE students follow a busy schedule each day with no study halls, no physical education classes and little opportunity to participate in extracurricular activities, the club is a popular organization.

Nationally, the DE Club dates from 1938. Since that time, 48 of the 50 states have acquired a club program, with thousands of affiliated chapters on the community level.

Local activities have included: social and recreational functions, an annual employer appreciation banquet, assistance to the Goodfellows Christmas fund, Heart Drive, March of Dimes and United Givers' Fund, donations to the national DE scholarship fund, lettering stadium seats, contributions of school equipment, promotion of drives for school improvement, field trips, appearances before civic and trade groups, assembly programs, radio and television programs.

Money to finance their projects is earned through dances, pageants, talent shows, everything, in fact, up to and including donkey basketball games.

A program providing on-the-job training while attending high school is giving some students in Ouachita Parish a head start in preparing for careers in the business world.

"No experience, no job; no job, no experience."

So runs an old adage in succinct description of a situation facing many of today's young people as they enter the national labor market for the first time.

The saddest part about it is that it's true.

"Come back later, kid, when you've got some experience," says the businessman all too often to the bright-eyed young prospect, usually fresh out of school.

Rarely, if ever, does he suggest where the novice will get the experience he needs to snare and hold a non-professional job.

Forward-looking educators have concerned themselves with that problem for some time. About the only organized answer in the schools so far, however, is one currently generating a lot of comment — distributive education.

PROGRAM BASIS

Available for high school juniors and seniors in a two-year program or only for seniors if the individual student prefers one year's work, DE, as it's called, entails on-the-job training in the distribution fields.

In addition to the usual subjects required for graduation (English, history, math, the academics), the young people spend an hour each day studying courses related to distribution — salesmanship principles, merchandise information, display advertising, business principles and management.

This, in substance, is the idea at present, and educators are agreed generally on its importance.

FLUID, GROWING

By recent reckoning, jobs in the distribution fields account for something like 40 per cent of the employment opportunities in today's economic picture. The figure, as well, is fluid and growing as, more and more, improved technology shrinks the number of workers engaged in agriculture, relocating them, for the most part, in manufacturing and distribution.

And, even in the face of unemployment totalling more than five million, trained people are hard to find.

DE is a significant reflection of the school's recognition of that fact. Devel opments foreshadow an even sharper response to the problem.

A recently-enacted federal law, for example, provides for six years of business education — two prior to the junior and senior high school years currently available and two following them, in a junior or senior college or university.

MAJOR ADDITIONS

According to local officials, the result will be major, but yet unspecified additions to the present parish program.

If longevity is a criterion, distributive education has been a success in the Ouachita Parish school system.

It gave birth in 1938 to a fledgling program at Ouachita Parish High School, now full grown after 26 years and guided by H. E. Ruppert. Prior to 1945, it was called "diversified occupations."

Lloyd Puckitt's West Monroe High School program originated with the school in 1953.

Actually, distributive education stems from a federal act of 1936; the Ouachita Parish program was among the first in the state.

Louisiana became generally active in 1940 when Donovan Armstrong, now with the U. S. Office of Education, came to the state as supervisor of Diversified Occupations. He and Louisiana Education Supt. John Cox thrashed out early problems with then-parish-Supt. T. O. Brown.

PARTICIPANTS

The two program coordinators are experienced in the field. A veteran of three years service at Lafayette, Puckitt is in the 11th year at OPHS. Ruppert, meantime, is half-way through his 19th year in DE, the ninth in Louisiana and Ouachita Parish.

Together, the local programs, numbered among 28 such courses in 23 Louisiana high schools, have trained approximately 1,150 students.

"High school credit is given for both the related class work and the job training laboratory," Ruppert explains. "Distributive education students have one or two years' experience upon graduation and are ready to step into the business world full-time."

Primary System Needs 'Expert Study'

Proposals to eliminate Louisiana's present political primary system and substitute a "general primary" embracing all parties, with a runoff (where necessary) between the two top candidates regardless of party would — in its practical effects — outlaw the two party-system in this state and could tend to eliminate parties entirely. It is a system existing in no state in the nation and approached in some of its basic principles only in Russia and other Communist nations.

It is encouraging to find, however, that some of those suggesting change in our primary system also recognize the need for careful deliberation, including Governor-Elect John J. McKeithen and Secretary of State Wade Martin. There should be no haste in changing practices which have been imbedded in both our Constitution and our statutes for many decades. Nor is there any need for haste. Nearly four years remain before we again face statewide primaries or a general election for state administration offices.

The two party system is the political election structure of the nation and has been since the first few years of the Republic when the evils of no parties, or one party, and selection of the top candidate through a figurative federal grab bag contest, became so apparent. It is also the Louisiana system, by law and by Constitution, although its full benefits have not in the past been brought into being.

Governor-Elect McKeithen is on understandable ground in objecting to application of the state's election system in a manner to force a candidate to go through two long, tiring, hot party primaries and then face another arduous general election, as he had to do to gain final victory.

But the answer to that is to establish a real two-party system, not to bar it or set up roadblocks.

In two-party states, parties determine their own candidates through their own methods — under statutory and constitutional guidelines. This may be through a primary — but only one primary to a party — or through a statewide convention, or otherwise, as legally determined by each party.

While the two - party system tends to develop two broad opposing philosophies of government, one of its fundamental values is as a watchdog, between elections, over the party in power. Only through two parties can there be permanent, organized, continuing political organization always on the alert, not merely to oppose but to expose what it finds to be wrong — to expose to the public and thus encourage the public to action.

That is what is needed not only in Louisiana but in all states. Its value has been proven over and over again in many states. Nearly always, exposures of incompetence, dishonesty or other skullduggery in government — federal or state or municipal—have come, or at least come more quickly — through the fact of a permanent political watchdog in the form of a minority party. Thus the two-party system tends not only toward prevention of political evil by the party in power, but toward discouraging political evil.

Several political phrases are being tossed around in current discussion of Louisiana's election system in a manner that easily could deceive the people. One is "general primary", or "open primary". A general or open primary with party designations of candidates, and a following general election between the winner in each party, could result in considerable saving of money, make voting easier generally, consolidate the period of campaigning, and do away with the "three campaign system" to which Mr. McKeithen, Secretary of State Martin and others — including Republicans — have objected.

It could encourage a minority philosophy of government and encourage democratic procedure in government. It could create a permanent watchdog.

Republicans in Louisiana have, in fact, advocated a general or open primary to choose party candidates throughout the past dozen or so years, during which a two-party system has functioned in Louisiana for presidential elections. But their advocacy is not an open or general primary in a manner to hamstring or hamper the dual party method of political elections.

But a general primary in which candidates of all parties run, but which does not permit a following general election between candidates of different parties, simply is an effort to ban the two-party system. If the ban is successful, then we would be moving toward the Russian system.

Proposals for elimination of party primaries, as proposed by some, or of changing the procedural structure of primaries to hamstring any one party, as proposed by others, not only are quite different from each other but are in no way related to the question of how many slates of electors are on presidential ballots and how they get there.

The elector situation will be before us next fall.

But it will be four years before party primaries come up again in statewide manner for elections for state offices.

There is no need for haste in the latter question simply because, recently, Democrats (mostly) cast about 290,000 votes for a Republican candidate for governor in Louisiana: or because Democrats in Mississippi used the Republican symbol to give a Democratic gubernatorial candidate a tough fight; or because Alabama Democrats almost elected a Republican candidate for U.S. Senator.

The best thing for the incoming Louisiana state, administration to do is to launch a searching study of this whole party primary problem by an independent group which would come back to a later Legislature with its recommendations. Such a study should be by especially qualified personnel — not by party politicians whose thoughts would be on the effect of their own political welfare; and not by those who obviously seek change chiefly to ban a second party.

The Public Affairs Research Council, the Louisiana Bar Association or the Louisiana Law Institute, the Council for a Better Louisiana, L.S.U., Tulane and the other public and private colleges and universities of the state all could assist.

The last thing in the world to do in approaching the primary problem is to ram through the incoming Legislature some radical change when there is no emergency and no need for haste.

Disapproves Johnson

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

Senator Russell Long had the courage of Daniel to publicly excoriate the U. S. Supreme Court as intellectually dishonest. In view of developments since Dallas, I am wondering if Russell might not have broadened his scope to include the sole beneficiary of the unspeakable tragedy of Dallas.

Is the beneficiary of Dallas guilty or not guilty of base falsehood when, not long before Dallas, he was heard with great crescendo to make pretty preachments denouncing civil rights in order to enhance his candidacy for the U. S. Senate but, come Dallas, astounds the Nation in a turn-coat about-face to embosom the cause of civil rights, lock, stock and barrel?

If the beneficiary of Dallas has tossed a double-cross to the whites of America, as appears patent, what assurances do the blacks have of immunity? "Off agin, on agin, gone agin, Finnigin".

At least John F. Kennedy was intellectually honest in civil rights. We knew where he stood. But Johnson? Christ had his Judas, Caesar his Brutus while we have our Johnson.

W. M. Harper.

Long's Explanation

Washington, D. C.

To the Editor:

Immediately prior to the general election, I made the statement that Democrats who participated in the Democratic primary had a moral obligation to vote for the winner of that primary contest. As might be expected, this statement caused some people to take issue with me. A few even castigated me severely for expressing such a view. One individual, in particular, took it upon himself to write many newspapers in the State and had the identical letter printed in numerous "Letters to the Editor" columns.

The fact is that the Louisiana Revised Statute, Title 18, Section 317, requires that all primary election ballots contain the following written pledge: "By casting this ballot, I pledge myself to abide by the result of this primary election and to aid and support all the nominees thereof in the ensuing general election." I am informed that this same pledge appears on the voting machines in the primary elections, although, like most other voters, I have never looked for it when I voted. Nevertheless, it is my understanding that the history and tradition of the Democratic primary election was such that a person assumed this moral commitment when he cast his ballot in a primary election. This pledge is binding only on the conscience, but that should be enough to persuade most people.

I do not criticize anyone who is totally ignorant of the fact that a party pledge is both required by law and printed on the voting machine. If a person did not know that he had agreed to abide by the result of an election in which he participated, then he could hardly be blamed for his ignorance. This would not be true, however, of a person who had knowledge of the fact that the condition of his participation in an election was that he would support the successful candidate in the general election.

The Republican nominee, Mr. Charlton Lyons, responded to my statement by saying that the logic of my utterance would require a person to vote for the Democratic nominees for President. I do not agree with him on that matter. Quite the contrary, you will note that the party pledge which appears on the voting machines refers only to those nominees whose names were on the voting machine in the primary election in which the voter participated. The only chance that those in Louisiana have to vote for or against a President of the United States is in the general election. Inasmuch as the voters have no opportunity to express themselves in the selection of the party nominee, they have no obligation whatever to vote for him in the general election.

I trust you understand that my statement in this regard was not necessarily an endorsement of any particular candidate. It was merely the recognition that I, like others who participated in any party primary, was aware of my moral obligation.

Why Panama Fuss?

Kansas, Ill.

To the Editor:

Why all the fuss about Panama's claim to the Panama Canal? We didn't rent the Canal Zone, we BOUGHT it. It is part of the United States of America, despite the subtle, slow change in our own State Department stand on this matter. We bought the Panama Canal Zone in 1903 from the newly formed Republic of Panama for the sum of 10 million dollars plus a guaranteed annuity of 250 thousand dollars.

If we dicker around and renegotiate because some Communist agitators have been successful in stirring up trouble, won't we be establishing a fearful precedent? Will there ever be an end to it if we do set the precedent?

How about Alaska? We bought Alaska — will Russia demand it back? Why should we renegotiate the one and not the other?

How about Florida? Will we renegotiate with Spain?

How about our Southwest? Will we renegotiate returning it to Mexico?

How about the Midwest and Great Plains? It seems to me that we bought a piece of land extending all the way from the Gulf of Mexico to Canada called the "Louisiana Purchase." Maybe France will want it back.

Let's stop all this foolishness; let's be firm. The Panama Canal Zone is part of the United States of America. It is not a subject for negotiation.

Civil Rights Dread

Forest, La.

I have written to the president of our country in protest of the civil rights bill.

Needless to say, it has received no results, same as the others before it.

Our government officials have through the past, seemed determined to harass the south in any available way. They say we discriminate against the Negro; however the south has been discriminated against since the Civil War, by some who were ignorant of the true facts and some who were prejudiced against the south because of the Civil War.

I am not against the Negro because of race; but I am against the integration of the white and Negro race. I also believe the government is using the present situation so as to gain more power. A famous communist once said to this effect: "The capitalists will be glad to turn themselves over to communism. I believe this is happening.

When I see a place of business I like to think how it was accomplished, through freedom. Then the civil rights bill reminds me of harsh restrictions that might be passed, and for that reason this business establishment might be destroyed and others like it prevented.

The organizations that have pressured our government this far, if succeeding, will take other measures in the process of the destruction of our democracy. Mysterious it is, but our government has turned on the people who built it. Our ancestors built this country and the democratic system of government, and I believe it is our civic duty to preserve this democracy. It is now threatened.

Some of our congressmen and our president doubtless are prejudiced against the cause of segregation. But I feel that one should be the master of one's own convictions, not let the convictions be the master of one.

If this bill does pass, the south will be shown no justice. The attorney general of the United States will have the right to appoint committees to investigate any sign of racial discrimination in schools or privately owned business establishments. If evidence is found, federal troops will be used to enforce the civil rights law. Regardless of ownership, the businessman will be compelled to integrate or close his establishment. It also seems that the federal government gives us no credit for paying taxes that support our schools, so they will force their integration. This law is a step toward socialism. Other steps will also be taken. It is time to stop them now. If not, when will the steps end?

With our present attorney general and our present administration, the south will be treated without mercy. They will blindly see their beliefs, ignoring those of the people of the south.

Confused In World

New Orleans, La.

To the Editor:

Not since the Pilgrims came over on the old sailing ship, the Lyndon B. J., once known as the Mayflower, and landed on Johnson Rock, formerly called the Plymouth Rock, has there been so much confusion in the world generally, and so much indifference on the part of the people of the United States in particular. The terrible truth is that the American peoples' indifference has produced the mass confusion in the rest of the world.

Between the Canadian border on the north and Molotov Bay on the south, formerly known as the Gulf of Mexico; and between the Sea of Khrushchev, once called the Atlantic Ocean, on the west, there are one hundred million adult Americans indifferent as to what is going on in the rest of the world. Yet they go to the polls every two and four years like robots and vote, not for the good of their country, but for sop-peddling politicians, whose specialty it is, as public officials, stick-the nose of our government into the affairs of other nations of the world.

The indifference of the American voters generally is reflected in the one hundred forty-eight billion, four hundred fifty-six million, three hundred thirty-three thousand dollars that these sop-peddlers whom we sent to Washington poured down the rat holes of foreign nations between July 1, 1946, and June 30, 1963. Since it is ONLY the peoples' money, why not indeed, treat it like so much confetti and rush to give it away as if it were going out of style at sundown tomorrow?

We certainly do hope that LBJ never suffers another heart attack. However, our greatest concern at the moment is that he will recover from the frostbite which could be brought on by his cold feet every time he is called on to face up to the "Cuban Cockroach" and "Mighty Mouth" Khrushchev.

Strong France Seen

Chatham, La.

To the Editor:

Our president, Mr. Johnson, is now calling on the leaders and pastors of Southern Baptists to help pass the so-called civil rights bill, and I will almost promise you that he will get some strong support from that source. You see, it is only the ignorant and the uneducated like myself who don't know any better than to tell lies and speak half-truths about the so-called doctorine of Liberty, Equality, and Fraternity. Pease note that I used little letters in spelling civil rights, because I cannot believe that it is even a half truth.

I really wish you would quit bragging on Mr. Johnson, because I really believe you will have to take back every good thing you say about him, for I believe and do predict that he will turn out to be the worst president this country has ever had and will ever have. In fact, I predict that Mr. Lyndon Johnson will be the last president this country will ever have, if he is elected this next time in our presidential election. The very fact that he would call on all leaders of Southern Baptist proves to me that he doesn't have a very high regard for them and puts them in a class with himself, may God have mercy and help us. I am a Southern Baptist myself, but I am not a Protestant, except to protest this unGodly bill that the president wants passed so bad.

Doesn't it seem to you and others that this nation is now paying and is going to pay in large amounts for some of the sins it has committed as a nation and that most of our prayers and worship services are like the offerings of Israel of old. They stink before the throne of grace. Some cry how good we are being to the world and how much we spend for the poor and how easy it would be for us to whip the world if we wanted to, but we must love and be very liberal. Well it so happens that our resources and energies and some of our best brains are being used to build a new organization that will not only capture the world, but will bring this nation into slavery. After the so-called United Nations asks us to leave and take our marbles and go home we will use the rest of our wealth to build a new organiaztion that will make the present one look cheap. Then you will hear many speeches saying this New United States of Europe and Asia is the world Savior and then men will be arrested for even teaching the equaltiy of men. Oh yeah, it's coming and we are the suckers who shall make it possible.

One of the great world powers in the last days will be France, yes France, and after she has become a larger power than she ever was then she will deny the doctoring of Liberty, Equality, Fraternity and point out to the world that this doctrine was born in one of the darkest hours of France's history. It will be shown how the Bible, God's Revelation of Laws and regulation, had to be denounced and a copy tied to the tail of an ass and driven from the city of Paris, while a nude prostitute representing, the goddess Reason entered the city amidst great rejoicings and she was enthroned upon the high altra in the cathedral of Notre Dame. This New Doctorine Reason, that, all men are Equal, are Brothers, and should be free make France a hell and gave birth to Red Republicism and they passed it on to us and we have fallen for it and now we too shall become a Hell.

Johnson's Record

Kelly, La.

To the Editor:

On March 6, 1964, a compilation was issued by the Americans for Constitutional Action which showed that on the 90 roll call votes in the senate the A. C. A. interprets as having a significant bearing on the integrity of the constitution, Johnson got only a 10 per cent conservative rating.

During the same period he had the following ratings on the A. C. A.'s subsidiary indices:

For sound money and fiscal integrity and against inflation, 8 per cent.

For a free market economy and against government price-fixing and controls, 5 per cent.

For private ownership of production and distribution and competition with private industry, 0 per cent.

For individual rights and representation against coercion and regimentation by the government, 0 per cent.

For strengthening our national sovereignty and against surrendering control of our foreign or domestic affairs, 8 per cent.

While he was in the house, Americans for Democratic Action gave him a liberal rating of 88 per cent for 1947-48. His cumulative house and senate A.D.A. score for 1947-60 is 62 per cent.

The late President Kennedy had a conservative rating of 11 per cent, one per cent more than the current president.

He will have to do more than turn off a few lights in the white house to change his liberal record.

Socialist Says Goals Attained

FAMOUS PREVIOUS perennial Presidential candidate of the Socialist party, Norman Thomas, states that most of the original goals of his party have been achieved. It's an interesting 1964 observation in our free enterprise nation.

Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz (quite separately) has said: "One of every eight factory workers is employed on government work and in the last fiscal year more than one-third of all professional and technical workers were likewise employed."

The Atomic Energy Commission reports itself as being the nation's largest consumer of coal — a thousand carloads a day — and of electricity and water. One plant alone (Savannah River, Ga.) takes more electricity daily than Philadelphia and more water than the entire state of Delaware. Machine tools? The AEC owns and uses more than General Motors, Ford and Chrysler combined. Meanwhile, the U.S. Army is the nation's biggest buyer of lumber, cloth, shoes and shirts. And the Air Force's past three years of purchases exceed the total assets of the Pennsylvania Railroad, U.S. Steel and the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, worldwide.

IN FACT, ON January 24 the Defense Department reported the estimated value of its property and equipment at $171 billion as of last July 1. Its total holdings are going up at a rate of more than $6 billion a year.

Sometime ago there was not a single transaction in certain grades of cotton on the New York Exchange because the government was not active. In fact, industry is utterly lost behind the size of the government in our commodity markets. This activity has piled up $5.5 billion in agricultural commodities alone, but that's only about one-third of the inventory.

Other government agencies are stockpiling 94 different kinds of materials and are the biggest buyers in many cases. Maximum quantities are supposed to be fixed for 76 of these. But 61 of them are stockpiled in excess of their maximums. The result is another $9 billion switch of the people's earnings into everything from helium to doorknobs and chicken feathers.

THE POST OFFICE Department's vehicles exceed the car registrations of seven states. It's the largest handler of materials in the world. If regulated, taxpaying A. T. & T. can make good profits you'd think the government's giant, untaxed communications business could at least break even. But despite a 25 per cent price increase for regular postage, it still wallows in the red while the Defense Department, in turn, alone absorbs more income than the entire before-taxes of all corporations in the country.

Statistically, if a figure were to pinpoint the dividing line into socialism, I suppose it would be when a government receives more than the owners from the proceeds of their property.

Primary System Needs 'Expert Study'

Proposals to eliminate Louisiana's present political primary system and substitute a "general primary" embracing all parties, with a runoff (where necessary) between the two top candidates regardless of party would — in its practical effects — outlaw the two party-system in this state and could tend to eliminate parties entirely. It is a system existing in no state in the nation and approached in some of its basic principles only in Russia and other Communist nations.

It is encouraging to find, however, that some of those suggesting change in our primary system also recognize the need for careful deliberation, including Governor-Elect John J. McKeithen and Secretary of State Wade Martin. There should be no haste in changing practices which have been imbedded in both our Constitution and our statutes for many decades. Nor is there any need for haste. Nearly four years remain before we again face statewide primaries or a general election for state administration offices.

The two party system is the political election structure of the nation and has been since the first few years of the Republic when the evils of no parties, or one party, and selection of the top candidate through a figurative federal grab bag contest, became so apparent. It is also the Louisiana system, by law and by Constitution, although its full benefits have not in the past been brought into being.

Governor-Elect McKeithen is on understandable ground in objecting to application of the state's election system in a manner to force a candidate to go through two long, tiring, hot party primaries and then face another arduous general election, as he had to do to gain final victory.

But the answer to that is to establish a real two-party system, not to bar it or set up roadblocks.

In two-party states, parties determine their own candidates through their own methods — under statutory and constitutional guidelines. This may be through a primary — but only one primary to a party — or through a statewide convention, or otherwise, as legally determined by each party.

While the two - party system tends to develop two broad opposing philosophies of government, one of its fundamental values is as a watchdog, between elections, over the party in power. Only through two parties can there be permanent, organized, continuing political organization always on the alert, not merely to oppose but to expose what it finds to be wrong — to expose to the public and thus encourage the public to action.

That is what is needed not only in Louisiana but in all states. Its value has been proven over and over again in many states. Nearly always, exposures of incompetence, dishonesty or other skullduggery in government — federal or state or municipal—have come, or at least come more quickly — through the fact of a permanent political watchdog in the form of a minority party. Thus the two-party system tends not only toward prevention of political evil by the party in power, but toward discouraging political evil.

Several political phrases are being tossed around in current discussion of Louisiana's election system in a manner that easily could deceive the people. One is "general primary", or "open primary". A general or open primary with party designations of candidates, and a following general election between the winner in each party, could result in considerable saving of money, make voting easier generally, consolidate the period of campaigning, and do away with the "three campaign system" to which Mr. McKeithen, Secretary of State Martin and others — including Republicans — have objected.

It could encourage a minority philosophy of government and encourage democratic procedure in government. It could create a permanent watchdog.

Republicans in Louisiana have, in fact, advocated a general or open primary to choose party candidates throughout the past dozen or so years, during which a two-party system has functioned in Louisiana for presidential elections. But their advocacy is not an open or general primary in a manner to hamstring or hamper the dual party method of political elections.

But a general primary in which candidates of all parties run, but which does not permit a following general election between candidates of different parties, simply is an effort to ban the two-party system. If the ban is successful, then we would be moving toward the Russian system.

Proposals for elimination of party primaries, as proposed by some, or of changing the procedural structure of primaries to hamstring any one party, as proposed by others, not only are quite different from each other but are in no way related to the question of how many slates of electors are on presidential ballots and how they get there.

The elector situation will be before us next fall.

But it will be four years before party primaries come up again in statewide manner for elections for state offices.

There is no need for haste in the latter question simply because, recently, Democrats (mostly) cast about 290,000 votes for a Republican candidate for governor in Louisiana; or because Democrats in Mississippi used the Republican symbol to give a Democratic gubernatorial candidate a tough fight; or because Alabama Democrats almost elected a Republican candidate for U.S. Senator.

The best thing for the incoming Louisiana state, administration to do is to launch a searching study of this whole party primary problem by an independent group which would come back to a later Legislature with its recommendations. Such a study should be by especially qualified personnel — not by party politicians whose thoughts would be on the effect of their own political welfare; and not by those who obviously seek change chiefly to ban a second party.

The Public Affairs Research Council, the Louisiana Bar Association or the Louisiana Law Institute, the Council for a Better Louisiana, L.S.U., Tulane and the other public and private colleges and universities of the state all could assist.

The last thing in the world to do in approaching the primary problem is to ram through the incoming Legislature some radical change when there is no emergency and no need for haste.

Views Of Our Readers

Disapproves Johnson

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

Senator Russell Long had the courage of Daniel to publicly excoriate the U. S. Supreme Court as intellectually dishonest. In view of developments since Dallas, I am wondering if Russell might not have broadened his scope to include the sole beneficiary of the unspeakable tragedy of Dallas.

Is the beneficiary of Dallas guilty or not guilty of base falsehood when, not long before Dallas, he was heard with great crescendo to make pretty preachments denouncing civil rights in order to enhance his candidacy for the U. S. Senate but, come Dallas, astounds the Nation in a turn-coat about-face to embosom the cause of civil rights, lock, stock and barrel?

If the beneficiary of Dallas has tossed a double-cross to the whites of America, as appears patent, what assurances do the blacks have of immunity? "Off agin, on agin, gone agin, Finnigin".

At least John F. Kennedy was intellectually honest in civil rights. We knew where he stood. But Johnson? Christ had his Judas, Caesar his Brutus while we have our Johnson.

W. M. Harper.

Long's Explanation

Washington, D. C.

To the Editor:

Immediately prior to the general election, I made the statement that Democrats who participated in the Democratic primary had a moral obligation to vote for the winner of that primary contest. As might be expected, this statement caused some people to take issue with me. A few even castigated me severely for expressing such a view. One individual, in particular, took it upon himself to write many newspapers in the State and had the identical letter printed in numerous "Letters to the Editor" columns.

The fact is that the Louisiana Revised Statute, Title 18, Section 317, requires that all primary election ballots contain the following written pledge: "By casting this ballot, I pledge myself to abide by the result of this primary election and to aid and support all the nominees thereof in the ensuing general election." I am informed that this same pledge appears on the voting machines in the primary elections, although, like most other voters, I have never looked for it when I voted. Nevertheless, it is my understanding that the history and tradition of the Democratic primary election was such that a person assumed this moral commitment when he cast his ballot in a primary election. This pledge is binding only on the conscience, but that should be enough to persuade most people.

I do not criticize anyone who is totally ignorant of the fact that a party pledge is both required by law and printed on the voting machine. If a person did not know that he had agreed to abide by the result of an election in which he participated, then he could hardly be blamed for his ignorance. This would not be true, however, of a person who had knowledge of the fact that the condition of his participation in an election was that he would support the successful candidate in the general election.

The Republican nominee, Mr. Charlton Lyons, responded to my statement by saying that the logic of my utterance would require a person to vote for the Democratic nominees for President. I do not agree with him on that matter. Quite the contrary, you will note that the party pledge which appears on the voting machines refers only to those nominees whose names were on the voting machine in the primary election in which the voter participated. The only chance that those in Louisiana have to vote for or against a President of the United States is in the general election. Inasmuch as the voters have no opportunity to express themselves in the selection of the party nominee, they have no obligation whatever to vote for him in the general election.

I trust you understand that my statement in this regard was not necessarily an endorsement of any particular candidate. It was merely the recognition that I, like others who participated in any party primary, was aware of my moral obligation.

Why Panama Fuss?

Kansas, Ill.

To the Editor:

Why all the fuss about Panama's claim to the Panama Canal? We didn't rent the Canal Zone, we BOUGHT it. It is part of the United States of America, despite the subtle, slow change in our own State Department stand on this matter. We bought the Panama Canal Zone in 1903 from the newly formed Republic of Panama for the sum of 10 million dollars plus a guaranteed annuity of 250 thousand dollars.

If we dicker around and renegotiate because some Communist agitators have been successful in stirring up trouble, won't we be establishing a fearful precedent? Will there ever be an end to it if we do set the precedent?

How about Alaska? We bought Alaska — will Russia demand it back? Why should we renegotiate the one and not the other?

How about Florida? Will we renegotiate with Spain?

How about our Southwest? Will we renegotiate returning it to Mexico?

How about the Midwest and Great Plains? It seems to me that we bought a piece of land extending all the way from the Gulf of Mexico to Canada called the "Louisiana Purchase." Maybe France will want it back.

Let's stop all this foolishness; let's be firm. The Panama Canal Zone is part of the United States of America. It is not a subject for negotiation.

Civil Rights Dread

Forest, La.

I have written to the president of our country in protest of the civil rights bill.

Needless to say, it has received no results, same as the others before it.

Our government officials have through the past, seemed determined to harass the south in any available way. They say we discriminate against the Negro; however the south has been discriminated against since the Civil War, by some who were ignorant of the true facts and some who were prejudiced against the south because of the Civil War.

I am not against the Negro because of race; but I am against the integration of the white and Negro race. I also believe the government is using the present situation so as to gain more power. A famous communist once said to this effect: "The capitalists will be glad to turn themselves over to communism. I believe this is happening.

When I see a place of business I like to think how it was accomplished, through freedom. Then the civil rights bill reminds me of harsh restrictions that might be passed, and for that reason this business establishment might be destroyed and others like it prevented.

The organizations that have pressured our government this far, if succeeding, will take other measures in the process of the destruction of our democracy. Mysterious it is, but our government has turned on the people who built it. Our ancestors built this country and the democratic system of government, and I believe it is our civic duty to preserve this democracy. It is now threatened.

Some of our congressmen and our president doubtless are prejudiced against the cause of segregation. But I feel that one should be the master of one's own convictions, not let the convictions be the master of one.

If this bill does pass, the south will be shown no justice. The attorney general of the United States will have the right to appoint committees to investigate any sign of racial discrimination in schools or privately owned business establishments. If evidence is found, federal troops will be used to enforce the civil rights law. Regardless of ownership, the businessman will be compelled to integrate or close his establishment. It also seems that the federal government gives us no credit for paying taxes that support our schools, so they will force their integration. This law is a step toward socialism. Other steps will also be taken. It is time to stop them now. If not, when will the steps end?

With our present attorney general and our present administration, the south will be treated without mercy. They will blindly see their beliefs, ignoring those of the people of the south.

Confused In World

New Orleans, La.

To the Editor:

Not since the Pilgrims came over on the old sailing ship, the Lyndon B. J., once known as the Mayflower, and landed on Johnson Rock, formerly called the Plymouth Rock, has there been so much confusion in the world generally, and so much indifference on the part of the people of the United States in particular. The terrible truth is that the American peoples' indifference has produced the mass confusion in the rest of the world.

Between the Canadian border on the north and Molotov Bay on the south, formerly known as the Gulf of Mexico; and between the Sea of Khrushchev, once called the Atlantic Ocean, on the west, there are one hundred million adult Americans indifferent as to what is going on in the rest of the world. Yet they go to the polls every two and four years like robots and vote, not for the good of their country, but for sop-peddling politicians, whose specialty it is, as public officials, stick-the nose of our government into the affairs of other nations of the world.

The indifference of the American voters generally is reflected in the one hundred forty-eight billion, four hundred fifty-six million, three hundred thirty-three thousand dollars that these sop-peddlers whom we sent to Washington poured down the rat holes of foreign nations between July 1, 1946, and June 30, 1963. Since it is ONLY the peoples' money, why not indeed, treat it like so much confetti and rush to give it away as if it were going out of style at sundown tomorrow?

We certainly do hope that LBJ never suffers another heart attack. However, our greatest concern at the moment is that he will recover from the frostbite which could be brought on by his cold feet every time he is called on to face up to the "Cuban Cockroach" and "Mighty Mouth" Khrushchev.

Strong France Seen

Chatham, La.

To the Editor:

Our president, Mr. Johnson, is now calling on the leaders and pastors of Southern Baptists to help pass the so-called civil rights bill, and I will almost promise you that he will get some strong support from that source. You see, it is only the ignorant and the uneducated like myself who don't know any better than to tell lies and speak half-truths about the so-called doctorine of Liberty, Equality, and Fraternity. Pease note that I used little letters in spelling civil rights, because I cannot believe that it is even a half truth.

I really wish you would quit bragging on Mr. Johnson, because I really believe you will have to take back every good thing you say about him, for I believe and do predict that he will turn out to be the worst president this country has ever had and will ever have. In fact, I predict that Mr. Lyndon Johnson will be the last president this country will ever have, if he is elected this next time in our presidential election. The very fact that he would call on all leaders of Southern Baptist proves to me that he doesn't have a very high regard for them and puts them in a class with himself, may God have mercy and help us. I am a Southern Baptist myself, but I am not a Protestant, except to protest this unGodly bill that the president wants passed so bad.

Doesn't it seem to you and others that this nation is now paying and is going to pay in large amounts for some of the sins it has committed as a nation and that most of our prayers and worship services are like the offerings of Israel of old. They stink before the throne of grace. Some cry how good we are being to the world and how much we spend for the poor and how easy it would be for us to whip the world if we wanted to, but we must love and be very liberal. Well it so happens that our resources and energies and some of our best brains are being used to build a new organization that will not only capture the world, but will bring this nation into slavery. After the so-called United Nations asks us to leave and take our marbles and go home we will use the rest of our wealth to build a new organiaztion that will make the present one look cheap. Then you will hear many speeches saying this New United States of Europe and Asia is the world Savior and then men will be arrested for even teaching the equaltiy of men. Oh yeah, it's coming and we are the suckers who shall make it possible.

One of the great world powers in the last days will be France, yes France, and after she has become a larger power than she ever was then she will deny the doctoring of Liberty, Equality, Fraternity and point out to the world that this doctrine was born in one of the darkest hours of France's history. The Week In Focus

From The Inside

A NEW THEORY has been advanced as to why the pay raise bill failed to gain approval in the House. The more recent report from the inside said it was because of the dislike that Southern Democrats held for the Supreme Court. Because of this, the southerners would have no truck with the large increases called for in Supreme Court salaries. However, the bill may not be dead. The Senate may yet give the House a chance to reconsider by accepting Senator Mike Monroney's proposal which would limit the Congressional pay increases to $7,000 instead of $10,000. It would then become effective next New Year's Day after the 1964 elections. .

ANOTHER COMMUNIST victory seems in the making in Latin America. Experts feel chances are at least even that Chile will be ruled by Communists before long. In a little-noted congressional by election the leftist coalition Popular Action Front gained a victory and with it, heavy momentum for the Presidential election scheduled September 24. The Communist victory shattered the ruling Democratic Front. Its coalition candidate, Senator Julio Duran, withdrew from the presidential race and the three coalition parties each said it would go its own way. Eduardo Frei, head of the Christian Democratic Party is the only remaining contender against the Communist-run leftist coalition and its candidate, Salvador Allende. At the moment, Frie is given no better than a 50-50 chance of beating the communist . . . .

PRESIDENT Johnson's so-called pared-down, "honest foreign aid proposal," may have been a strategic mistake for him. The program is in so much trouble in Congress that possibly as much as $1 billion will be cut from it. If Johnson had followed the time-honored custom of asking for at least $1 billion more than he really wanted, he would have ended up with more than he now will . . .

THE RECENT arrival in Spain of Cuba's ambassador to Moscow has added fuel to rumors that Russia and Spain will soon renew diplomatic relations. Ambassador Carlos Olivares Sanchez claims, however, his Iberian trip is "for an eye treatment," the same reason given by former Katanga leader Moise Tshombe while he was setting up "return to the Congo" offices in Spain . . . .

WASHINGTON, it is reported, is convinced that it is useless to talk about the Panama Canal treaty until after Panamanian presidential elections this May. The issue is now too deeply involved in Panama's politics to permit any clear-headed discussion. Meanwhile, President Roberto F. Chiari has thrown the thorny problem back to the Organization of American States. Panama wants a review of the 1903 Canal Zone treaty. The U.S. so far has refused as long as there is a diplomatic break between the two nations . . . .

DESPITE CHARGES to the contrary, reports of flying saucers may have forced the timing of President Johnson's announcement of the top-secret, supersonic A-11. Expert observers, including FAA radar trackers, who had been picking up blips of fast moving Unidentified Flying Objects from tests of the A-11, were told repeatedly to erase the observations from their reports.

AT A FINAL recital of avant-garde piano music given by Karl Erik Welin at Stockholm's Modern Museum, he played the last discord and then as an encore set about demolishing the piano. He used dynamite, a sledge hammer and an electric saw for the job. While working on the last leg, he gashed his own with the saw and ended up in a hospital for an operation to save his leg . . . .

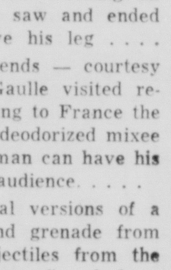

FRENCHMEN may have even more friends — courtesy of Mexico, where President Charles de Gaulle visited recently. Mexico, it seems, has begun exporting to France the answer to "garlic bad breath": completely deodorized mixee peppers and garlic. With these, the Frenchman can have his garlic and talk freely without losing his audience. . . . .

THE U. S. Army is now testing several versions of a hand-held weapon designed to hurl a hand grenade from one barrel and discharge needle-like projectiles from the other. The projectiles, called "flechette" are finned darts with a tendency to tumble upon impact and enter the flesh sideways or end over end. Asked about treating "fleshette wounds," an Army medical man was quoted by Army Times as saying, "It's a job for Graves Registration" . . .

THAT MECCA of students tourists—Washington, D.C.—reported last year many student tour cancellations. Cause—widespread publicity over the city's high crime rate. In the first two months of this year, major crime in the District is running one-third higher than last year. For those who are going to the nation's capital, the D.C. police department has some words of caution: Travel in large groups; keep away from dark areas—particularly Capitol Hill, which has one of the city's worst crime rates; lock the car when driving at night. Say police lung power is still the best defense weapon. A real loud scream will usually drive most attackers away . . . .

Lodge and South Viet Nam

Reliable sources say Henry Cabot Lodge will resign his job within the next 30 days as ambassador to South Viet Nam. However, pressure for his resignation is not coming from President Johnson, who sees Lodge in Saigon as the perfect way to keep South Vietnam out of the U.S. politics. It is Lodge's advisors in his drive for the GOP nomination who are telling him that he must return to the U. S. to conduct his campaign in person.

LODGE

Most believe the major factor in his resignation will be Major General Nguyen Khanh, head of the Vietnam government, who is convinced that a man who might be the Republican nominee this year cannot have close relations with Johnson. The fact that Johnson sent Defense Secretary Robert McNamara to get a first-hand report on South Vietnam has reinforced Khanh's opinion that the president no longer gets such reports from Lodge.

Meanwhile, two victorious Vietnamese strikes that have left more than 30 guerrillas dead around the Mekong River delta of Dong My have raised U.S. hopes that the tide may be turning against the Communist.

In Washington, McNamara said that direct military action against Communist North Viet Nam could only be supplemtary to the main antiguerrilla war in Viet Nam. But he did not rule out the possibility of such attacks. He admitted it had been given careful consideration.

THE FIVE-MONTH-OLD investigation into the financial transactions of former Senate Aide Robert G. Baker by the Democratic-Controlled Senate Rules Committee is all but officially ended. At a public hearing Wednesday, a staff accountant-investigator, Edward T. Hugler, testified that he had found only minor errors in Baker's tax returns since 1959. Earlier, the committee had turned thumbs down on a return engagement for the witness who brought President Johnson's name into the Baker investigation. "Immaterial and irrelevant" was the committee's pronouncement on a new affidavit by insurance man Don B. Reynolds, who had told earlier hearings that he gave Johnson a $595 stereo set while selling him two $100,000 life insurance policies. Baker was a one-time protege of the president . . . Meanwhile, Republicans charged "whitewash." . .

FOREIGN AID administrator David E. Bell told Congress the past week he will cut 1,200 employes from his agency's payroll over the next two years. Most of them, he said, will be in the upper echelons. Said Bell: "I've waited a long time for this authority and I'm prepared to take the heat." After his testimony, Bell said that the idea was not so much to save on salaries, though that is a consideration, but to improve the quality of the top aid personnel responsible for the effective handling of billions of dollars a year for undeveloped countries. . .

PRESIDENT JOHNSON came up with a new statement the past week on why the U.S. moves slowly in disputes with other nations. He said our nation was too strong to be goaded into rash wars on the long road toward peace. His goal, he said, is that every boy in American may grow to manhood loving his country—instead of dying for it. "We, the most powerful nation in the world can afford to be patient." Johnson has been under sharp criticism in the manner in which he has handled many hot foreign issues. . .

ALONG THE SAME line, but on a different pitch, Senator J. W. Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, gave out with a lot of words the past week. Among other things, he called for a prompt revision of the Panama Canal treaty and the acceptance of Communist Cuba. In a Senate speech, the Arkansas Democrat urged abandonment of the American boycott of Cuba "because it has failed" and ruled out two other alternatives — invasion and blockade — because of the dangers of nuclear war. On the Panama dispute, he said "it seems to me entirely proper and necessary for the U.S. to take the initiative in proposing new arrangements that would redress some of Panama's grievances." Panama has been demanding the U.S. agree to negotiate treaty revisions before it will restore diplomatic relations severed after riots in the Canal Zone last January. In effect, Fulbright told President Johnson to stop playing to the gallery in his handling of foreign affairs, and charged the administration is yielding to the "malady of chronic and excessive caution." One thing was noticeable, however, Fulbright didn't offer any new solutions to the problems.

JOHNSON

MEANWHILE Republican National Chairman, William E. Miller, charged Fulbright with promoting appeasement. And in the House Rep. Melvin R. Laird of Wisconsin gave a cynical and quick response to Fulbright. He said Fulbright's talk was a trial balloon launched with the blessing, support and probably at the instigation of the Johnson administration. . .

SURPRISED? Fidel Castro won a major victory in the U.S. Supreme Court the past week. It ruled 8-1 that U.S. courts are without power to pass on his expropriation of property in Cuba owned by Americans. What the ruling said was simply that U.S. courts are wrong in ruling that seizure of property in Cuba belonging to Americans was in violation of international law.

SECRETARY of State Dean Rusk has denied he called Senators Wayne Morse and Ernest Gruening of Alaska quitters for differing with him on U.S. foreign policiy. ON THE CIVIL rights front, The Senate has cleared the way for the main battle of 1964 by refusing to send the explosive measure to the Judiciary Committee for 10 days. The committee vote came a few hours after a 67-17 decision to take up the bill, a motion which had been debated for 15 days, with southern foes of the legislation, doing most of the talking. The showdown came on a motion by Majority Leader Mike Mansfield to table or kill a motion by Sen. Wayne Morse to send the bill to the Southern-dominated Judiciary Committee. Debate is expected to start on the mail bill Monday. Both Senators Barry Goldwater and GOP Leader Everett M. Dirksen supported Morse. Goldwater called the bill revolutionary "with one of the most sweeping grants of authority that we have ever contemplated delegating to the executive establishment. He called parts of the bill a federal power grab .. . .

IN FLORIDA, a leading cancer researcher says new animal experiments suggest the possibility of developing pills to help protect cigarette smokers from the "indisputable" hazards of lung and other cancer. Dr. Charles Huggins of the University of Chicago reported that any one of about 60 aromatic hydrocarbon drugs, if administered to rats, provide protection in 60 per cent of cases against a cigarette smoke chemical which otherwise invariably produces breast cancer in female rates. He indicated that if this was true of breast cancer, it would be true of lung cancer. . .

CAMBODIA—The nation that doesn't want U.S. help — and South Viet Nam have postponed indefinitely the start of their border talks because of the "profound and sad emotions" produced in Cambodians by a Vietnamese attack on a border village. Prince Nordom Sihanouk was reported to have called off the talks with Saigon actually because he believes Communist North Viet Nam eventually will triumph in South Viet Nam. . .

SOVIET RUSSIA and Red China tossed words and threats at each other again. Russia denounced Communist China as a racist power and charged Peking with trying to divide the world to expand its dominaiton. The attack came during a stormy session of the 6th Afro-Asian Solidarity Council meeting at Algiers. Eastern European diplomatic sources in Paris said indications were that a break between Moscow and Peking may be near. They reported a Romanian delegation which visited both Communist capitals returned home with the conviction that a break is inevitable and may come shortly. According to these sources, the Romanians were told in Peking that China now considers itself the leader of world communism and regards the Russians as deviationists." Later in the week, the Chinese delivered two blunt warning to Premier Khrushchev that a complete break between Moscow and Peking may be near . . .

Greece's Glory

By JIM BECKER

ATHENS (AP)—A few weeks ago, at Olympia where the ancient Olympic Games were held, a Greek workman probed carefully in the mud with a trowel and struck a solid chunk of marble.

He lifted it out, brushed the clay away, and handed it to Dr. Henry Bartells.

Bartells hefted the piece of stone in his hand, and said: "now we have the foot of Hippodamia." He was right.

The piece of marble was the left foot of the huge statue of Hippodamia, a girl whose father lost the world's first fixed chariot race. The statue once stood in the pediment of the mighty temple of Zeus at Olympia. It's in the museum now.

Missing

The right foot still is missing.

Another archeologist may find it some day, or it may be lost forever, smashed by vandals or carried off by the river.

Finders have the satisfaction of having put another piece into place in the giant jigsaw puzzle of ancient Greece, where a great civilization burst into flower nearly 2,500 years ago, and set the pattern of Western life for all time.

Anyone who has thrilled at the thought of standing on the exact spot where Socrates taught, or Julius Ceasar fought, or St. Paul preached will understand why the hunt goes on.

Archeologists have found all these places, often by going to the spots where the old writers said they were, and digging.

The Germans have been working at Olympia since 1875. They have uncovered the ancient stadium and temples, and have found the house where Nero lived when he visited the games. (He declared himself the winner, in advance).

Hippodamia's foot was nearby.

The Americans have explored the ancient market place of Athens, and the foundation of the house where Socrates stood and passed the time of day.

At Corinth, another American team located the bench where St. Paul sat while waiting his turn to address the pleasure-loving Corinthians, the toughest audience in Greece.

Americans also located the stadium where Androcles was spared by the lion in return for an old favor. He had pulled a thorn from the lion's paw years before, or so the old story goes.

Elsewhere, the Greek government and French, Swedish and British teams also are working steadily at piecing together the picture of ancient Greece.

Every year, these archeologists find more people looking over their shoulders. Tourism is again one of Greece's major industries — as it was some 2,000 years ago.

In those days, people from all over the Roman Empire visited Greece, which had already attained the status of a vast museum.

Then Rome fell, and Greece went back to sleep. Athens shrank to a village of perhaps 5,000 people.

Travelers began to trickle back again in the 18th century to inspect the mutilated remains. They found a Turkish harem on the Acropolis in Athens.

The Parthenon, which had been converted into a church and then a mosque, had been blown apart by a Venetian general in 1687. He lobbed a cannon ball into it from the harbor and hit the gunpowder that the Turks had stored inside.

Lord Elgin came in 1804 and carried off the frieze that encircled the wrecked Parthenon. It's in the British Museum now.

Even as he worked to pack up the statues, Turks a few yards away were happily chopping up marble columns and burning them to make cement.

The Greeks would like to have the frieze back, but most of them admit that if Lord Elgin hadn't taken it away it might have gone into the furnace, too.

The idea of digging for Greek remains got a big boost in 1873, when a German millionaire named Heinrich Schliemann rediscovered ancient Troy.

He located it by studying the Poems of Homer, which many thought were myths, and following their directions. Schliemann dug 25 feet into a mound of dirt, and there was the Trojan city.

Later, he uncovered the ancient Greek civilization at Mycenae, old a thousand years before the Parthenon was built.

At both places, Schliemann found solid gold treasures; which was perhaps unfortunate since it set amateurs to work with pick and shovel all over Greece. More things were wrecked than were found.

Some of the first archeologists were a little clumsy, too, while they were learning their trade. But those days are gone.

At active digs, such as the ones at Olympia or Corinth, the scientists carefully stake out square plots about 20 feet on a side. They leave a core of earth, which begins to look like a wine bottle cork, as the digging progresses.

The core reveals the various dates, through its layers of soil that are like the rings of a tree.

Greek workmen, who have been at it all their lives, do the actual digging. They turn up the dirt with trowels and pack it into boxes.

"YOU HAVE TO be a bit of a fanatic" to spend your life digging into ruins of past civilizations, says Charles Williams. He stands among columns of the Temple of Apollo in Corinth, dating to the 6th century B.C. and one of the oldest in Greece. Williams, an American archeologist, is one of the diggers of the American School of Classical Studies. Archeologists from several countries are trying to re-create Greek life through their findings. From The Inside

A NEW THEORY has been advanced as to why the pay raise bill failed to gain approval in the House. The more recent report from the inside said it was because of the dislike that Southern Democrats held for the Supreme Court. Because of this, the southerners would have no truck with the large increases called for in Supreme Court salaries. However, the bill may not be dead. The Senate may yet give the House a chance to reconsider by accepting Senator Mike Monroney's proposal which would limit the Congressional pay increases to $7,000 instead of $10,000. It would then become effective next New Year's Day after the 1964 elections. .

ANOTHER COMMUNIST victory seems in the making in Latin America. Experts feel chances are at least even that Chile will be ruled by Communists before long. In a little-noted congressional by election the leftist coalition Popular Action Front gained a victory and with it, heavy momentum for the Presidential election scheduled September 24. The Communist victory shattered the ruling Democratic Front. Its coalition candidate, Senator Julio Duran, withdrew from the presidential race and the three coalition parties each said it would go its own way. Eduardo Frei, head of the Christian Democratic Party is the only remaining contender against the Communist-run leftist coalition and its candidate, Salvador Allende. At the moment, Frie is given no better than a 50-50 chance of beating the communist . . . .

PRESIDENT Johnson's so-called pared-down, "honest foreign aid proposal," may have been a strategic mistake for him. The program is in so much trouble in Congress that possibly as much as $1 billion will be cut from it. If Johnson had followed the time-honored custom of asking for at least $1 billion more than he really wanted, he would have ended up with more than he now will . . .

THE RECENT arrival in Spain of Cuba's ambassador to Moscow has added fuel to rumors that Russia and Spain will soon renew diplomatic relations. Ambassador Carlos Olivares Sanchez claims, however, his Iberian trip is "for an eye treatment," the same reason given by former Katanga leader Moise Tshombe while he was setting up "return to the Congo" offices in Spain . . . .

WASHINGTON, it is reported, is convinced that it is useless to talk about the Panama Canal treaty until after Panamanian presidential elections this May. The issue is now too deeply involved in Panama's politics to permit any clear-headed discussion. Meanwhile, President Roberto F. Chiari has thrown the thorny problem back to the Organization of American States. Panama wants a review of the 1903 Canal Zone treaty. The U.S. so far has refused as long as there is a diplomatic break between the two nations . . . .

DESPITE CHARGES to the contrary, reports of flying saucers may have forced the timing of President Johnson's announcement of the top-secret, supersonic A-11. Expert observers, including FAA radar trackers, who had been picking up blips of fast moving Unidentified Flying Objects from tests of the A-11, were told repeatedly to erase the observations from their reports.

AT A FINAL recital of avant-garde piano music given by Karl Erik Welin at Stockholm's Modern Museum, he played the last discord and then as an encore set about demolishing the piano. He used dynamite, a sledge hammer and an electric saw for the job. While working on the last leg, he gashed his own with the saw and ended up in a hospital for an operation to save his leg . . . .

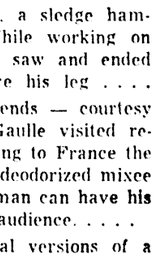

FRENCHMEN may have even more friends — courtesy of Mexico, where President Charles de Gaulle visited recently. Mexico, it seems, has begun exporting to France the answer to "garlic bad breath": completely deodorized mixee peppers and garlic. With these, the Frenchman can have his garlic and talk freely without losing his audience. . . . .

Greek workmen, who have been at it all their lives, do the actual digging. They turn up the dirt with trowels and pack it into boxes.

"YOU HAVE TO be a bit of a fanatic" to spend your life digging into ruins of past civilizations, says Charles Williams. He stands among columns of the Temple of Apollo in Corinth, dating to the 6th century B.C. and one of the oldest in Greece. Williams, an American archeologist, is one of the diggers of the American School of Classical Studies. Archeologists from several countries are trying to re-create Greek life through their findings. Pieta To Visit World Fair

By BENNETT M. BOLTON

VATICAN CITY (AP) — One of the most perfect marble masterpieces of all time, Michelangelo's Pieta, sails from Naples next Sunday for the New York World's Fair.

The priceless white carara representation of Mary grieving over the body of Christ will be packed for the eight-day Atlantic crossing on the liner Cristoforo Colombo in triple containers of wood and steel. It is being treated for what it is — irreplacable.

EXPERTS WORRIED

Keeping the 465-year-old Pieta in one piece has worried Italians and art experts ever since Pope John XXIII told Francis Cardinal Spellman two years ago that the statue would be allowed to grace the Vatican pavilion at the fair.

The argumentative fallout from that explosive announcement was still floating around two years later. A typical comment came from Prof. Vinzez Overhammer of the Vienna Art Museum.

"An utterly incomprehensible idea," he remarked.

"I can hardly imagine this could be true," said Gustav Hartlaub, emeritus professor of art history at the University of Heidelberg.

Italians have written to popular magazines to say, for example, as a marble quarry worker did, that heat and humidity changes could ruin the Pieta or that Italy must remember the 1959 Andrea Doria sinking and realize no transportation is absolutely safe.

The conservative Rome daily newspaper Il Tempo chided, in an acid commentary entitled, "A Bit of Pity for the Pieta," that "a sense of history, a sense of responsibility, or just plain common sense, opposes that vacuous and dangerous exhibition," of sending the statue abroad.

70 MILLION

Cardinal Spellman put his defense on the forecast that 70 million visitors at the Vatican pavilion will see the Pieta in the 19 months after the April 22 opening — compared with the one million persons who view it in a single year at St. Peter's Basilica.

"Those people who criticize me for asking the Holy Father for the loan of the statue have money to go to St. Peter's to see it for themselves," said the cardinal-archbishop of New York.

"But I want 70 million people to see it here free."

Packing the Pieta begins Friday. It will be slid off its pedestal with all the fuss of a royal potentate stepping from a jade throne. Statuary experts and the Vatican's maintenance men, will ease it along a wooden platform to its first case. Plain laundry soap will grease the way.

For its 3,950-mile journey, the Pieta will be wrapped in linen and paper and rigidly braced inside its first wooden container. This box fits in wood shavings snugly inside the second wooden crate, which likewise rests in a bed of shavings inside the outer steel case.

What fairgoers will see is a double-figured statue 6 feet 7 inches high and almost as wide. An almost life-size Mary sits supporting her Son's body across her lap, His head hung back in death and His arms and legs dangling.

The name of the work, which some experts regard as the supreme example of Christian art in any medium and of any century, suggests both pity and piety. The mother's out-turned left hand, crowning detail of the sculpture according to many art lovers, reflects both utter helplessness and resignation.

Michelangelo faced the problem of how to show the body of a full-grown man reclining horizontally across the smaller body of a woman. His genius is said to show forth in the technical way he resolved the difficulty —by enlarging Mary's figure slightly and reducing Christ's figure by a fraction. Though the figures are carved on different scales they are so perfectly proportioned that the subtle mathematical differences escape the eye.

NATURAL

The draping of Mary's garments is so natural, with almost tissue-thin folds in her veil, that the Pieta appears to weigh nowhere near its massive 6,700 pounds.

Michelangelo once was questioned about the youthfulness in the face of Mary, who was supposed to have been near 50 at the time of Christ's death. The explanation of the 24-year old Florentine sculptor: "I wanted to stress the virginity and imperishable purity of the mother of God."

Michelangelo Buonarroti was born in 1475 in Caprese, son of the local mayor, a poor nobleman. The family soon moved to Florence. His mother died during his infancy and a stonecutter's wife nursed him.

Though he was a painter, engineer, architect and man of letters as well, Michelangelo always regarded himself as basically a sculptor. He signed letters even to his father as "Michelangelo, scultore."

He began studying painting at 13 under the great Ghirlandaio, then moved into the Medici palace to learn sculpture under the sponsorship of the Florentine nobleman Lorenzo the Magnificent.

ATTENTION

He already had begun to attract attention when he went to Rome in 1496. The French Cardinal Jean de Villiers di Lagraulas wished to donate a statue to the old St. Peter's Basilica. Michelangelo's Roman patron, a banker named Jacopo Galli, promised the cardinal in a contract that "the said Michelangelo will complete the said work within one year's time and it will be the most beautiful work of marble ever seen in Rome and no other master will be able to surpass it."

Nine months later in May 1499 the Pieta was finished. The cardinal paid Michelangelo 450 gold ducats, equal to $1,000 — a far cry from the $10-million insurance that the Vatican demanded for letting it go off to America five centuries later.

The Pieta was installed on Cardinal de Villiers' funeral monument—he died the month it was completed—in the Church of St. Petronilla at the edge of Vatican City. When the church was demolished to make room for the new St. Peter's, the Pieta was transferred to a nearby church, Santa Maria Della Febbre. It remained there until permanently installed in the rebuilt St. Peter's in 1749, never once having left the Vatican.

It was in the Church of St. Petronilla, a few days after the statue was unveiled, that Michelangelo overheard two admirers suggesting the exquisite Pieta must have been done by the Milanese master Cristofor Salari.

Upset, Michelangelo returned that night with mallet and chisel to inscribe across the ribbon on Mary's tunic: "Michel Angelus Bonarotus Florent faciebat." (made by Michelangelo Buonarroti, Florentine).

LASTING FAME

Never again did Michelangelo have to sign another work. The Pieta guaranteed him lasting fame even before he went on to sculpt other commanding masterpieces, paint the frescoes in the Sistine Chapel and help design the present St. Peter's Basilica.

His next great sculpture was the colossal 13-foot David, carved from a block of marble discarded 40 years earlier by another sculptor as unsuitable for any statue.

Michelangelo was such a perfectionist that he would travel to the marble quarries to select his material personally. During his student days he gained access to a mortuary and studied cadavers, thereby capturing in his statues every detail of the human anatomy's bone and muscle.

Pope Clement VII once ordered him under threat of excommunication to slow down and take better care of his health. The robust Michelangelo lived to 90.

He was well into his 60s when he returned to the Sistine Chapel, scene of his earlier triumph in painting the creation and fall of man on the ceiling, to cover the back wall with his dark and imposing Last Judgment.

It was a difficult seven-year task, unveiled on Christmas Day of 1541. The aging Michelangelo never lost his sense of humor, even in old age. A Monsignor Biagio, Vatican prefect of ceremonies, had complained to Pope Paul III that the naked figures rising to heaven and descending to hell in Michelangelo's fresco were indecent.

Embargo On Red Cuba Won't Work

By BEM PRICE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is seeking the downfall of Communist Cuba by an economic embargo. And it won't work, if history is indicative.

As matters now stand, the U.S. effort to seal off Cuba from world trade has more holes in it than a collander.

Almost nobody, including some of this nation's best friends, is supporting the United States policy on Cuban trade.

The alternative to embargo is, of course, a blockade enforced by U.S. guns, missiles, aircraft and torpedoes.

In the past, however, the United States has insisted that a blockade is an act of war. And outright war with Cuba is something the United States is trying to avoid, especially since Cuba is allied with the Soviet Union.

SUCCESS

About the only success the United States has had against Cuba occurred in October and November 1962, when it introduced a varient of the blockade and called it a "quarantine."

This was a blockade against specific cargoes, in this case missiles. After the quarantine declaration, 12 Soviet ships turned back rather than test this nation's determination.

A blockade is only as good as the armed forces prepared to enforce it. The land equivalent of a blockade is the siege. The primary purpose is to strangle the enemy's food and war supplies.

DUBIOUS

For instance, since 1951 the United States has been trying to persuade industrial nations to refrain from shipping strategic goods to Communist-bloc nations. But even the nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) cannot agree on what constitutes strategic goods.

In 1961—the last year for which complete figures are available — the Communist-bloc nations imported $5 billion worth of goods from the Western world. The trade is still growing.

This material included pipelines, machine tools, machinery, chemicals and commercial aircraft, all of which would contribute to the strategic well-being of the Communist world. At least the United States thinks they would.

As for Cuba, the embargo sought by the United States can be effective only if all nations stop delivering goods to Cuba.

Clearly the Communists have no such intention, and neither does a large part of the non-Communist world — England, France, Mexico, Spain, Canada and Morocco among others.

What the U.S. policy does do, however, is to make life more difficult and expensive for the Cubans.

CUBAN SUPPORT

And, as Undersecretary of State George W. Ball has noted, it does bring about a drain on the economic reserves of the Communist nations, chiefly the Soviet Union which is pledged to Cuban support.

At the same time, however, the U.S. policy penalizes otherwise friendly nations by laying down the rule that ships which have delivered cargoes to Cuba cannot stop in any U.S. port for another cargo to take back home.

It also forbids the use of U.S. ports to all ships of any nation which delivers arms to Cuba.

Under U.S. law, the United States is obliged to shut off aid to nations which trade with Cuba, unless the President decides such an act might injure this nation more than it helps.

As a result, the United States has cut off minute amounts of military aid to Britain, France and Yugoslavia while freezing aid at the current levels to Spain and Morocco for "re-examination of their Cuban trade policies."

Twice in history the United States—or the colonies which became the United States—tried this embargo routine without success, once prior to the American Revolution and once just before the War of 1812.

On Dec. 22, 1807, President Thomas Jefferson forbade U.S. vessels to travel to European ports and prohibited foreign ships from loading cargoes in U.S. ports.

The result was near bankruptcy for the sea merchants. Finally, the embargo was modified by President James Madison March 1, 1809, to prohibit trade with just England and

By the time the United States got around to repealing this act, the United States and Britain were at war, a war that proved a near disaster for the United States.

Charles and Mary Beard, in "The Rise of American Civilization," report: "When the British ministry finally awoke to the gravity of the situation, it brought its superior sea power to bear on America with awful effect. It blockaded the Atlantic Coast, paralyzed American commerce . . .

"The government in Washington was careening toward bankruptcy . . . the only alternative to peace was economic collapse."

BLOCKADE

While the United States never has employed the embargo successfully, it has used the blockade with devastating effect.

In the Civil War a tight blockade around the South reduced cotton exports from $200 million in 1861 to $4 million in 1863. By the end of the war in 1865 the Confederacy couldn't even obtain paper to print its money.

After World War II Winston Churchill, in "The Hinge of Fate," wrote: "shipping was at once the stranglehold and sole foundation of our war strategy."

U. N. To Observe Birthday

A critic in the United States described it as a "Communist-dominated rat nest."

These and other brickbats have been tossed at the United Nations since the day it came into being 19 years ago.

There have been bouquets too. President Johnson says the United Nations has not achieved all that some had hoped, but he calls it "the best instrument yet devised to promote the peace of the world and the well being of mankind."

The Soviet Union—despite frequent blasts—continues to manifest a desire to keep the organization in business.

No country has yet quit the United Nations. Each new independent nation hastens to apply for membership. Even its most severe critics insist upon bringing problems before it.

Few governments have found it always to their liking. It has been damned by some as anemic, by others as over-ambitious.

Many of its decisions have been killed by the big-power veto. Its orders have been defied. More than half its 113 members are delinquent in paying their assessments.

"Our way or no pay," they say in effect.

One of these is Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee. Another is Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz. has expressed even stronger reservations. If Red China gets in, he said recently, "I don't think it would be a safe place for us."

U.S. VIEW

The official U.S. view is that the U.N. machinery, devised at the San Francisco conference in 1945, is outdated and inadequate in many respects, but that the concept of the United Nations is sound and workable.

No organ of the United Nations has proved so big a disappointment to its founders as the 11-nation Security Council, entrusted with the major responsibility for maintaining peace.

The council had been in business barely a month when the Soviet Union cast the first of its 101 vetoes.

All big powers favored the veto—and still do—but the West had envisaged it as a device to be used only in the most extreme circumstances. The Russians used their "nyet" so freely that the council was plunged into virtual paralysis. By 1950 there already had been 43 Soviet vetoes. The only others were two cast by France.

The cold war dealt another serious blow to U.N. peacekeeping plans by thwarting all efforts to establish a big-power military force to be used against aggressors.

The Military Staff Committee, set up in accordance with the charter to create and direct the proposed force, still leads a shadowy existence. It no longer makes even a pretense at trying to implement this charter provision.

The Security Council sank to its lowest point in the summer of 1950 when Soviet delegate Jakob Malik, as president, tied it in a knot for a month as it grappled with the Korean problem.

Most member nations by the fall of 1950 felt that the United Nations would soon meet the fate of the League of Nations unless changes were made swiftly.

ANSWER

The answer was action on two fronts: first, the Western powers decided they would have to by-pass the Security Council; secondly, they turned to regional military alliances, such as the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, to provide for their own defense.

There also was an increased tendency to rely on regional agencies for peaceful settlement of disputes. One example is the Organization of American States which recently has been dealing with the U.S.-Panama controversy. Another is the Organization of African Unity to which the Ethiopian-Somalian border dispute was recently referred.

The most important development was the shift of the center of gravity from the Security Council to the General Assembly. The foundation for this was the "uniting for peace" resolution, proposed by U.S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson and approved by the assembly in 1950 —over Soviet opposition.

The resolution provided that in the event of a veto any seven members of the Security Council might call an emergency session of the assembly within 24 hours.

This procedure has been used in a number of important cases and is now accepted by almost all members — except the Soviet bloc.

Perhaps the boldest step taken by the assembly was establishment of the U.N. Emergency Force during the 1956 Suez crisis. This was a revolutionary departure from the concept of the founding fathers. The new force, under U.N. command, was made up of military contingents contributed by small countries. It is still keeping the peace along the border between Israel and the United Arab Republic.

In 1960 the United Nations undertook an even more ambitious military operation when it stepped into the Congo to restore order. At one time there were 21,000 U.N. troops in the Congo.

SMALL MISSION

The United Nations has undertaken a score of smaller missions in all parts of the world. These include all types of operations from the one-man "presence," which has been employed in numerous cases, to large military observer groups such as those sent to Lebanon in 1958 and to Yemen last year. One of the oldest groups is the Palestine Truce Observation Organization, in the Holy Land since the armistice of 1949.

Secretary-General U Thant says the United Nations can do nothing if one of the nuclear powers is involved in a breach of peace.

"What the United Nations can do, and should do," he says, "is to prevent brush-fire wars which, of course, have the potentialities of exploding into wider conflagrations and thereby bringing a direct confrontation between the big powers."

When India's famous diplomat, Mrs. Vijayalakshmi Pandit, returned to the United Nations after an absence of nine years, the change which struck her most forcefully was the huge increase in membership.

The growth from 51 to 113 members "has changed the balance of power in the General Assembly. It has changed the thinking of a lot of people," she said.

The voting pattern has undergone substantial changes, although this generally has not gone against the West.

There is no doubt, however, that the United States has been forced to review its policies carefully.

The United States has been able so far to get safe majorities on cold war issues mainly because the Asian and African countries vote as a unit only on colonial matters. On other issues, they are widely divided.

CORRECTED

Vishinsky was correct then about the nonexistence of U.N. military forces, and the Russians made it clear they wanted to keep it that way.

Ten years later Lie's successor, Dag Hammarskjold, was commanding major military forces in the Middle East and the Congo. At one time he had more than 25,000 troops accountable to him. He and the current secretary-general, U Thant, have had a half-dozen generals under their direction.

Today Thant considers as routine many activities which Lie would have regarded as far beyond his scope.

"I had no calculated plan for development of the political powers of the office of secretary-general," he said after his retirement, "but I was determined that the secretary-general should be a power for peace."

The big change came under Hammarskjold. This was partly due to his own efforts, but the U.N. membership helped by handing over to him problems which normally would have been decided by the Security Council or the assembly.

"Leave it to Dag," became the order of the day.

This happened time after time. During the Congo crisis, the council's resolutions were couched in the most general terms, leaving it up to Hammarskjold to decide on specific action.

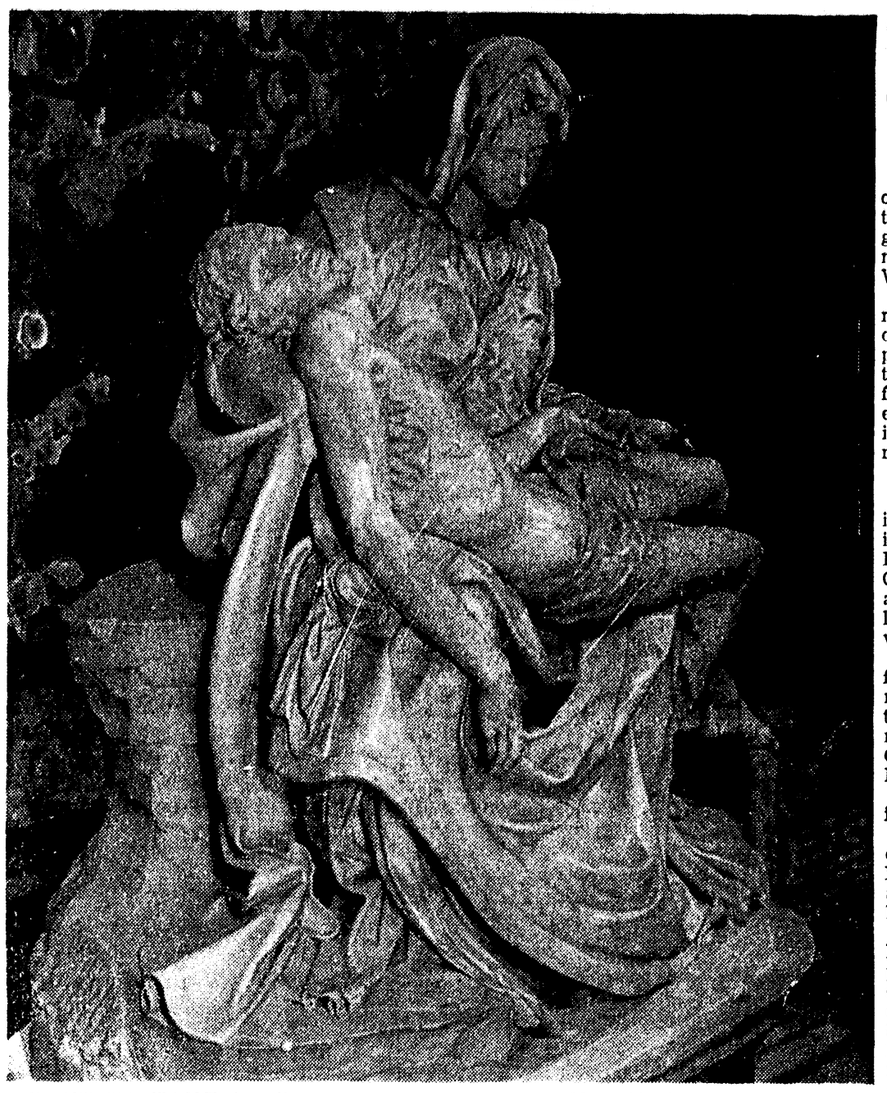

The Soviet Union never agreed with the concept that the secretary-general had excutive powers. It was not surprising, therefore, that Nikita Khrushchev launched his famous "troika" plan to abolish the office and replace it with a three-man committee, made up of Communist, Western and nonaligned representatives.

Hammarskjold defied Soviet demands that he resign, and the assembly gave him an overwhelming vote of confidence. The troika plan was never pushed to a vote.

The Russians tacitly acknowledged defeat when they agreed to name Thant to succeed Hammarskjold after the latter's death in a plane crash in 1961. Thant made it clear that he agreed with Hammarskjold and intended to pursue the same course.

TWO SCENES taken in quick succession in the United Nations Security Council are typical of an often repeated division, Soviet veto, majority "ayes." TOP: Valerian Zorin, then Russia's ambassador to the U.N., raises his hand to veto a U.S. proposal on the Congo Nov. 24, 1961. Under U.S. law, the United States is obliged to shut off aid to nations which trade with Cuba, unless the President decides such an act might injure this nation more than it helps.

As a result, the United States has cut off minute amounts of military aid to Britain, France and Yugoslavia while freezing aid at the current levels to Spain and Morocco for "re-examination of their Cuban trade policies."

Twice in history the United States—or the colonies which became the United States—tried this embargo routine without success, once prior to the American Revolution and once just before the War of 1812.

On Dec. 22, 1807, President Thomas Jefferson forbade U.S. vessels to travel to European ports and prohibited foreign ships from loading cargoes in U.S. ports.

The result was near bankruptcy for the sea merchants. Finally, the embargo was modified by President James Madison March 1, 1809, to prohibit trade with just England and

By the time the United States got around to repealing this act, the United States and Britain were at war, a war that proved a near disaster for the United States.

Charles and Mary Beard, in "The Rise of American Civilization," report: "When the British ministry finally awoke to the gravity of the situation, it brought its superior sea power to bear on America with awful effect. It blockaded the Atlantic Coast, paralyzed American commerce . . .

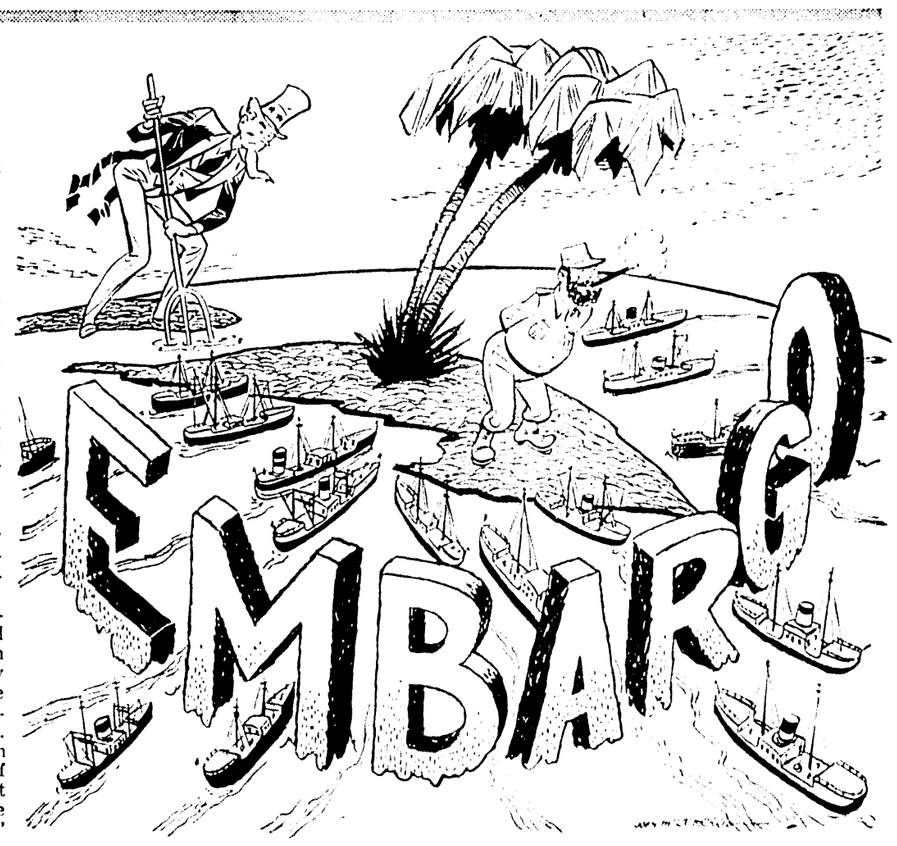

"The government in Washington was careening toward bankruptcy . . . the only alternative to peace was economic collapse."

BLOCKADE

While the United States never has employed the embargo successfully, it has used the blockade with devastating effect.

In the Civil War a tight blockade around the South reduced cotton exports from $200 million in 1861 to $4 million in 1863. By the end of the war in 1865 the Confederacy couldn't even obtain paper to print its money.

After World War II Winston Churchill, in "The Hinge of Fate," wrote: "shipping was at once the stranglehold and sole foundation of our war strategy."

U. N. To Observe Birthday

A critic in the United States described it as a "Communist-dominated rat nest."

These and other brickbats have been tossed at the United Nations since the day it came into being 19 years ago.

There have been bouquets too. President Johnson says the United Nations has not achieved all that some had hoped, but he calls it "the best instrument yet devised to promote the peace of the world and the well being of mankind."

The Soviet Union—despite frequent blasts—continues to manifest a desire to keep the organization in business.

No country has yet quit the United Nations. Each new independent nation hastens to apply for membership. Even its most severe critics insist upon bringing problems before it.

Few governments have found it always to their liking. It has been damned by some as anemic, by others as over-ambitious.

Many of its decisions have been killed by the big power veto. Its orders have been defied. More than half its 113 members are delinquent in paying their assessments.

"Our way or no pay," they say in effect.

One of these is Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee. Another is Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz. has expressed even stronger reservations. If Red China gets in, he said recently, "I don't think it would be a safe place for us."

U.S. VIEW

The official U.S. view is that the U.N. machinery, devised at the San Francisco conference in 1945, is outdated and inadequate in many respects, but that the concept of the United Nations is sound and workable.

No organ of the United Nations has proved so big a disappointment to its founders as the 11-nation Security Council, entrusted with the major responsibility for maintaining peace.

The council had been in business barely a month when the Soviet Union cast the first of its 101 vetoes.

All big powers favored the veto—and still do—but the West had envisaged it as a device to be used only in the most extreme circumstances. The Russians used their "nyet" so freely that the council was plunged into virtual paralysis. By 1950 there already had been 43 Soviet vetoes. The only others were two cast by France.

The cold war dealt another serious blow to U.N. peacekeeping plans by thwarting all efforts to establish a big-power military force to be used against aggressors.

The Military Staff Committee, set up in accordance with the charter to create and direct the proposed force, still leads a shadowy existence. It no longer makes even a pretense at trying to implement this charter provision.

The Security Council sank to its lowest point in the summer of 1950 when Soviet delegate Jakob Malik, as president, tied it in a knot for a month as it grappled with the Korean problem.

Most member nations by the fall of 1950 felt that the United Nations would soon meet the fate of the League of Nations unless changes were made swiftly.

ANSWER

The answer was action on two fronts: first, the Western powers decided they would have to by-pass the Security Council; secondly, they turned to regional military alliances, such as the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, to provide for their own defense.

There also was an increased tendency to rely on regional agencies for peaceful settlement of disputes. One example is the Organization of American States which recently has been dealing with the U.S.-Panama controversy. Another is the Organization of African Unity to which the Ethiopian-Somalian border dispute was recently referred.

The most important development was the shift of the center of gravity from the Security Council to the General Assembly. The foundation for this was the "uniting for peace" resolution, proposed by U.S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson and approved by the assembly in 1950 —over Soviet opposition.

The resolution provided that in the event of a veto any seven members of the Security Council might call an emergency session of the assembly within 24 hours.

This procedure has been used in a number of important cases and is now accepted by almost all members — except the Soviet bloc.

Perhaps the boldest step taken by the assembly was establishment of the U.N. Emergency Force during the 1956 Suez crisis. This was a revolutionary departure from the concept of the founding fathers. The new force, under U.N. command, was made up of military contingents contributed by small countries. It is still keeping the peace along the border between Israel and the United Arab Republic.

In 1960 the United Nations undertook an even more ambitious military operation when it stepped into the Congo to restore order. At one time there were 21,000 U.N. troops in the Congo.

SMALL MISSION

The United Nations has undertaken a score of smaller missions in all parts of the world. These include all types of operations from the one-man "presence," which has been employed in numerous cases, to large military observer groups such as those sent to Lebanon in 1958 and to Yemen last year. One of the oldest groups is the Palestine Truce Observation Organization, in the Holy Land since the armistice of 1949.

Secretary - General U Thant says the United Nations can do nothing if one of the nuclear powers is involved in a breach of peace.

"What the United Nations can do, and should do," he says, "is to prevent brush - fire wars which, of course, have the potentialities of exploding into wider conflagrations and thereby bringing a direct confrontation between the big powers."

When India's famous diplomat, Mrs. Vijayalakshmi Pandit, returned to the United Nations after an absence of nine years, the change which struck her most forcefully was the huge increase in membership.

The growth from 51 to 113 members "has changed the balance of power in the General Assembly. It has changed the thinking of a lot of people," she said.

The voting pattern has undergone substantial changes, although this generally has not gone against the West.

There is no doubt, however, that the United States has been forced to review its policies carefully.

The United States has been able so far to get safe majorities on cold war issues mainly because the Asian and African countries vote as a unit only on colonial matters. On other issues, they are widely divided.

CORRECTED

Vishinsky was correct then about the nonexistence of U.N. military forces, and the Russians made it clear they wanted to keep it that way.

Ten years later Lie's successor, Dag Hammarskjold, was commanding major military forces in the Middle East and the Congo. At one time he had more than 25,000 troops accountable to him. He and the current secretary - general, U Thant, have had a half-dozen generals under their direction.

Today Thant considers as routine many activities which Lie would have regarded as far beyond his scope.

"I had no calculated plan for development of the political powers of the office of secretary-general," he said after his retirement, "but I was determined that the secretary-general should be a power for peace."

The big change came under Hammarskjold. This was partly due to his own efforts, but the U.N. membership helped by handing over to him problems which normally would have been decided by the Security Council or the assembly.

"Leave it to Dag," became the order of the day.

This happened time after time. During the Congo crisis, the council's resolutions were couched in the most general terms, leaving it up to Hammarskjold to decide on specific action.

The Soviet Union never agreed with the concept that the secretary-general had excutive powers. It was not surprising, therefore, that Nikita Khrushchev launched his famous "troika" plan to abolish the office and replace it with a three-man committee, made up of Communist, Western and nonaligned representatives.

Hammarskjold defied Soviet demands that he resign, and the assembly gave him an overwhelming vote of confidence. The troika plan was never pushed to a vote.

The Russians tacitly acknowledged defeat when they agreed to name Thant to succeed Hammarskjold after the latter's death in a plane crash in 1961. Thant made it clear that he agreed with Hammarskjold and intended to pursue the same course.

TWO SCENES taken in quick succession in the United Nations Security Council are typical of an often repeated division, Soviet veto, majority "ayes." TOP: Valerian Zorin, then Russia's ambassador to the U.N., raises his hand to veto a U.S. proposal on the Congo Nov. 24, 1961. The vote, on an amendment, brought one of 101 vetoes which the Soviet Union has cast. BOTTOM: On a second amendment, five hands (one of an unseen delegate out of camera range) signal "yes" votes. From left to right around the council table in both photos: U Thant, then acting U.N. secretary general; Zorin; U.N. Northern Dancer Toys With Gulfstream Foes

Carrying top weight of 122 pounds with Manuel Ycaza, Northern Dancer ran the distance in 1:22 2-5 in his first appearance since winning the Flamingo Stakes on March 3. He kept on running after the finish and clocked the mile in 1:36 2-5.

Northern Dancer was 2-5 favorite with the crowd of 20,140 and paid $2.80, $2.20 and $2.20. Rex Ellsworth's The Scoundrel was second and returned $4.20 and $2.20. Troy Our Boy was third and paid $2.20.

Northern Dancer was fifth out of the gate but moved up to second after the half mile and was three lengths in front when they straightened away in the stretch. He won handily with fractions of :22, :44 3-5 and 1:09 3-5.

"My horse always has had a world of speed but I have tried not to use it too much," trainer Horatio Luro said after the race. "I have tried to teach my horse to race himself, but the jockey told me today that when he asked for a little speed my horse ran right out from under him. He will race back next Saturday in the Florida Derby."

Luro said he plans to ship Northern Dancer to Keeneland in Kentucky after the Florida Derby to await the Kentucky Derby May 2.

MAKES THE BIG PLAYS

Stallworth Leads 79-78 West Edge

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Wichita's Dave Stallworth came up with all the big plays in the last 1:45 of play Saturday to lead the West to a 79-78 victory over the East in the College All-Star basketball game.

With 1:45 to go Stallworth stole the ball, drove in for a basket, was fouled and made two free throws to put the West ahead 77-75.

With 43 seconds to go Wichita's All-American stole the ball again and scored on a 10-foot jumper to give the West a three point margin 79-76. The East managed two free throws by John Thompson of Providence in the next 15 seconds. Then the West took the ball and stalled it for the last 28 seconds.

The shorter East team carried the fight through most of the first half and led by as much as six points. But the West battled back to tie it up 43-43 at halftime.

The East, with Fred Hetzel of Davidson leading the way, took control again early in the second half and moved out to a five-point lead, 57-52. The West tied it up 57-57 on a basket by Stallworth and about one minute later went ahead 61-59 on a field goal by Wayne Estes of Utah State.

The West then led until Jeff Mullins of Duke hit a 10-foot jumper with 1:54 to go to tie it up. At this point Stallworth took over.

Willie Murrell, a 6-foot-6 jumping jack from Kansas St. was the game's high scorer with 20 points. Stallworth finished the game with 15 and Joe Caldwell of Arizona State had 13.

Ron Bonham of Cincinnati and Hetzel finished with 15, Mullins with 12 and All America Cotton Nash of Kentucky had 10.

The contest, sponsored by the National Association of Basketball Coaches, was played for the benefit of the Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame at Springfield, Mass.

Tigers Edge Tech Frosh By One Point

BATON ROUGE (AP)— Delman McNabb of Louisiana State uncorked a 252-foot 4-inch javelin throw Saturday to break a national freshman record in the 7th annual LSU invitational meet.

McNabb shared the spotlight with teammate Billy Hardin woh shattered two meet marks in high hurdles races.

Golfer Tops All Fishey Stories; Bakes Reward

PANAMA CITY, Fla. (AP)— What Dr. Harry Goldner wanted when he played the seventh hole at the Panama City Country Club was a birdie.

What he got was a fish.

Goldner, a visitor from Birmingham, Ala., hooked an iron shot into a lake Friday and his ball struck a three-pound bass swimming near the surface.

He lost the ball, but he recovered the stunned fish and had it baked for his dinner.

GETS EIGHT BIRDIES

Besselink Binge Good For Lead

WILMINGTON, N. C. (AP)— Affable Al Besselink went on an eight-birdie binge Saturday to shoot a second round 65 and move into the 36-hole lead of the $20,000 Azalea Open Golf Tournament with a 135 total.

The strapping 39-year-old professional from Merchantville, N.J., held a one-stroke lead over veteran Bob Gajda, who clung to second place with his second 68 for 136.

Besselink picked up $1,000 in bonus money, $600 for the day's best score and $400 for leading at the halfway mark of the 72-hole tournament that ends Monday.

Tommy Jacobs, Bob Spence, Larry Mowry and Gene Briggs shared third place at 139, while first round leader Joe Campbell fell to a seventh place tie at 140 after shooting 73.

Besselink, returning to the tournament trail after three years of club pro duty in the Philadelphia area, tuned up for his comeback by making the four - tournament Carribean swing and finishing third in the over-all standings.

He credited a new swing with improving his play.

"I used to be a puncher, a hand player," he explained. "Now I'm a swinger. I've got a swing that'll get the money. I never dreamed I could play as well as I have here. If I could win tournaments the way I used to hit the ball, this should be easy. It's like stealing."

The 6-foot-4, 200-pounder needed only 27 putts to get around the 6,744-yard Cape Fear Country Club course. One of two greens he missed, the eighth, brought his only bogey.

On the front nine he had three birdies, the longest putt being a six-footer. He blazed home in 31 with five birdies, finishing with three consecutive threes. Putts of 15 feet, six inches and three feet were followed by 30-footers on the last two holes to complete his round.

Gajda, 47-year-old pro playing his way home to his Bloomfield Hills, Mich., club job, again had a hot putter as he put together nines of 35-33. His only bogey came on a three-putt green, but he knocked in four birdie putts of 10 to 25 feet and another of only 10 inches on the par three 10th.

A 36-hole score of 145 was required to qualify 66 pros for the last two days of play. Prominent casualties were Jerry Barber, defending champion and three - time winner here, who missed by two strokes; Billy Maxwell, one shot off; and Dow Finsterwald, two over the limit.

76ers Defeat Royal To Tie Playoff Series

PHILADELPHIA (AP) —Substitute Connie Dierking scored 16 points in the second half as he led the Philadelphia 76ers to a 129-120 victory over the Cincinnati Royals Saturday night, deadlocking the National Basketball Association Eastern Division semifinal playoffs at two games apiece.

The teams meet Sunday night in Cincinnati in the deciding game to determine which will face the Boston Celtics in the Eastern final series which starts Tuesday in Boston.

Philadelphia took the lead 75-73 on a basket by Hal Greer with 6:52 remaining in the third period and held on the rest of the way as Dierking, a late replacement for John Kerr, scored seven field goals and two free throws.

The closest Cincinnati came after that was three points and the 76ers led by as many as 12. The Royals, led by Oscar Robertson, who scored 31 points and Tom Hawkins with 25, cut the 76ers margin to five points at 119-114, but Paul Neumann and Chet Walker hit successive baskets to put the game away for Philadelphia.

Greer, with 24 points, was the top scorer for the 76ers, who also got some fourth quarter help from Lee Shaffer. Shaffer, out most of the season with a severe knee injury, popped in four field goals late in the final period.

Cincinnati, was handicapped because of an injury to its top rebounder, Jerry Lucas. Lucas, the NBA Rookie of the Year, scored 1 4 points and managed only nine rebounds. He went scoreless in the second half before finally fouling out.

Olympic Tryout Team Topples UCLA Bruins

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Evansville's Jerry Sloan held UCLA's Walt Hazzard to seven points Saturday night as a collegiate Olympic tryout team trounced the Bruins 76-59. The Uclans' All-America was hampered by a hip injury.

Manny Newsome of Western Michigan and Steve Thomas of Xavier led the way as the All-Stars began pulling ahead 54-52 with 9:46 to go.

UCLA reported understrength, particularly missing its leading rebounder, Keith Erickson, who didn't make the trip. Coach Johnny Wooden said his players were "just tired of basketball."

Wooden had only six of his own players to use, and he borrowed three Evansville College reserves for limited duty.

Morgan, Fountain Get First Places

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Copley Vickers, a lanky University of Tennessee junior, and a speedy Northeast Louisiana team took top honors in a rain-soaked 21st running of the Florida Relays Saturday.

Vickers was named the meet's most valuable athlete—for winning the two-mile run, and running the first leg on the winning two-mile relay quartet.

His two-mile foursome of the Tennessee Volunteers set the only record in the university division's 15 events. Vickers, followed by Tom Scott , Rodney Soderberg and Bob Reddington, ran it in 7:35.7. This bettered the 7:40.4 meet record Kentucky set in 1960.

Outside of Vickers, the closest anyone came to being a double winner was Roger Morgan of Northeast Louisiana. He won the 120-yard high hurdles and was leading the 330-yard intermediate hurdles when he tripped on the last hurdle and sprawled headlong on the asphalt track.

Morgan was not hurt and went on to compete in sprint medley and quarter-mile relay events.

The Northeast Louisiana team collected 50 points. Tennessee was second with 33¾. Furman, last year's winner, was third with 32. Florida was fourth at 27¾ and Florida State fifth at 23¾.

Rain fell several times through the afternoon and held the crowd to about 3,000.

A most valuable award in the high school division, given this year for the first time, went to Mike Synyard of Murphy High of Mobile, Ala. He won the mile in a record 4:18.9 seconds. It bettered the 4:25.5 mark by Farnum Smit h of Miami Edison a year ago.

Northeast scored another first place on Ronnie Fountain's victory in the 100 yard dash. He took the event a scant whisker over George Leach of Florida. The winning time was 9.7 seconds.

DERBY CANDIDATE

Northern Dancer Toys With Gulfstream Foes

Carrying top weight of 122 pounds with Manuel Ycaza, Northern Dancer ran the distance in 1:22 2-5 in his first appearance since winning the Flamingo Stakes on March 3. He kept on running after the finish and clocked the mile in 1:36 2-5.

Northern Dancer was 2-5 favorite with the crowd of 20,140 and paid $2.80, $2.20 and $2.20. Rex Ellsworth's The Scoundrel was second and returned $4.20 and $2.20. Troy Our Boy was third and paid $2.20.

Northern Dancer was fifth out of the gate but moved up to second after the half mile and was three lengths in front when they straightened away in the stretch. He won handily with fractions of :22, :44 3-5 and 1:09 3-5.

"My horse always has had a world of speed but I have tried not to use it too much," trainer Horatio Luro said after the race. "I have tried to teach my horse to race himself, but the jockey told me today that when he asked for a little speed my horse ran right out from under him. He will race back next Saturday in the Florida Derby."

Luro said he plans to ship Northern Dancer to Keeneland in Kentucky after the Florida Derby to await the Kentucky Derby May 2.

MAKES THE BIG PLAYS

Stallworth Leads 79-78 West Edge

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Wichita's Dave Stallworth came up with all the big plays in the last 1:45 of play Saturday to lead the West to a 79-78 victory over the East in the College All-Star basketball game.

With 1:45 to go Stallworth stole the ball, drove in for a basket, was fouled and made two free throws to put the West ahead 77-75.

With 43 seconds to go Wichita's All-American stole the ball again and scored on a 10-foot jumper to give the West a three point margin 79-76. The East managed two free throws by John Thompson of Providence in the next 15 seconds. Then the West took the ball and stalled it for the last 28 seconds.

The shorter East team carried the fight through most of the first half and led by as much as six points. But the West battled back to tie it up 43-43 at halftime.

The East, with Fred Hetzel of Davidson leading the way, took control again early in the second half and moved out to a five-point lead, 57-52. The West tied it up 57-57 on a basket by Stallworth and about one minute later went ahead 61-59 on a field goal by Wayne Estes of Utah State.

The West then led until Jeff Mullins of Duke hit a 10-foot jumper with 1:54 to go to tie it up. At this point Stallworth took over.

Willie Murrell, a 6-foot-6 jumping jack from Kansas St. was the game's high scorer with 20 points. Stallworth finished the game with 15 and Joe Caldwell of Arizona State had 13.

Ron Bonham of Cincinnati and Hetzel finished with 15, Mullins with 12 and All America Cotton Nash of Kentucky had 10.

The contest, sponsored by the National Association of Basketball Coaches, was played for the benefit of the Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame at Springfield, Mass.

Indians Lose 4-1 Game To SEC Power

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (Special) — Jim Willcutt's double in the fourth inning with the bases loaded gave Mississippi State a 4-1 baseball victory over Northeast here Saturday in the Florida State Invitational Tourney.

Later in the seventh inning Ron Jones' sacrifice fly brought home Willcutt, who had singled and moved to third on a base hit by Del Unser.

Northeast's Bobby Leak managed the lone Indian tally in the ninth when he reached base on an error, advanced to third on a wild throw, and scored on a fielder's choice on Joey McGinn's ground ball.

State now stands at 3-1 for the season and the Indians 1-6. All the Tribe's defeats have come at the hands of major college powers.

Tigers Edge Tech Frosh By One Point

BATON ROUGE (AP)—Delman McNabb of Louisiana State uncorked a 252-foot 4-inch javelin throw Saturday to break a national freshman record in the 7th annual LSU invitational meet.

Golfer Tops All Fishey Stories; Bakes Reward

PANAMA CITY, Fla. (AP)—What Dr. Harry Goldner wanted when he played the seventh hole at the Panama City Country Club was a birdie.

What he got was a fish.

Goldner, a visitor from Birmingham, Ala., hooked an iron shot into a lake Friday and his ball struck a three-pound bass swimming near the surface.

He lost the ball, but he recovered the stunned fish and had it baked for his dinner.

GETS EIGHT BIRDIES

Besselink Binge Good For Lead

WILMINGTON, N. C. (AP)—Affable Al Besselink went on an eight-birdie binge Saturday to shoot a second round 65 and move into the 36-hole lead of the $20,000 Azalea Open Golf Tournament with a 135 total.

The strapping 39-year-old professional from Merchantville, N.J., held a one-stroke lead over veteran Bob Gajda, who clung to second place with his second 68 for 136.

Besselink picked up $1,000 in bonus money, $600 for the day's best score and $400 for leading at the halfway mark of the 72-hole tournament that ends Monday.

Tommy Jacobs, Bob Spence, Larry Mowry and Gene Briggs shared third place at 139, while first round leader Joe Campbell fell to a seventh place tie at 140 after shooting 73.

Besselink, returning to the tournament trail after three years of club pro duty in the Philadelphia area, tuned up for his comeback by making the four - tournament Carribean swing and finishing third in the over-all standings.

He credited a new swing with improving his play.

"I used to be a puncher, a hand player," he explained. "Now I'm a swinger. I've got a swing that'll get the money. I never dreamed I could play as well as I have here. If I could win tournaments the way I used to hit the ball, this should be easy. It's like stealing."

The 6-foot-4, 200-pounder needed only 27 putts to get around the 6,744-yard Cape Fear Country Club course. One of two greens he missed, the eighth, brought his only bogey.

On the front nine he had three birdies, the longest putt being a six-footer. He blazed home in 31 with five birdies, finishing with three consecutive threes. Putts of 15 feet, six inches and three feet were followed by 30-footers on the last two holes to complete his round.

Gajda, 47-year-old pro playing his way home to his Bloomfield Hills, Mich., club job, again had a hot putter as he put together nines of 35-33. His only bogey came on a three-putt green, but he knocked in four birdie putts of 10 to 25 feet and another of only 10 inches on the par three 10th.

A 36-hole score of 145 was required to qualify 66 pros for the last two days of play. Prominent casualties were Jerry Barber, defending champion and three - time winner here, who missed by two strokes; Billy Maxwell, one shot off; and Dow Finsterwald, two over the limit.

Morgan, Fountain Get First Places

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Copley Vickers, a lanky University of Tennessee junior, and a speedy Northeast Louisiana team took top honors in a rain-soaked 21st running of the Florida Relays Saturday.

Vickers was named the meet's most valuable athlete—for winning the two-mile run, and running the first leg on the winning two-mile relay quartet.

His two-mile foursome of the Tennessee Volunteers set the only record in the university division's 15 events. Vickers, followed by Tom Scott , Rodney Soderberg and Bob Reddington, ran it in 7:35.7. This bettered the 7:40.4 meet record Kentucky set in 1960.

Outside of Vickers, the closest anyone came to being a double winner was Roger Morgan of Northeast Louisiana. He won the 120-yard high hurdles and was leading the 330-yard intermediate hurdles when he tripped on the last hurdle and sprawled headlong on the asphalt track.

Morgan was not hurt and went on to compete in sprint medley and quarter-mile relay events.

The Northeast Louisiana team collected 50 points. Tennessee was second with 33¾. Furman, last year's winner, was third with 32. Florida was fourth at 27¾ and Florida State fifth at 23¾.

Rain fell several times through the afternoon and held the crowd to about 3,000.

A most valuable award in the high school division, given this year for the first time, went to Mike Synyard of Murphy High of Mobile, Ala. He won the mile in a record 4:18.9 seconds. It bettered the 4:25.5 mark by Farnum Smit h of Miami Edison a year ago.

Northeast scored another first place on Ronnie Fountain's victory in the 100 yard dash. He took the event a scant whisker over George Leach of Florida. The winning time was 9.7 seconds.

76ers Defeat Royal To Tie Playoff Series

PHILADELPHIA (AP) —Substitute Connie Dierking scored 16 points in the second half as he led the Philadelphia 76ers to a 129-120 victory over the Cincinnati Royals Saturday night, deadlocking the National Basketball Association Eastern Division semifinal playoffs at two games apiece.

The teams meet Sunday night in Cincinnati in the deciding game to determine which will face the Boston Celtics in the Eastern final series which starts Tuesday in Boston.

Philadelphia took the lead 75-73 on a basket by Hal Greer with 6:52 remaining in the third period and held on the rest of the way as Dierking, a late replacement for John Kerr, scored seven field goals and two free throws.

The closest Cincinnati came after that was three points and the 76ers led by as many as 12. The Royals, led by Oscar Robertson, who scored 31 points and Tom Hawkins with 25, cut the 76ers margin to five points at 119-114, but Paul Neumann and Chet Walker hit successive baskets to put the game away for Philadelphia.

Greer, with 24 points, was the top scorer for the 76ers, who also got some fourth quarter help from Lee Shaffer. Shaffer, out most of the season with a severe knee injury, popped in four field goals late in the final period.

Cincinnati, was handicapped because of an injury to its top rebounder, Jerry Lucas. Lucas, the NBA Rookie of the Year, scored 1 4 points and managed only nine rebounds. He went scoreless in the second half before finally fouling out.

Olympic Tryout Team Topples UCLA Bruins

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Evansville's Jerry Sloan held UCLA's Walt Hazzard to seven points Saturday night as a collegiate Olympic tryout team trounced the Bruins 76-59. The Uclans' All-America was hampered by a hip injury.

Manny Newsome of Western Michigan and Steve Thomas of Xavier led the way as the All-Stars began pulling ahead 54-52 with 9:46 to go.

UCLA reported understrength, particularly missing its leading rebounder, Keith Erickson, who didn't make the trip. Coach Johnny Wooden said his players were "just tired of basketball."

Wooden had only six of his own players to use, and he borrowed three Evansville College reserves for limited duty.

NICKLAUS WAS ANOTHER

Floyd And Delvin Exceptions To 'Rookie Rule' On Pro Tour

NEW YORK (AP) — About a year ago Raymond Floyd, real unknown on the pro golf circuit, won the St. Petersburg Open from a field of vastly more experienced players.

It was a sensation because the 20 - year - old Floyd hadn't won a dime in 10 previous tournaments on the winter tour and had only played the full 72 holes once.

This year Bruce Devlin of Australia won the same tournament—his first victory in America. Devlin wasn't exactly unknown because he is a former Australian champion and had played on the U. S. tour before.

This combination of events, plus the fact that no player has won two tournaments so far on the winter tour, which winds up April 12 with the Masters, gives an idea of the uncertainties of American pro golf competition. It's the world's toughest and is getting tougher every year for newcomers.

What chance does a rookie on the pro tour have of walking to the payoff window ahead of the likes of Arnie Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player and Tony Lema? Not much, though someone breaks through nearly every year.

Lema, now a big money winner, had three lean, frustrating years on the pro tour before he finally won a tournament of importance late in 1962. When Julius Boros, the current U. S. Open champion, turned pro, his only victory in two years was the Massachusetts Open.

A Ben Hogan, starting out today as Hogan did in 1932 and 1933, couldn't get an Approved Tournament Player's card and probably would go broke even faster than Ben did. It wasn't until 1940 that Hogan broke into the big time winners' circle. Earlier he had to leave the tour twice because he ran out of money.

Of course, Jack Nicklaus won the U. S. Open in his first year as a pro, the Masters and the PGA in his second and a mint of money both years. He's the great exception. Nicklaus was beating pros when he was 16.

Palmer won the Canadian Open in 1955, his freshman year as a pro, and finished in the top 10 eight other times. He was tabbed as a future great on that showing. The same year Gene Littler and Billy Maxwell, who had turned pro in 1954, won their first tournaments.

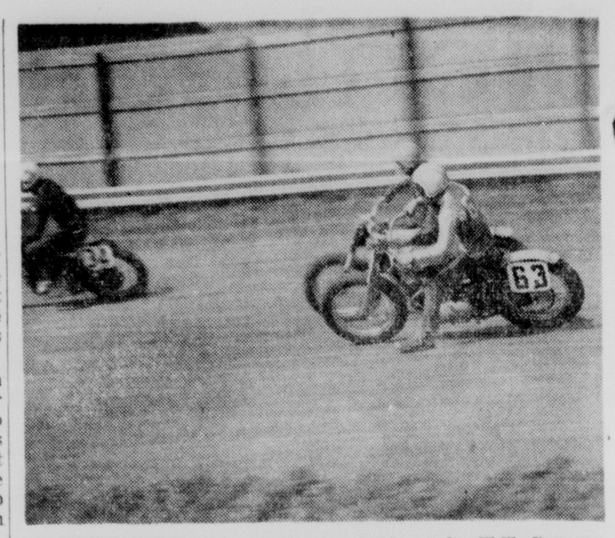

Bob Goalby won the 1958 Greensboro Open only four months after his debut on tour. The next year Mason Rudolph finished in the money in his first 11 PGA tournaments then won the 14th. Phil Rodgers and Jacky Cupit, 1961 rookies, were big winners that year but they were overshadowed by Nicklaus.

There have been plenty of other first-year winners, but for each there are dozens of players in the Ghost Squad—the ambitious but anonymous players who keep trying each week to qualify for a place in the real tournament.

Tommy Aaron, Rex Baxter, Al Geiberger, Don Massengale, Bobby Nichols, Johnny Pott and Jerry Steelsmith are regarded as successful pros, but they required three years or more of earnest effort before they could win. Some haven't made it yet.

Doc Giffin, the PGA press secretary who knows the stars and the unknowns of the pro brigade, counts just two 1963 freshmen as successes, Floyd and Frank Beard. Each won a PGA tournament and each collected more than $10,000 — The minimum needed for an unattached bachelor pro to meet expenses for the full tour.

Giffin lists George Archer, a 6-foot-6 Calfironian, and Richard Crawford, Charles Coody and Dudley Wysong, all Texans, as the most likely candidates for a freshman breakthrough in 1964.

ACTION LIKE this will abound when the T.T. Scramble races get underway at Selman Field next Sunday. At least 400 riders are expected for the five classes of races.

Exhibition Baseball

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Boston's lowly Red Sox rallied from 10-1 deficit to a 12-10 exhiition victory over the Los Angeles Angels Saturday and, helped by some Florida rains, climbed out of the American League cellar.

The victory in Palm Springs, Calif., put the troubled Red Sox .004 up on Kansas City, rained out in its scheduled exhibition with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Also rained out, all in Florida, were Cincinnati - Milwaukee, Philadelphia-Minnesota, Detroit-Chicago White Sox and St. Louis-New York Yankees.

San Francisco scored its sixth straight over Cleveland, 7-4 at Tucson. Pittsburgh benefited from eight unearned runs in an 8-6 decision over Houston in Fort Myers, Fla., Washington blanked the Baltimore B team 6-0 in Pompano Beach, Fla., and the Chicago Cubs beat the Angels B team 10-6 at Mesa, Ariz.

Rookies Tony Horton and Tony Conigliaro each slammed homers in Boston's big rally against the Angels. Los Angeles starter Ken McBride allowed only one unearned run in the seven innings he worked, lowering his spring earned run average to 0.69.

But Boston broke through for eight runs in the eighth and three in the ninth. A two-run homer by Horton was the winning blow.

The Giants rammed in three runs in the eighth for their victory over Cleveland. Indian hurler Pete Ramos was the victim, surrendering four hits in the outburst, including a key triple to Jesus Alou, his third hit.

Shortstop Andre Rodgers scored four runs and Leo Burke hit a homer as the Cubs combed the Angels' Aubrey Gatewood and Bo Belinsky for 14 hits.

Don Leppert hit two homers, Chuck Hinton and Bill Skowron one each and the Senators' Claude Osteen pitched six shutout innings against the Orioles B team.

Six Houston errors led the way to all the Pittsburgh runs at Fort Myers. Jim Wynn had two homers for the losers.

Cedar Key Is Big Winner At Gulfstream

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Manuel Ycaza kept Cedar Key close to the front runners and brought him along fast in the last stages and won the $59,750 Donn Handicap at Gulfstream Park Saturday.

However, the Donn was anticlamactic, as Windfields Farm's Canadian-owned Northern Dancer dashed seven furlongs under Ycaza in record-equaling 1:22 during a warmup for the Florida and Kentucky Derbies.

Cedar Key, slight favorite with the crowd of 20,140, ran the 1½ miles on the grass in 2:26, only one-fifth of a second slower than the track record. He won by 2½ lengths.

Parka was second, Suspicious third and Sunrise Flight fourth.

Northern Dancer, packing 122 pounds, won by four lengths as odds-on favorite and paid $2.80. The speedy son of Nearctic, Natalma thus became a hot favorite to win next Saturday's Florida Derby and then will ship to Kentucky for the big one May 2.

Cedar Key, owned by Jerry Basta of Cedarhurst, N.Y., ran the biggest race of his brief career in the Donn. He was fourth in the early running as Tamao and Nashver battled for the lead. But Cedar Key moved up after a mile and never was threatened.

Cedar key, a Florida-bred son of Fair Ruler out of Military Lady, carried high weight of 122 pounds and paid $8.40, $4.60 and $3.80. Parka returned $4.20 and $3.60, while show price on Suspicious was $6.60.

The 4-year-old Cedar Key, who earned $59,850 in a successful California campaign, picked up $39,750 in the Donn.

Basta claimed Cedar Key for $6,500, lost him in another race to P. J. Johnson for $7,500 and regained him in still another for $9,500. The horse won $78,627 in 31 races last year.

Rocky Link Wins Aqueduct Race; Bonjour Second

NEW YORK (AP) — Rocky Link, a 4-year-old son of Sailor, dropped his nose in front just at the wire Saturday and won the 4th running of the $29,150 Westchester Stakes at Aqueduct.

Don Pierce brought Rocky Link down the middle of the stretch, after trailing during the early part of the one mile race, for the colt's second straight victory. Bonjour finished second by one length over Morry E., third in the field of 12.

Carrying 114 pounds, Rocky Link was clocked in 1:35 1-5 and paid $23.30, $11 and $7.40. Bonjour returned $5.10 and $3.90 and Morry E. was $5 to show.

The victory was worth $18,947 to the Golden Trangle Stable.

Morry E., never far back, and Bonjour were fighting for the lead with one-eighth of a mile to go when Rocky Link ranged up on the outside and made a three-horse battle right to the wire.

OSU Stops Houston Golf Domination

HOUSTON (AP) — Oklahoma State University ended the University of Houston's domination of the All-America Intercollegiate golf tournament Saturday by beating the Cougars four strokes in team medal play.

The Cowpokes toured the course with a four-day total of 400, four shots better than Houston which was losing its first 72-hole tournament in its history.

Labron Harris' Oklahomans also took the tournament overall championship with 111 to 109 of runner-up Houston.

Little Wright Garrett sank a 27-putt for an eagle on the five-par 18th hole to nudge his teammate, Mark Hopkins, for the tournament individual medal title. Garrett also sank a 40-foot putt for a bird on the 17th role.

Houston won the team four ball title and Garrett and Hopkins took the two-ball championship on a flip of a coin with State's Bob Dickson and George Hixson.

Hixson and Wake Forest's Jay Sigel had the day's low round, two-under par 70, Garrett finished with 73. Hopkins who started the final round two shots up on the field, had a five-over-par 77.

Senate Title Fight Probe Turned On Frankie Carbo

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators probing the controversial bout in which Cassius Clay won the heavyweight championship from Sonny Liston headed in a new direction Saturday.

Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, R-N.Y., asked the investigators to determine if associates of Frankie Carbo, former underworld czar of boxing now in prison, were in the Florida training camps of both Clay and Liston.

Keating, a member of the Senate antitrust subcommittee staging the boxing inquiry, offered sworn testimony about a meeting of Carbo here in Washington six years ago with fight world figures as a probable clue.

"I am informed that there is some additional evidence stemming from New York investigations linking the figures in the Clay-Liston fight with the Carbo combine," Keating said, adding:

"I think it is most essential that we discover whether Frank Carbo has reached out from behind prison bars and placed his cohorts in both the Liston and Clay camps."

Clay, in a stunning upset, won the heavyweight title at Miami Beach Feb. 25 when Liston failed to come out for the seventh round because of a muscle injury.

Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., chairman of the Senate panel, will resume public hearings Monday on the Clay-Liston bout.

Scheduled witnesses include:

—Robert Nilon, part owner with Liston in Inter-Continental Promotions, Inc., which holds the contract for Clay's first match as champion.

—Sam Margolis, Philadelphia vending machine operator and long-time associate of Liston to whom Liston gave without payment some $100,000 worth of shares in the promotions corporations.

—Salvatore Avena, Camden, N.J. ,attorney, who acted as attorney for the corporation and Margolis and also holds stock in it.

Carbo, now serving a 25-year prison term in the state of Washington for extortion, attended the "most unusual meeting" here March 19, 1958, Keating said.

As proof he cited testimony by two New York detectives in March, 1960 before the same Senate subcommittee when it was probing boxing.

One of the detectives, Anthony Bernhard, said he attended a dinner with Carbo in the cafe operated here by Goldie and Helene Ahearn, Washington boxing promoters.

Bernhard said others there included:

—Margolis, the associate of Liston who also has been linked with Frank (Blinky) Palermo, a former Liston manager.

—Palermo, one of a group who formerly held Liston's contract.

—Benny Trotta, Baltimore fight manager who is also identified as Benjamin Magliano.

—Angelo Dundee, who was advisor and trainer for Clay in Florida prior to the recent championship fight.

—Dominic Mordini, also known as Billy Brown, who is active in boxing circles.

Keating said the records of this session from the New York undercover agents shows that the discussions included the boxing future of Sonny Liston.

The current probe has heard testimony that Liston, acting on a directive from the Pennsylvania Boxing Commission, bought up his contract for $75,000 from his former manager, Joe (Pep) Barone, in order to rid himself of underworld associates.

Jack Nilon, who has acted as advisor to Liton, testified that Liston still owes Barone $42,000 on this deal. He added that Barone, the ousted manager, was paid $4,000 or $5,000 to attend Liston's recent Florida training camp because Liston regarded Barone as bringing luck.

Nilon's brothers, Robert and Jim, own half the stock in the promotions corporation in which Liston and Margolis also hold shares.

Grid Browns Sign Stellar Cage Standout

CLEVELAND (AP) —Levern Tart of Bradley University, one of the nation's top collegiate basketball stars, has signed with the Cleveland Browns, the National Football League club announced Saturday.

Tart, who is 6-foot-2 and weighs 202 pounds, was selected as the Most Valuable Player in the recent National Invitational Tournament in New York, which was won by Bradley.

The Browns said he will be tested primarily at defensive halfback, but also is a possibility as an offensive end. He played both positions at West Palm Beach, Fla., High School.

The Los Angeles Rams and Dallas Cowboys of the NFL also tried to sign Tart.

The Browns also announced the signing of four other players as free agents. They are: linebakcers Ed Bettridge of Bowling Green and John Mutchler of as free agents. They are: linebackers Ed Bettridge of Bowling Green and John Mutchler of Western Kentucky, halfback Clarence Jones of Adams State and defensive tackle Bill Slacas, who played last season with the Cleveland Bulldogs of the United Football League.

The other players on the team: Jesse Branson, Elon, N.C.; Lou Skurcenski, Westminster, Pa.; Dean Church, Southwestern Louisiana; Ralph Telken, Rockhurst of Kansas City, and Jerry Moore, Morris Harvey.

Trade Rumors Haunt Phillies'

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — The trade rumors are flying around the training camp of the Philadelphia Phillies these days as the club looks for a right-handed hitting outfielder and a left-handed relief pitcher.

The story circulating now is a five-for-two deal with the New York Mets that would send pitchers John Boozer, Dallas Green and Paul Brown and infielders Don Hoak and John Herrnstein to New York for outfielder Frank Thomas and pitcher Al Jackson.

General Manager John Quinn of the Phillies also is interested in Gene Freese, Pittsburgh third baseman-outfielder.

There is a chance the Phillies might be willing to throw in infielder Ruben Amaro if the Mets are interested. Quinn says negotiations are stymied by the reluctance of the Mets "to tell us what they want."

"All I know is that they need pitchers and infielders of which we have a surplus," Quinn says. He adds that Pittsburgh is holding off a while before talking about Freese.

Exhibition Baseball

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Boston's lowly Red Sox rallied from 10-1 deficit to a 12-10 exhiition victory over the Los Angeles Angels Saturday and, helped by some Florida rains, climbed out of the American League cellar.

The victory in Palm Springs, Calif., put the troubled Red Sox .004 up on Kansas City, rained out in its scheduled exhibition with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Also rained out, all in Florida, were Cincinnati - Milwaukee, Philadelphia-Minnesota, Detroit-Chicago White Sox and St. Louis-New York Yankees.

San Francisco scored its sixth straight over Cleveland, 7-4 at Tucson, Pittsburgh benefited from eight unearned runs in an 8-6 decision over Houston in Fort Myers, Fla., Washington blanked the Baltimore B team 6-0 in Pompano Beach, Fla., and the Chicago Cubs beat the Angels B team 10-6 at Mesa, Ariz.

Rookies Tony Horton and Tony Conigliaro each slammed homers in Boston's big rally against the Angels. Los Angeles starter Ken McBride allowed only one unearned run in the seven innings he worked, lowering his spring earned run average to 0.69.

But Boston broke through for eight runs in the eighth and three in the ninth. A two-run homer by Horton was the winning blow.

The Giants rammed in three runs in the eighth for their victory over Cleveland. Indian hurler Pete Ramos was the victim, surrendering four hits in the outburst, including a key triple to Jesus Alou, his third hit.

Shortstop Andre Rodgers scored four runs and Leo Burke hit a homer as the Cubs combed the Angels' Aubrey Gatewood and Bo Belinsky for 14 hits.

Don Leppert hit two homers, Chuck Hinton and Bill Skowron one each and the Senators' Claude Osteen pitched six shutout innings against the Orioles B team.

Six Houston errors led the way to all the Pittsburgh runs at Fort Myers. Jim Wynn had two homers for the losers.

Cedar Key Is Big Winner At Gulfstream

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Manuel Ycaza kept Cedar Key close to the front runners and brought him along fast in the last stages and won the $59,750 Donn Handicap at Gulfstream Park Saturday.

However, the Donn was anticlamactic, as Windfields Farm's Canadian-owned Northern Dancer dashed seven furlongs under Ycaza in record-equaling 1:22 during a warmup for the Florida and Kentucky Derbies.

Cedar Key, slight favorite with the crowd of 20,140, ran the 1½ miles on the grass in 2:26, only one-fifth of a second slower than the track record. He won by 2½ lengths.

Parka was second, Suspicious third and Sunrise Flight fourth.

Northern Dancer, packing 122 pounds, won by four lengths as odds-on favorite and paid $2.80. The speedy son of Nearctic, Natalma thus became a hot favorite to win next Saturday's Florida Derby and then will ship to Kentucky for the big one May 2.

Cedar Key, owned by Jerry Basta of Cedarhurst, N.Y., ran the biggest race of his brief career in the Donn. He was fourth in the early running as Tamao and Nashver battled for the lead. But Cedar Key moved up after a mile and never was threatened.

Cedar key, a Florida-bred son of Fair Ruler out of Military Lady, carried high weight of 122 pounds and paid $8.40, $4.60 and $3.80. Parka returned $4.20 and $3.60, while show price on Suspicious was $6.60.

The 4-year-old Cedar Key, who earned $59,850 in a successful California campaign, picked up $39,750 in the Donn.

Basta claimed Cedar Key for $6,500, lost him in another race to P. J. Johnson for $7,500 and regained him in still another for $9,500. The horse won $78,627 in 31 races last year.

Rocky Link Wins Aqueduct Race; Bonjour Second

NEW YORK (AP) — Rocky Link, a 4-year-old son of Sailor, dropped his nose in front just at the wire Saturday and won the 4th running of the $29,150 Westchester Stakes at Aqueduct.

Don Pierce brought Rocky Link down the middle of the stretch, after trailing during the early part of the one mile race, for the colt's second straight victory. Bonjour finished second by one length over Morry E., third in the field of 12.

Carrying 114 pounds, Rocky Link was clocked in 1:35 1-5 and paid $23.30, $11 and $7.40. Bonjour returned $5.10 and $3.90 and Morry E. was $5 to show.

The victory was worth $18,947 to the Golden Trangle Stable.

Morry E., never far back, and Bonjour were fighting for the lead with one-eighth of a mile to go when Rocky Link ranged up on the outside and made a three-horse battle right to the wire.

Florida Team Maintains Edge In 4-Ball Play

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — The Florida team of Truman Connell and Jack Veghte fired a best ball of 65 Saturday to maintain a one-stroke lead in the Men's International Four Ball Golf Tournament.

Veghte, of Jupiter, and Connell, of Clearwater, had a 54-hole total of 199 on rounds of 68-66-65.

The second place team of John Guenther of Reading, Pa. and Dick Siderowf of Westport, Conn., was one stroke behind with 200. They also fired a 65 to go with previous rounds of 68 and 67.

Jack Penrose of Stillwater, Okla., and Sid Salomon of St. Louis were third with 68-69-68—205.

In fourth place were Ed Kirkland and Tracy Allen, both of Orlando, Fla., with 72-71-64—207

NICKLAUS WAS ANOTHER

Floyd And Delvin Exceptions To 'Rookie Rule' On Pro Tour

NEW YORK (AP) — About a year ago Raymond Floyd, real unknown on the pro golf circuit, won the St. Petersburg Open from a field of vastly more experienced players.

It was a sensation because the 20 - year - old Floyd hadn't won a dime in 10 previous tournaments on the winter tour and had only played the full 72 holes once.

This year Bruce Devlin of Australia won the same tournament—his first victory in America. Devlin wasn't exactly unknown because he is a former Australian champion and had played on the U. S. tour before.

This combination of events, plus the fact that no player has won two tournaments so far on the winter tour, which winds up April 12 with the Masters, gives an idea of the uncertainties of American pro golf competition. It's the world's toughest and is getting tougher every year for newcomers.

What chance does a rookie on the pro tour have of walking to the payoff window ahead of the likes of Arnie Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player and Tony Lema? Not much, though someone breaks through nearly every year.

Lema, now a big money winner, had three lean, frustrating years on the pro tour before he finally won a tournament of importance late in 1962. When Julius Boros, the current U. S. Open champion, turned pro, his only victory in two years was the Massachusetts Open.

A Ben Hogan, starting out today as Hogan did in 1932 and 1933, couldn't get an Approved Tournament Player's card and probably would go broke even faster than Ben did. It wasn't until 1940 that Hogan broke into the big time winners' circle. Earlier he had to leave the tour twice because he ran out of money.

Of course, Jack Nicklaus won the U. S. Open in his first year as a pro, the Masters and the PGA in his second and a mint of money both years. He's the great exception. Nicklaus was beating pros when he was 16.

Palmer won the Canadian Open in 1955, his freshman year as a pro, and finished in the top 10 eight other times. He was tabbed as a future great on that showing. The same year Gene Littler and Billy Maxwell, who had turned pro in 1954, won their first tournaments.

Bob Goalby won the 1958 Greensboro Open only four months after his debut on tour. The next year Mason Rudolph finished in the money in his first 11 PGA tournaments then won the 14th. Phil Rodgers and Jacky Cupit, 1961 rookies, were big winners that year but they were overshadowed by Nicklaus.

There have been plenty of other first-year winners, but for each there are dozens of players in the Ghost Squad—the ambitious but anonymous players who keep trying each week to qualify for a place in the real tournament.

Tommy Aaron, Rex Baxter, Al Geiberger, Don Massengale, Bobby Nichols, Johnny Pott and Jerry Steelsmith are regarded as successful pros, but they required three years or more of earnest effort before they could win. Some haven't made it yet.

Doc Giffin, the PGA press secretary who knows the stars and the unknowns of the pro brigade, counts just two 1963 freshmen as successes, Floyd and Frank Beard. Each won a PGA tournament and each collected more than $10,000 — The minimum needed for an unattached bachelor pro to meet expenses for the full tour.

Giffin lists George Archer, a 6-foot-6 Calfironian, and Richard Crawford, Charles Coody and Dudley Wysong, all Texans, as the most likely candidates for a freshman breakthrough in 1964.

OSU Stops Houston Golf Domination

HOUSTON (AP) — Oklahoma State University ended the University of Houston's domination of the All-America Intercollegiate golf tournament Saturday by beating the Cougars four strokes in team medal play.

The Cowpokes toured the course with a four-day total of 400, four shots better than Houston which was losing its first 72-hole tournament in its history.

Labron Harris' Oklahomans also took the tournament overall championship with 111 to 109 of runner-up Houston.

Little Wright Garrett sank a 27-putt for an eagle on the five-par 18th hole to nudge his teammate, Mark Hopkins, for the tournament individual medal title. Garrett also sank a 40-foot putt for a bird on the 17th role.

Houston won the team four ball title and Garrett and Hopkins took the two-ball championship on a flip of a coin with State's Bob Dickson and George Hixson.

Hixson and Wake Forest's Jay Sigel had the day's low round, two-under par 70. Garrett finished with 73. Hopkins who started the final round two shots up on the field, had a five-over-par 77.

Senate Title Fight Probe Turned On Frankie Carbo

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators probing the controversial bout in which Cassius Clay won the heavyweight championship from Sonny Liston headed in a new direction Saturday.

Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, R-N.Y., asked the investigators to determine if associates of Frankie Carbo, former underworld czar of boxing now in prison, were in the Florida training camps of both Clay and Liston.

Keating, a member of the Senate antitrust subcommittee staging the boxing inquiry, offered sworn testimony about a meeting of Carbo here in Washington six years ago with fight world figures as a probable clue.

"I am informed that there is some additional evidence stemming from New York investigations linking the figures in the Clay-Liston fight with the Carbo combine," Keating said, adding:

"I think it is most essential that we discover whether Frank Carbo has reached out from behind prison bars and placed his cohorts in both the Liston and Clay camps."

Clay, in a stunning upset, won the heavyweight title at Miami Beach Feb. 25 when Liston failed to come out for the seventh round because of a muscle injury.

Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., chairman of the Senate panel, will resume public hearings Monday on the Clay-Liston bout.

Scheduled witnesses include:

—Robert Nilon, part owner with Liston in Inter-Continental Promotions, Inc., which holds the contract for Clay's first match as champion.

—Sam Margolis, Philadelphia vending machine operator and long-time associate of Liston to whom Liston gave without payment some $100,000 worth of shares in the promotions corporations.

—Salvatore Avena, Camden, N.J. ,attorney, who acted as attorney for the corporation and Margolis and also holds stock in it.

Carbo, now serving a 25-year prison term in the state of Washington for extortion, attended the "most unusual meeting" here March 19, 1958, Keating said.

As proof he cited testimony by two New York detectives in March, 1960 before the same Senate subcommittee when it was probing boxing.

One of the detectives, Anthony Bernhard, said he attended a dinner with Carbo in the cafe operated here by Goldie and Helene Ahearn, Washington boxing promoters.

Bernhard said others there included:

—Margolis, the associate of Liston who also has been linked with Frank (Blinky) Palermo, a former Liston manager.

—Palermo, one of a group who formerly held Liston's contract.

—Benny Trotta, Baltimore fight manager who is also identified as Benjamin Magliano.

—Angelo Dundee, who was advisor and trainer for Clay in Florida prior to the recent championship fight.

—Dominic Mordini, also known as Billy Brown, who is active in boxing circles.

Keating said the records of this session from the New York undercover agents shows that the discussions included the boxing future of Sonny Liston.

The current probe has heard testimony that Liston, acting on a directive from the Pennsylvania Boxing Commission, bought up his contract for $75,000 from his former manager, Joe (Pep) Barone, in order to rid himself of underworld associates.

Jack Nilon, who has acted as advisor to Liton, testified that Liston still owes Barone $42,000 on this deal. He added that Barone, the ousted manager, was paid $4,000 or $5,000 to attend Liston's recent Florida training camp because Liston regarded Barone as bringing luck.

Nilon's brothers, Robert and Jim, own half the stock in the promotions corporation in which Liston and Margolis also hold shares.

Trade Rumors Haunt Phillies'

Turkey Hunts On Tap Next

With Sam Hanna

Season Opens Saturday

If you're a turkey hunter or a would-be turkey hunter as most of us are, then these nippy spring mornings are a lot like the fall of the year just before the squirrel season opens.

They're made to order to get you in the right frame of mind for the turkey season. If you've ever heard a wild gobbler, you know what we mean.

Louisiana's annual spring season on turkeys opens Saturday for 16 days — the longest turkey season in modern times. It'll run through April 19th in 14 parishes.

The bag limit will be the same as it has been — one per season for each hunter, who must have a big game license with a turkey tag. Permits are a must for each hunter on the Chicago Mill Game Management Area in Tensas, Franklin and Madison.

In the Monroe area, the season will be open in parts of Union, Morehouse, Madison, Franklin, Catahoula, Concordia, and Tensas while in South Louisiana it'll be open in East Feliciana, East Baton Rouge, Livingston, St. Helena, Tangipahoa, Washington and St. Tammany.

This should spread the hunters out considerably, although each year the turkey season attracts more people to the woods. In fact, the problem of turkey hunting is not necessarily locating a gobbler but finding one that isn't being called at by a gang of hunters.

But from all reports there will be enough turkeys to go around, since the hatch was good, or so we've been told. We've had an increase in the turkey population for the past several years.

You'll recall that it wasn't too many years ago when the wild turkey disappeared from the scene. Thanks to a restocking program, Mr. Tom made a comeback and is doing splendidly.

Turkeys are back in the Delta in goodly numbers and they're on the scene in Morehouse and Union. And in a few years from now, Ouachita will have a turkey population from a transplanting program on the Russell Sage Wildlife Management Area. About a dozen birds were released on Russell Sage last year, then hatched. A half dozen have been released this year.

Incidentially, the Louisiana Wild Life & Fisheries Commission hopes to have turkeys all over the state within the next few years. Turkey development is one of the commission's pet projects.

Louisiana, of course, does not compare with states like Texas in turkey population. That's one reason why our season comes in the spring. If it was in the fall, hunters out for squirrels or deer would kill more gobblers accidentially than they do intentionally during the spring.

Arkansas, however, has a spring season, even though Arkansas has a lot more turkeys than Louisiana has. The season in Arkansas this year opens April 1 for four days, then again April 13-16th. State officials estimate that over 1,000 turkeys will be killed in Arkansas, which is a much bigger kill than Louisiana has had during the past few years.

However, over 50 per cent of the kill in Arkansas occurs in only three counties — Desha, Lee and Arkansas — even though the season is open in about 31 counties.

Arkansas, too, has enjoyed an increased in the gobbler population, although the commission a few years back conducted a survey that showed limiting factors on the population to be:

1. Destruction and changes in habitat. 2. Hogs and cattle. 3. Diseases. 4. Illegal hunting. 5. Weather.

These same factors would apply to the Louisiana scene.

Weather, of course, is always a big factor in the hunt itself. You've got to have a good morning or afternoon, and it must be still enough to hear the birds when they sound off.

And when they do, well, that's when the pros take over and the amateurs cut out.

A New Administration

With a new administration taking office May 12th, there's a lot of speculation about appointments yet to be made by Gov.-Elect John McKeithen.

This certainly is true in regards to the wildlife commission and its director.

In a joking manner, Director L. D. Young Jr. told the Louisiana Wildlife Federation at Shreveport last weekend that he probably would be "fired." Young was referring to Louisiana's age-old custom of changing department heads with each administration.

A lot of second - guessers believe Ernest Clements, a former wildlife director who supported McKeithen, will succeed Young. We've not saying that he won't, but Clements told us that he doesn't expect be become director. Some of McKeithen's closest associates are saying the same.

Clements already has a good job as a member of the Public Service Commission.

Meantime, the scramble is on for appointments to the various boards and commissions, including the Wild Life & Fisheries Commission. Several men are interested in an appointment to the wildlife commission from the Fifth District, which is not represented on the commission at the present.

Unless the picture changes after this Friday afternoon writing, McKeithen, however, is keeping his business close to his chest. His silence is causing anxiety.

If you're interested, trap and skeeting shooting is an excellent way to improve your eye. Better yet, it's a good way to stay in shooting shape for the seasons next fall and winter.

The Pine Hills Gun Club wants new members.

SHORTSTOP Marl Carter, Lake City, Ark., again one of Arkansas's leading hitters, will start for the Razorbacks when they meet Northeast here on April 1-2. Carter batted .369 as a sophomore two years ago and is currently hitting .300.

ON HOLIDAY TOUR

Hogs Stopping At Reservation

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (Special) — The Arkansas Razorbacks head south for a 10-day baseball swing that will take them to Little Rock, Memphis and to Louisiana over the U of A's spring holiday period. The Porkers, plagued by defensive problems in dropping their first two games of the season, play Memphis State two games there Monday and Tuesday.

The trip continues with Arkansas meeting Northeast Louisiana at Monroe on Wednesday and Thursday; then to Shreveport for a Friday-Saturday series with Centenary.

The two 10-innings losses to Buena Vista earlier this week dictated defensive changes for Coach Bill Ferrell's Razorbacks. Although hitting an even .300 as a team, the Porkers have committed 11 errors in two contests and have not been able to complete the key double-play. Add 17 walks given up by the Razorback pitching staff — and Ferrell has a double-headache.

"We're still not certain about what changes will be made — but we've got to strengthen first and second base defensively," said Ferrell. "Kenny Hatfield (second baseman) is hitting well for us and might go to the outfield," commented Ferrell. Hatfield has a .444 mark, leads the team with five RBI's and has the only home run.

"We just haven't decided what to do at first base — but it's possible that Jim Jay or Jim Lindsey might be moved there," Ferrell pointed out. The UofA coach did add that sophomore Jeff Pearson would move to second base. He has not yet played this year.

Ferrell was not overly concerned about his pitching staff. "It still looks like it could be a strong one," he said. "We just haven't been able to get in enough outdoor work this spring. We might wind up with five good starting pitchers within a week or 10 days. The trip south should help us," he observed.

Grambling Set For Record Try At Texas Relays

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Keep a list of track records handy for quick reference when the 37th Texas Relays open next Friday. You may have to make some new entries.

That's especially true in the relays' college division where Grambling College of Louisiana will challenge Texas Southern University's domination of the running events.

Since it began competing in the relays in 1962, the Houston school has won every college division relay — all five in 1962 and six last year. TSU also holds the relays record in every baton race — the 440, 880, mile, sprint medley, two-mile and distance medley relays.

Last week in Houston, Grambling was clocked in 40.3 in the 440 relay and 1:24.1 in the 880 relay, beating TSU in both races and recording the fastest times in the nation this year for those two events.

Bragan Denies Plans To Trade His Shortstop

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Rumors have been making the rounds in Florida training camps that the Milwaukee Braves are trying to trade shortstop Roy McMillan for a starting pitcher, but Manager Bobby Bragan said Saturday, "we have nothing on the fire as far as I know."

Bragan would not commit himself on his choice between McMillan and Denny Menke as his opening day shortstop, saying, "our shortstop problem is a nice one to have. I feel secure regardless of who happens to be out there."

The rainout of Saturday's exhibition with the Cincinnati Reds postponed catcher Joe Torre's starting debut after his long holdout. Torre will catch and Warren Spahn will attempt to go seven innings for the first time this spring when the Braves meet the St. Louis Cardinals at St. Petersburg Sunday.

Capitol Race Taken By Ahoy In Record Time

LAUREL, Md. (AP)—Jaclyn Stable's Ahoy streaked to a three-length victory in track record time of 1:10 3-5 for six furlongs Saturday in the $22,275 Capitol Handicap at Laurel.

Ahoy, carrying 130 pounds and the favorite's role, led throughout and trimmed two fifths of a second off the old record shared by Paino Jim, Accordant and Coppahaunk. Howard Grant rode the winner.

Dorwill Stable's Cosdave, part of an entry with Jet Traffic , and October House Farm's Near Man finished in a dead heat for second.

Ahoy returned $2.60 and $2.20 to his backers in the crowd of 20,600. The Cosdave-Jet Traffic entry and Near Man paid $2.20 after the dead heat.

'OLE MAN BASEBALL'

Mr. Rickey Says Pitching Is Key To Cardinals' Hopes

ST.PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — "Long distance call for Mr. Rickey, Mr. Branch Rickey." The word buzzed around Al Lang Field.

Ken Blackburn, Mr. Rickey's efficient secretary, scurried into the St. Louis Cardinals' office to hold the call. Mr. Rickey was on the way.

The bushy brows were snow white and a handsome straw hat topped his massive, leonine features. He came down the concrete walk at the side of the stands, walking firmly but moving slowly with the help of a cane.

"Hello, Bill. So nice to hear your voice," the booming voice crashed through the sound barrier of a thin partition. You didn't have to eavesdrop to know that Bill Shea had called to invite the 82-year-old baseball pioneer to help open Shea Stadium in New York in April.

"I would dearly love to be there," Mr. Rickey said later in a box behind home plate where he could watch the Cardinal pitchers. "But I had to decline. I wanted to be with the club."

"This club" once again is the St. Louis Cardinals. After straying to Brooklyn and Pittsburgh, B.R. returned to the Cards in August of 1962 as a "special consultant."

"This team has a chance to win if Ray Washburn and Harry Fanok can perform," said Mr. Rickey — nobody, except D Dean, calls him Branch. "And that 'if' is something that can can be resolved. The pitching is very much better than I thought last year. It was hurt when we lost Washburn with a sore arm. It would be hurt again if we should lose Washburn."

"That boy should be one of the greatest pitchers in baseball," he said. "Nobody in baseball throws harder.

"He reminds me of Paul Dean when he first came along. When he walks somebody and allows a hit he falls back on the 'I'll fog it by him' theory. He must develop the calm, deliberate, sang froid, veteranized approach.

"When Bill Hallahan came along he had a correctable fault. He didn't see the plate because he was looking at his feet. When we recalled him from Houston he came up to me and said, 'Mr. Rickey I know I can win up here.' I knew he could, too. All he needed was the confidence. That is the secret—having 30 men who want to win more than any other team. That 'we're going to beat you' spirit. Philadelphia had it in 1950 and Pittsburgh in 1960.

"Every club has to watch the deadline on age. When you have four or five men who are not kids you have to be ready. I don't think age has overtaken anybody on our club. We can make more runs than any club in the league. If our pitching is as good—and that is our if—we have an edge."

"Excuse me for interrupting," he apologized. "I just wanted to say hello. My name is Miller. I played for you when you coached football at Allegheny in 1905. Do you remember me?"

Mr. Rickey turned quickly. "Remember you? Of course, I do. You were a back, weren't you. Some day we must get together and talk over old times. I was back at the school when they dedicated a new field. Saw a number of the boys. They aren't boys any more."

After the man left, Rickey leaned over and whispered as though deep in a conspiracy, "They had me doing two jobs out there. Coaching football and teaching English."

The thought struck you as B. R. returned to his job of analyzing the pitchers. Why is this man not in the Hall of Fame? What clumsy rule bars this man from smelling the roses until it is too late? Whatever the rule, it should be breached to make room at Cooperstown for Branch Rickey, a man who belcngs with the great pioneers of the game.

Gay Revoke Wins Oaklawn Handicap Run

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP)—Gomer Evans' Gay Revoke threaded his way out of the pack and streaked to victory in the $25,000 added Oaklawn Handicap at Oaklawn Park Saturday.

The 6-year-old gelding, piloted by Ronnie Campbell, moved from 13th place in a field of 15 to beat Jacnot Stable's Country Squire by a neck in the 1 1-16th mile test.

Gay Revoke had moved up to sixth at the last turn, and then overtook Country Squire in the last strides.

The winner ran the distance of slow track in 1:43 4-5 paying $14.20, $8. and $4.80. Country Squire returned $6.20 and $4.60 and Rob Roy III paid $3.60.

The event grossed $29,725, the richest race in Oaklawn history. The winner's share was $19,321.25.

Meeting Slated By Wildlife Unit Tuesday Night

The Ouachita Wildlife Unit will hold a general business session Tuesday night, including a discussion on the proposed $1 universal fishing license.

Sportsmen are invited to attend the meeting at 7:30 p.m. at the Virginia Hotel, according to J. B. Thoman, club president.

Thoman said several public officials had been invited to attend for the discussion on the fishing license, sponsored almost annually in the Legislature by the Louisiana Wildlife Federation.

Besides the license discussion, Thoman said the club would draft plans for the annual fishing contest, sponsored each summer by the Ouachita Wildlife Unit.

In addition, the state convention, held last weekend at Shreveport, will be reviewed. Thoman said a highlight of the meeting would be the discussion of resolutions adopted at the convention.

Cubs Seeking Replacement For Ken Hubbs

MESA, Ariz. (AP)—The Chicago Cubs, seeking a successor to the late Ken Hubbs at second base, bought 30-year-old Joe Amalfitano from Tacoma, Wash., of the Pacific Coast League Saturday.

The Cubs reportedly paid the major league waiver price of $20,000 for the right-handed hitting and throwing infielder. He is a six-year National League veteran with the San Francisco Giants and Houston Colts.

Amalfitano has been working out with the Los Angeles Angels during spring training. He will report to the Cubs for their game with the Boston Red Sox Monday at Scottsdale, Ariz.

AT SOUTHWESTERN

Pennel Heads Relay Entrants

Pennel, named the nation's Outstanding Track and Field Athlete of 1963 by the Academy of Sports Writers, notified relays director David Fisher that he will come to Lafayette to compete in the 36th annual meet.

Billed as the South's oldest and largest cinder carnival, the upcoming edition is scheduled Saturday, April 11, at USL's McNaspy Stadium. High school teams will compete Wednesday and Thursday, April 8-9.

Pennel, who also received the coveted Sullivan Memorial Trophy, is the only man in track history to vault over 17 feet. He soared 17 ft. ¾ in. in the Gold Coast AAU meet last August in Miami, which is Pennel's hometown.

The 23-year-old star recently received his degree from Northeast Louisiana State College. He now resides with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Pennel of Miami, and has his sights set on representing the U.S. in the 1964 Olympics at Tokyo.

In less than six months last year Pennel broke or tied the world record seven times, cleared 16 feet or better in 21 meets and then became the first to clear 17 feet.

During his fabulous career at Northeast he was chosen Gulf States Conference Athlete-of-the-Year for 1962-63. He also broad jumped 23 ft. 8 in. to set another school record.

Pennel set a new Southwestern Relays record last April when he placed first with a vault of 16 ft. ¼ in.

The pole vault will be an 'open event' on the SW Relays schedule which features a total of 27 events on Saturday's agenda. Other open events include the triple jump, 400 meter dash, 400 meter hurdles, and two-mile run.

Fisher said that 15 schools will be represented in the big University - College division April 11. The deadline for submitting entries — both colleges and high schools — is next Tuesday noon, March 31.

Listed by conference affiliation, schools which have entered one or more events are as follows:

Southeastern — LSU, Tulane, Mississippi, Mississippi State.

Southwest — Rice University.

Southland —Lamar State College.

Lone Star—Stephen F. Austin State.

Independents — University of Houton, Florida State.

Relays officials predict over 400 athletes will perform in the University and the Junior College - Freshman divisions, and about 2,000 in the five high school classes.

THE SPORTS PATROL

Spats Spice Sports Since Finley Flaps, Flounders

By STEVE SNIDER

Owner Charley Finley of the Kansas City Athletics, who took on the entire American League with a threat to move to Louisville, now is battling the New York Yankees over short foul lines at Yankee Stadium and there's always Cassius Clay, the PGA, the NCAA and the AAU.

All this and more we've had in 1964 even before the first beanball has been fired or the first spitball charge levelled at Lew Burdette of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Sandy Koufax has battled General Manager Buzz Bavasi of the world champion Los Angeles Dodgers and before the smoke cleared on that one Frank Howard tangled with Buzz, threatening retirement.

In Boston, there's sniping at Red Sox Manager Johnny Pesky and his slugger, Dick Stuart.

In New York, General Manager Ralph Houk of the New York Yankees drew some criticism for his handling of pitcher Jim Bouton's holdout siege, apparently threatening to assess a fine if Jim didn't come to terms. Fines aren't allowed in such cases.

There are some who insist our Winter Olympic team made a disgraceful showing and undermined American prestige abroad — but didn't come up with any constructive suggestions on how to produce gold medal winners.

Cases involving baseball holdouts have been or presumably will be settled to the satisfaction of all since the give - and-take of salary confabs has a way of wearing off soon after the armistice.

But the lads assigned to the boxing beat are in a permanent whirl over Cassius Clay, the most unpredictable character since Dizzy Dean.

Old Diz was a beaut in his heyday. He regarded baseball writers as such wonderful friends he couldn't bear to give the same story to two different reporters. There were, therefore, many versions of even the simplest items, including his own name.

It was either Jerome Herman Dean or Jay Hannah Dean, the history books preferring the latter.

Clay also is a non-stop talker on marvelous endurance. His activities in religion and on racial issues take him far outside the realm of boxing and he has tread on several toes in the process.

The PGA is feudin' with tournament sponsors over the disposition of television loot at those tournaments attractive enough to rate TV exposure. And some of the golf pros, including Arnold Palmer, aren't too sure the PGA has devised the right plan yet.

The feud between the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) and Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) presumably will be with us for another four years although most of the jockeying is behind the scenes at the moment.

Turkey Hunts On Tap Next

With Sam Hanna

Season Opens Saturday

If you're a turkey hunter or a would-be turkey hunter as most of us are, then these nippy spring mornings are a lot like the fall of the year just before the squirrel season opens.

They're made to order to get you in the right frame of mind for the turkey season. If you've ever heard a wild gobbler, you know what we mean.

Louisiana's annual spring season on turkeys opens Saturday for 16 days — the longest turkey season in modern times. It'll run through April 19th in 14 parishes.

The bag limit will be the same as it has been — one per season for each hunter, who must have a big game license with a turkey tag. Permits are a must for each hunter on the Chicago Mill Game Management Area in Tensas, Franklin and Madison.

In the Monroe area, the season will be open in parts of Union, Morehouse, Madison, Franklin, Catahoula, Concordia, and Tensas while in South Louisiana it'll be open in East Feliciana, East Baton Rouge, Livingston, St. Helena, Tangipahoa, Washington and St. Tammany.

This should spread the hunters out considerably, although each year the turkey season attracts more people to the woods. In fact, the problem of turkey hunting is not necessarily locating a gobbler but finding one that isn't being called at by a gang of hunters.

But from all reports there will be enough turkeys to go around, since the hatch was good, or so we've been told. We've had an increase in the turkey population for the past several years.

You'll recall that it wasn't too many years ago when the wild turkey disappeared from the scene. Thanks to a restocking program, Mr. Tom made a comeback and is doing splendidly.

Turkeys are back in the Delta in goodly numbers and they're on the scene in Morehouse and Union. And in a few years from now, Onachita will have a turkey population from a transplanting program on the Russell Sage Wildlife Management Area. About a dozen birds were released on Russell Sage last year, then hatched. A half dozen have been released this year.

Incidentially, the Louisiana Wild Life & Fisheries Commission hopes to have turkeys all over the state within the next few years. Turkey development is one of the commission's pet projects.

Louisiana, of course, does not compare with states like Texas in turkey population. That's one reason why our season comes in the spring. If it was in the fall, hunters out for squirrels or deer would kill more gobblers accidentially than they do intentionally during the spring.

Arkansas, however, has a spring season, even though Arkansas has a lot more turkeys than Louisiana has. The season in Arkansas this year opens April 1 for four days, then again April 13-16th. State officials estimate that over 1,000 turkeys will be killed in Arkansas, which is a much bigger kill than Louisiana has had during the past few years.

However, over 50 per cent of the kill in Arkansas occurs in only three counties — Desha, Lee and Arkansas — even though the season is open in about 31 counties.

Arkansas, too, has enjoyed an increased in the gobbler population, although the commission a few years back conducted a survey that showed limiting factors on the population to be:

1. Destruction and changes in habitat. 2. Hogs and cattle. 3. Diseases. 4. Illegal hunting. 5. Weather.

These same factors would apply to the Louisiana scene.

Weather, of course, is always a big factor in the hunt itself. You've got to have a good morning or afternoon, and it must be still enough to hear the birds when they sound off.

And when they do, well, that's when the pros take over and the amateurs cut out.

SHORTSTOP Marl Carter, Lake City, Ark., again one of Arkansas's leading hitters, will start for the Razorbacks when they meet Northeast here on April 1-2. Carter batted .369 as a sophomore two years ago and is currently hitting .300.

ON HOLIDAY TOUR

Hogs Stopping At Reservation

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (Special) — The Arkansas Razorbacks head south for a 10-day baseball swing that will take them to Little Rock, Memphis and to Louisiana over the U of A's spring holiday period. The Porkers, plagued by defensive problems in dropping their first two games of the season, play Memphis State two games there Monday and Tuesday.

The trip continues with Arkansas meeting Northeast Louisiana at Monroe on Wednesday and Thursday; then to Shreveport for a Friday-Saturday series with Centenary.

The two 10-innings losses to Buena Vista earlier this week dictated defensive changes for Coach Bill Ferrell's Razorbacks. Although hitting an even .300 as a team, the Porkers have committed 11 errors in two contests and have not been able to complete the key double-play. Add 17 walks given up by the Razorback pitching staff — and Ferrell has a double-headache.

"We're still not certain about what changes will be made — but we've got to strengthen first and second base defensively," said Ferrell. "Kenny Hatfield (second baseman) is hitting well for us and might go to the outfield," commented Ferrell. Hatfield has a .444 mark, leads the team with five RBI's and has the only home run.

"We just haven't decided what to do at first base — but it's possible that Jim Jay or Jim Lindsey might be moved there," Ferrell pointed out. The UofA coach did add that sophomore Jeff Pearson would move to second base. He has not yet played this year.

Ferrell was not overly concerned about his pitching staff. "It still looks like it could be a strong one," he said. "We just haven't been able to get in enough outdoor work this spring. We might wind up with five good starting pitchers within a week or 10 days. The trip south should help us," he observed.

Grambling Set For Record Try At Texas Relays

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Keep a list of track records handy for quick reference when the 37th Texas Relays open next Friday. You may have to make some new entries.

That's especially true in the relays' college division where Grambling College of Louisiana will challenge Texas Southern University's domination of the running events.

Since it began competing in the relays in 1962, the Houston school has won every college division relay — all five in 1962 and six last year. TSU also holds the relays record in every baton race — the 440, 880, mile, sprint medley, two-mile and distance medley relays.

Last week in Houston, Grambling was clocked in 40.3 in the 440 relay and 1:24.1 in the 880 relay, beating TSU in both races and recording the fastest times in the nation this year for those two events.

'OLE MAN BASEBALL'

Mr. Rickey Says Pitching Is Key To Cardinals' Hopes

ST.PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — "Long distance call for Mr. Rickey, Mr. Branch Rickey." The word buzzed around Al Lang Field.

Ken Blackburn, Mr. Rickey's efficient secretary, scurried into the St. Louis Cardinals' office to hold the call. Mr. Rickey was on the way.

The bushy brows were snow white and a handsome straw hat topped his massive, leonine features. He came down the concrete walk at the side of the stands, walking firmly but moving slowly with the help of a cane.

"Hello, Bill. So nice to hear your voice," the booming voice crashed through the sound barrier of a thin partition. You didn't have to eavesdrop to know that Bill Shea had called to invite the 82-year-old baseball pioneer to help open Shea Stadium in New York in April.

"I would dearly love to be there," Mr. Rickey said later in a box behind home plate where he could watch the Cardinal pitchers. "But I had to decline. I wanted to be with the club."

"This club" once again is the St. Louis Cardinals. After straying to Brooklyn and Pittsburgh, B.R. returned to the Cards in August of 1962 as a "special consultant."

"This team has a chance to win if Ray Washburn and Harry Fanok can perform," said Mr. Rickey — nobody, except D Dean, calls him Branch. "And that 'if' is something that can can be resolved. The pitching is very much better than I thought last year. It was hurt when we lost Washburn with a sore arm. It would be hurt again if we should lose Washburn."

"That boy should be one of the greatest pitchers in baseball," he said. "Nobody in baseball throws harder.

"He reminds me of Paul Dean when he first came along. When he walks somebody and allows a hit he falls back on the 'I'll fog it by him' theory. He must develop the calm, deliberate, sang froid, veteranized approach.

"When Bill Hallahan came along he had a correctable fault. He didn't see the plate because he was looking at his feet. When we recalled him from Houston he came up to me and said, 'Mr. Rickey I know I can win up here.' I knew he could, too. All he needed was the confidence. That is the secret—having 30 men who want to win more than any other team. That 'we're going to beat you' spirit. Philadelphia had it in 1950 and Pittsburgh in 1960.

"Every club has to watch the deadline on age. When you have four or five men who are not kids you have to be ready. I don't think age has overtaken anybody on our club. We can make more runs than any club in the league. If our pitching is as good—and that is our if—we have an edge."

"Excuse me for interrupting," he apologized. "I just wanted to say hello. My name is Miller. I played for you when you coached football at Allegheny in 1905. Do you remember me?"

Mr. Rickey turned quickly. "Remember you? Of course, I do. You were a back, weren't you. Some day we must get together and talk over old times. I was back at the school when they dedicated a new field. Saw a number of the boys. They aren't boys any more."

After the man left, Rickey leaned over and whispered as though deep in a conspiracy. "They had me doing two jobs out there. Coaching football and teaching English."

The thought struck you as B. R. returned to his job of analyzing the pitchers. Why is this man not in the Hall of Fame? What clumsy rule bars this man from smelling the roses until it is too late? Whatever the rule, it should be breached to make room at Cooperstown for Branch Rickey, a man who belongs with the great pioneers of the game.

Gay Revoke Wins Oaklawn Handicap Run

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP)—Gomer Evans' Gay Revoke threaded his way out of the pack and streaked to victory in the $25,000 added Oaklawn Handicap at Oaklawn Park Saturday.

The 6-year-old gelding, piloted by Ronnie Campbell, moved from 13th place in a field of 15 to beat Jacnot Stable's Country Squire by a neck in the 1 1-16th mile test.

Gay Revoke had moved up to sixth at the last turn, and then overtook Country Squire in the last strides.

The winner ran the distance of slow track in 1:43 4-5 paying $14.20, $8. and $4.80. Country Squire returned $6.20 and $4.60 and Rob Roy III paid $3.60.

The event grossed $29,725, the richest race in Oaklawn history. The winner's share was $19,-321.25.

Meeting Slated By Wildlife Unit Tuesday Night

The Ouachita Wildlife Unit will hold a general business session Tuesday night, including a discussion on the proposed $1 universal fishing license.

Sportsmen are invited to attend the meeting at 7:30 p.m. at the Virginia Hotel, according to J. B. Thoman, club president.

Thoman said several public officials had been invited to attend for the discussion on the fishing license, sponsored almost annually in the Legislature by the Louisiana Wildlife Federation.

Besides the license discussion, Thoman said the club would draft plans for the annual fishing contest, sponsored each summer by the Ouachita Wildlife Unit.

In addition, the state convention, held last weekend at Shreveport, will be reviewed. Thoman said a highlight of the meeting would be the discussion of resolutions adopted at the convention.

Bragan Denies Plans To Trade His Shortstop

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Rumors have been making the rounds in Florida training camps that the Milwaukee Braves are trying to trade shortstop Roy McMillan for a starting pitcher, but Manager Bobby Bragan said Saturday, "we have nothing on the fire as far as I know."

Bragan would not commit himself on his choice between McMillan and Denny Menke as his opening day shortstop, saying, "our shortstop problem is a nice one to have. I feel secure regardless of who happens to be out there."

The rainout of Saturday's exhibition with the Cincinnati Reds postponed catcher Joe Torre's starting debut after his long holdout. Torre will catch and Warren Spahn will attempt to go seven innings for the first time this spring when the Braves meet the St. Louis Cardinals at St. Petersburg Sunday.

Capitol Race Taken By Ahoy In Record Time

LAUREL, Md. (AP)—Jaclyn Stable's Ahoy streaked to a three-length victory in track record time of 1:10 3-5 for six furlongs Saturday in the $22,275 Capitol Handicap at Laurel.

Ahoy, carrying 130 pounds and the favorite's role, led throughout and trimmed two fifths of a second off the old record shared by Paino Jim, Accordant and Coppahaunk. Howard Grant rode the winner.

Dorwill Stable's Cosdave, part of an entry with Jet Traffic , and October House Farm's Near Man finished in a dead heat for second.

Ahoy returned $2.60 and $2.20 to his backers in the crowd of 20,600. The Cosdave-Jet Traffic entry and Near Man paid $2.20 after the dead heat.

AT SOUTHWESTERN

Pennel Heads Relay Entrants

Pennel, named the nation's Outstanding Track and Field Athlete of 1963 by the Academy of Sports Writers, notified relays director David Fisher that he will come to Lafayette to compete in the 36th annual meet.

Billed as the South's oldest and largest cinder carnival, the upcoming edition is scheduled Saturday, April 11, at USL's McNaspy Stadium. High school teams will compete Wednesday and Thursday, April 8-9.

Pennel, who also received the coveted Sullivan Memorial Trophy, is the only man in track history to vault over 17 feet. He soared 17 ft. ¾ in. in the Gold Coast AAU meet last August in Miami, which is Pennel's hometown.

The 23-year-old star recently received his degree from Northeast Louisiana State College. He now resides with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Pennel of Miami, and has his sights set on representing the U.S. in the 1964 Olympics at Tokyo.

In less than six months last year Pennel broke or tied the world record seven times, cleared 16 feet or better in 21 meets and then became the first to clear 17 feet.

During his fabulous career at Northeast he was chosen Gulf States Conference Athlete-of-the-Year for 1962-63. He also broad jumped 23 ft. 8 in. to set another school record.

Pennel set a new Southwestern Relays record last April when he placed first with a vault of 16 ft. ¼ in.

The pole vault will be an 'open event' on the SW Relays schedule which features a total of 27 events on Saturday's agenda. Other open events include the triple jump, 400 meter dash, 400 meter hurdles, and two-mile run.

Fisher said that 15 schools will be represented in the big University - College division April 11. The deadline for submitting entries — both colleges and high schools — is next Tuesday noon, March 31.

Listed by conference affiliation, schools which have entered one or more events are as follows:

Southeastern — LSU, Tulane, Mississippi, Mississippi State.

Southwest — Rice University.

Southland —Lamar State College.

Independents — University of Houton, Florida State.

Relays officials predict over 400 athletes will perform in the University and the Junior College - Freshman divisions, and about 2,000 in the five high school classes.

Cubs Seeking Replacement For Ken Hubbs

MESA, Ariz. (AP)—The Chicago Cubs, seeking a successor to the late Ken Hubbs at second base, bought 30-year-old Joe Amalfitano from Tacoma, Wash., of the Pacific Coast League Saturday.

The Cubs reportedly paid the major league waiver price of $20,000 for the right-handed hitting and throwing infielder. He is a six-year National League veteran with the San Francisco Giants and Houston Colts.

Amalfitano has been working out with the Los Angeles Angels during spring training. He will report to the Cubs for their game with the Boston Red Sox Monday at Scottsdale, Ariz.

THE SPORTS PATROL

Spats Spice Sports Since Finley Flaps, Flounders

By STEVE SNIDER

Owner Charley Finley of the Kansas City Athletics, who took on the entire American League with a threat to move to Louisville, now is battling the New York Yankees over short foul lines at Yankee Stadium and there's always Cassius Clay, the PGA, the NCAA and the AAU.

All this and more we've had in 1964 even before the first beanball has been fired or the first spitball charge levelled at Lew Burdette of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Sandy Koufax has battled General Manager Buzz Bavasi of the world champion Los Angeles Dodgers and before the smoke cleared on that one Frank Howard tangled with Buzz, threatening retirement.

In Boston, there's sniping at Red Sox Manager Johnny Pesky and his slugger, Dick Stuart.

In New York, General Manager Ralph Houk of the New York Yankees drew some criticism for his handling of pitcher Jim Bouton's holdout siege, apparently threatening to assess a fine if Jim didn't come to terms. Fines aren't allowed in such cases.

There are some who insist our Winter Olympic team made a disgraceful showing and undermined American prestige abroad — but didn't come up with any constructive suggestions on how to produce gold medal winners.

Cases involving baseball holdouts have been or presumably will be settled to the satisfaction of all since the give - and-take of salary confabs has a way of wearing off soon after the armistice.

But the lads assigned to the boxing beat are in a permanent whirl over Cassius Clay, the most unpredictable character since Dizzy Dean.

Old Diz was a beaut in his heyday. He regarded baseball writers as such wonderful friends he couldn't bear to give the same story to two different reporters. There were, therefore, many versions of even the simplest items, including his own name.

It was either Jerome Herman Dean or Jay Hannah Dean, the history books preferring the latter.

Clay also is a non-stop talker on marvelous endurance. His activities in religion and on racial issues take him far outside the realm of boxing and he has tread on several toes in the process.

The PGA is feudin' with tournament sponsors over the disposition of television loot at those tournaments attractive enough to rate TV exposure. And some of the golf pros, including Arnold Palmer, aren't too sure the PGA has devised the right plan yet.

The feud between the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) and Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) presumably will be with us for another four years although most of the jockeying is behind the scenes at the moment.

But don't bet on it.

REMARQUE'S LATEST

Newest Novel Tops About Love, Danger

THE NIGHT IN LISBON. By Erich Maria Remarque Harcourt, Brace. $4.95.

There is a high-voltage tension in Remarque's novel about a man and woman fleeing as refugees from Germany of World War II.

The narrative is told in neutral Lisbon of 1942, by a tragic figure who, like an ancient mariner, seizes upon a stranger to pour out his story in the long hours of the night.

The narrator already was a refugee from the Nazis in 1939, when a dying man named Josef Schwarz gave him his passport and a few valuables. In his new role under the assumed name of Schwarz, he felt compelled to slip back across the German border and find his wife Helen.

He knew the dangers, for Helen's brother Georg was a brutal Nazi who once before had betrayed him to the police. What he did not know was that Helen herself was under a dark sentence of fate.

So this is a touch-and-go story of flight, of prison camps, forged documents, border incidents and dread gamblers in several European countries, including occupied France.

Schwarz and his wife survived, schemed, fled, suffered and caught tenuously at hope, with anguished derelicts all around them. They finally reached a haven in Portugal as time was running out for Helen.

Remarque's novel presents a gripping pattern of danger and survival, but in danger and survival, but it encompasses more than that. He catches in the web of fear a strong story of love.

Hard Book To Read But Interesting

Matson has marshalled a prodigious array of intellectual articlery to blast away at the image of man which was created by 19th Century science.

He says it is a broken image, because in its robot-like character it is incomplete. But he holds out hope that a new humanism can restore the human race to the condition of "Whole Man."

He blames science of the last century for adopting a completely mechanistic, cause - and - effect approach to the study of man, based on the physics of Newton, thereby turning even psychology and politics into the rigid patterns of behaviorism. And it is behaviorism that he attacks at full tilt.

His hope for the future is based on a new trend in science itself — ironically, in nuclear physics. He points out that the principle of uncertainty which grew out of the quantum theory was followed by a further concept of complementarity, in which two alternating descriptions are used to describe a phenomenon. He sees this as a revolution against rigid, mechanistic science, and reaches into such fields as biology and psychotherapy to cite parallel tendencies.

To the layman, the author's use of so may $12 words and a saturation of footnotes may present a formidable obstacle. It is not an easy book to read unless you have at least a small acquaintance with the whole kaleidoscope of modern knowledge. But for those who can keep the autthor's pace, it is a satisfying, high-level view of current ideas about man.

Presidential Campaign In '64 Outlined

'68. By Peter Scaevola. Norton. $4.50.

Here is a fictional account, filled with controversial ideas, of the presidential campaign of 1968. It raises a loud question of whether It Could Happen Here.

The author has assumed a special set of conditions, in which a strong tide of conservatism is sweeping the country. He does not concern himself with the contest of one candidate against another. He concentrates on the anti-administration candidate, by implication a Republican. Mainly it is the story of an ambitious demagogue who cynically takes advantage of every bit of political hate and prejudice to advance his own interests.

Scaevola has assumed that in 1968 there has been a sharp economic recession in the United States; that Russia has made many advances in the Cold War; that Mexico has taken a Red tinge; that Americans are engaged in violent acts of anti-Semitism. He also has assumed — and this may cause the reader to wonder — that the civil rights movement has subsided entirely.

The anit-administration candidate is Billy Reason, a former governor of Illinois, a hardhsell man who knows that he is a megalomaniac and glories in the fact. The contrasting personality is Jim van den Haag, a newspaper man on leave, who has joined the candidate's staff out of loyalty to his late father's friendship with Reason.

Jim, a political moderate, is shocked and revolted by Reason's unethical use of political tricks and his tendency to play into the hands of right-wing extremists. He finally leaves the campaign and makes a futile gesture against Reason.

The author has managed to make Reason a plausible character, with enough human characteristics to raise him above the level of a paper figure. He conveys the anguish of Jim's involvement in a political situation for which he had no relish. He also has given a sense of reality — though it is flawed here and there to the rough pace of the campaign. This is a melodramatic bit of fiction that contains many argumentative facets.

Sin Is Sordid Seen In Flesh

Passion Flowers in Italy, by Rosalind Erskine (Simon and Schuster $3.95): Sin is exciting when contemplated from a distance. But it can get rather sordid when seen in the flesh.

That seems to be the moral which lurks behind this funny tale of an English schoolgirl bent on becoming the world's most wicked adolescent. But it doesn't really detract from the general hilarity.

In "The Passion Flower Hotel," the author's first book, Sarah Callender is tossed out of a very proper English boarding school for trying to set up a brothel in the gym. Now, in the sequel, she is sent to finish her education in Italy at a strict establishment "for difficult young ladies."

Her precocious head swimming with visions of fast cars and faster men, she plays hooky with a group of high-spirited schoolmates to pursue her studies at Turin bars and midnight bathing parties. But her plans of romance with a tall, suave Italian (any tall, suave Italian will do) misfire when tested.

Wild Animals Are His Love

I Walk With Lions, by Mervyn Cowie (Macmillan $4.95): Cowie has loved wild animals all his life and this has benefited both man and beast. This books tell how Cowie overcame indifference, apathy, red tape and outright opposition in leading the fight to save Africa's wild animals through creation of Kenya's great animal preserves, the Royal National Parks. Cowie, son of a big-game hunter became the parks' first director.

His life's work began one day near Nairobi when, unarmed and on foot, he was confronted suddenly by a lion. He froze in terror, resigned to death. But the lion, after a few heart-chilling moments of visual inspection, strolled off without looking back. "Neither of us meant any harm to the other," Cowie writes. "This was proof to me that man and beast can live in a restricted form of peace. They need not spend their time killing each other, but man must learn to behave properly, and beast must be given a place to live."

THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK

Up-To-Date Split Level Has An Oriental Flair Feature

An unusual double roof effect imparts a subtle oriental flavor to this fine split level home, just enough to add a spark of interest without being distractive.

The elegantly understated facade gives the house a rare quality — call it character — which seems to be on the wane in today's rush for super-efficiency. The house plainly is not extravagant, but there are so construction shortcuts either.

It contains three bedrooms and 2½ baths in a moderate basic area of 1,588 square feet on living and bedroom levels. Dimensions are equally modest: only 52" wide by 31'6" deep.

Architect Lester Cohen designed the house as H-21 in the House of the Week Series.

Inside, its clearly zoned floor plan revolves around a glamorous curved staircase core. The stairs rise gracefully from the entrance foyer to the living room level and then, in a continuing curve, to the balcony above. The rail is delicate and light, and planters on the lower two levels contribute charm. The transformation of a functional necessity into an eye-catching thing of beauty is an example of architect Cohen's artistic skill.

A second half-flight staircase joins the kitchen and lower level. Though it may appear at first to be a superfluous addition, as close as it is to the main staircase, homeowners who have tried the feature say, it clearly is a traffic circulation boon. It prevents intrusions into the formal living area and, equally important, saves countless steps.

The lower level features a graceful foyer with an extra large coat closet, a spacious recreation room, lavatory, and hidden laundry with an adjoining mud closet.

The sidee-ntry garage opens directly to the goyer, thus offering direct access to all three activity areas—kitchen, recreation room or living room.

ADDITIONAL DETAILS

A sweeping bow window in the living room benefits both the indoor and outdoor design of the house. It combines with an elegant fireplace wall as a foral point for furniture arrangements.

The dining room adjoins, and has 6' sliding glass doors leading to the rear terrace. The terrace also has a separate entry from the kitchen, convenient for outdoor dining.

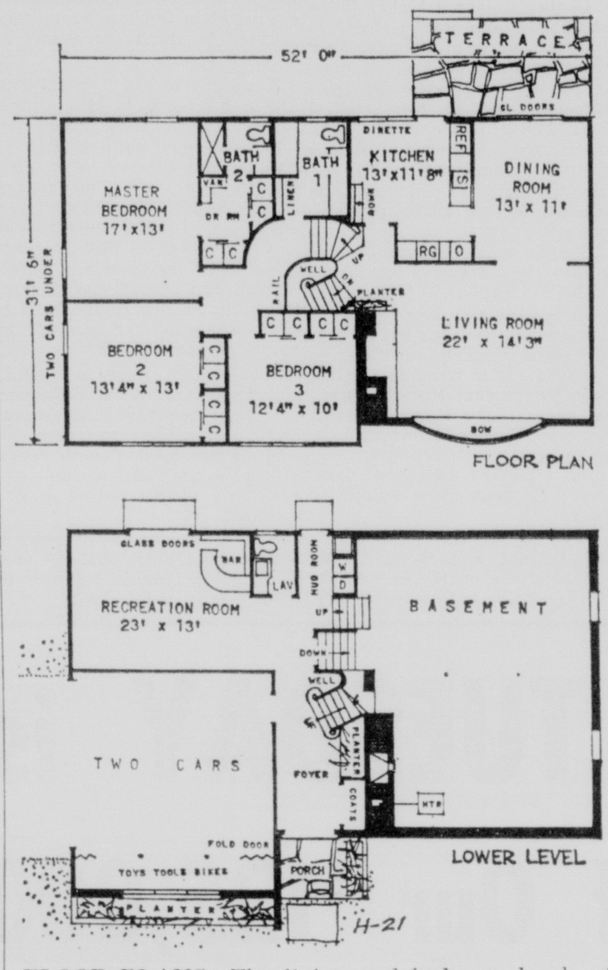

The kitchen is situated as the hub of the daytime activity area. The appliances are nicely arranged, and the room is large enough for a dinette area overlooking the backyard. Dimensions of the kitchen-dinette are 13' by 11'8".

Upstairs, the three bedrooms and two baths are well planned with no wasted hall space. Architect Cohen has even eliminated space consuming corners!

The master bedroom is located in the rear. It is amply proportioned at 17' by 13', and what is noteworthy is that all the wall space is devoted to the bedroom; the closets are located in the adjoining dressing room. The master bath is equipped with a stall shower, and there is a built-in vanity in the dressing area.

All three bedrooms have four closets each. The family bedrooms are large enough to accommodate twin beds. The main bathroom also is family sized, containing double oval sinks in a vanitory counter. The linen closet is located inside the bathroom, where Architect Cohen feels is far more convenient than the hall.

Not only in the sleeping area, but throughout the house as well, storage space is copious. A ceiling scuttle is located in the balcony hall that leads to attic storage space, which is in addition to the large basement beneath the living level. The garage also has built in storage space. Hidden behind folding doors.

FLOOR PLANS: The living and bedroom levels of this home contain a moderate 1,588 square feet of usable space. Note the half-flight of stairs in the rear, connecting the kitchen with the grade level. It saves steps and routes traffic nicely as well.

The first time Mozart's universally admired Requiem Mass in D minor was ever played and sung in an American church was in Boston's Holy Cross Cathedral in January, as a requiem for John F. Kennedy.

This news, which is astonishing to musicians, comes with a complete recording of the nationally televised memorial service in which Richard Cardinal Cushing was celebrant of the requiem mass (RCA Victor-7030).

Mozart's church music, and there is a great deal of it, has long been considered both too difficult and out of keeping with newer ecclesiastical tastes. In this recording his mighty Requiem is given further impact by the cathedral setting, the cardinal celebrant and the occasion.

It was performed by the Boston Symphony with Erich Leinsdorf conducting, assisted by four Boston choruses and four first-flight soloists. Leinsdorf is frequently admired for his rapport with Mozart but it was never more evident than in this recording.

A remark that any competent conductor can make big medicine with Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture is not a reflection on Leonard Bernstein's big medicine-making, with his New York Philharmonic. Also included are that composer's "Marche Slav" and "Capriccio Italien" (Columbia-6477).

The remark becomes pertinent because a less eminent conductor, Robert Sharples, also is making big recorded medicine with it, along with Tchaikovsky's "The Nutcracker" suite (London-21001). What it really amounts to was that the respective recording companies were making the big medicine with stereo techniques.

In this endeavor Bernstein's recording engineers were no match for Sharples'. They used London's advanced and refined techniques called "Phase 4 stereo." With reasonable adequate reproductive equipment it is good enough to sound like the ultimate which it is so far, until phases 5, 6, 7 and so on arrive.

Cesar Franck's unjustly neglected symphonic poems have been given an appreciative recorded performance by the Belgium National Orchestra (the composer was a Belgian, you will recall), with Andre Cluytens conducting. The poems are "Le Chausseur Maudit," "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" and "Redemption." Also Ciccolini was the admirable piano soloist in "Les Djinns" (Angel-36151).

Neat blending old and new also is accomplished by Addison Powell and Walter Bishop on a remarkable single, "Moja Moja Poli-which is sung in Swahili and English by Ray Rivera (Neale 11648).

Is this your child's favorite sport?

Like many youngsters, your child probably spends long hours watching his favorite sports—and precious little time participating in them. If inactivity is the order of the day for your child, he may—like one-third of our school children—be unable to pass minimum physical fitness tests. Many schools are stepping up their programs of physical education. But in a surprisingly large number of them, there is still not enough emphasis on daily, vigorous activity. For the sake of your child's physical and mental progress, make sure that your school puts sufficient emphasis on physical education. To help you evaluate the program in your school, send for the free leaflet offered by the President's Council on Physical Fitness, Washington 25, D. C.

REMARQUE'S LATEST

Newest Novel Tops About Love, Danger

THE NIGHT IN LISBON. By Erich Maria Remarque Harcourt, Brace. $4.95.

There is a high-voltage tension in Remarque's novel about a man and woman fleeing as refugees from Germany of World War II.

The narrative is told in neutral Lisbon of 1942, by a tragic figure who, like an ancient mariner, seizes upon a stranger to pour out his story in the long hours of the night.

The narrator already was a refugee from the Nazis in 1939, when a dying man named Josef Schwarz gave him his passport and a few valuables. In his new role under the assumed name of Schwarz, he felt compelled to slip back across the German border and find his wife Helen.

He knew the dangers, for Helen's brother Georg was a brutal Nazi who once before had betrayed him to the police. What he did not know was that Helen herself was under a dark sentence of fate.

So this is a touch-and-go story of flight, of prison camps, forged documents, border incidents and dread gamblers in several European countries, including occupied France.

Schwarz and his wife survived, schemed, fled, suffered and caught tenuously at hope, with anguished derelicts all around them. They finally reached a haven in Portugal as time was running out for Helen.

Remarque's novel presents a gripping pattern of danger and survival, but in danger and survival, but it encompasses more than that. He catches in the web of fear a strong story of love.

Hard Book To Read But Interesting

Matson has marshalled a prodigious array of intellectual artillery to blast away at the image of man which was created by 19th Century science.

He says it is a broken image, because in its robot-like character it is incomplete. But he holds out hope that a new humanism can restore the human race to the condition of "Whole Man."

He blames science of the last century for adopting a completely mechanistic, cause - and - effect approach to the study of man, based on the physics of Newton, thereby turning even psychology and politics into the rigid patterns of behaviorism. And it is behaviorism that he attacks at full tilt.

His hope for the future is based on a new trend in science itself — ironically, in nuclear physics. He points out that the principle of uncertainty which grew out of the quantum theory was followed by a further concept of complementarity, in which two alternating descriptions are used to describe a phenomenon. He sees this as a revolution against rigid, mechanistic science, and reaches into such fields as biology and psychotherapy to cite parallel tendencies.

To the layman, the author's use of so may $12 words and a saturation of footnotes may present a formidable obstacle. It is not an easy book to read unless you have at least a small acquaintance with the whole kaleidoscope of modern knowledge. But for those who can keep the autthor's pace, it is a satisfying, high-level view of current ideas about man.

Presidential Campaign In '64 Outlined

'68. By Peter Scaevola. Norton. $4.50.

Here is a fictional account, filled with controversial ideas, of the presidential campaign of 1968. It raises a loud question of whether It Could Happen Here.

The author has assumed a special set of conditions, in which a strong tide of conservatism is sweeping the country. He does not concern himself with the contest of one candidate against another. He concentrates on the anti-administration candidate, by implication a Republican. Mainly it is the story of an ambitious demagogue who cynically takes advantage of every bit of political hate and prejudice to advance his own interests.

Scaevola has assumed that in 1968 there has been a sharp economic recession in the United States; that Russia has made many advances in the Cold War; that Mexico has taken a Red tinge; that Americans are engaged in violent acts of anti-Semitism. He also has assumed — and this may cause the reader to wonder — that the civil rights movement has subsided entirely.

The anit-administration candidate is Billy Reason, a former governor of Illinois, a hardhsell man who knows that he is a megalomaniac and glories in the fact. The contrasting personality is Jim van den Haag, a newspaper man on leave, who has joined the candidate's staff out of loyalty to his late father's friendship with Reason.

Jim, a political moderate, is shocked and revolted by Reason's unethical use of political tricks and his tendency to play into the hands of right-wing extremists. He finally leaves the campaign and makes a futile gesture against Reason.

The author has managed to make Reason a plausible character, with enough human characteristics to raise him above the level of a paper figure. He conveys the anguish of Jim's involvement in a political situation for which he had no relish. He also has given a sense of reality — though it is flawed here and there to the rough pace of the campaign. This is a melodramatic bit of fiction that contains many argumentative facets.

Sin Is Sordid Seen In Flesh

Passion Flowers in Italy, by Rosalind Erskine (Simon and Schuster $3.95): Sin is exciting when contemplated from a distance. But it can get rather sordid when seen in the flesh.

That seems to be the moral which lurks behind this funny tale of an English schoolgirl bent on becoming the world's most wicked adolescent. But it doesn't really detract from the general hilarity.

In "The Passion Flower Hotel," the author's first book, Sarah Callender is tossed out of a very proper English boarding school for trying to set up a brothel in the gym. Now, in the sequel, she is sent to finish her education in Italy at a strict establishment "for difficult young ladies."

Her precocious head swimming with visions of fast cars and faster men, she plays hooky with a group of high-spirited schoolmates to pursue her studies at Turin bars and midnight bathing parties. But her plans of romance with a tall, suave Italian (any tall, suave Italian will do) misfire when tested.

Wild Animals Are His Love

I Walk With Lions, by Mervyn Cowie (Macmillan $4.95): Cowie has loved wild animals all his life and this has benefited both man and beast. This books tell how Cowie overcame indifference, apathy, red tape and outright opposition in leading the fight to save Africa's wild animals through creation of Kenya's great animal preserves, the Royal National Parks. Cowie, son of a big-game hunter became the parks' first director.

His life's work began one day near Nairobi when, unarmed and on foot, he was confronted suddenly by a lion. He froze in terror, resigned to death. But the lion, after a few heart-chilling moments of visual inspection, strolled off without looking back. "Neither of us meant any harm to the other," Cowie writes. "This was proof to me that man and beast can live in a restricted form of peace. They need not spend their time killing each other, but man must learn to behave properly, and beast must be given a place to live."

THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK

Up-To-Date Split Level Has An Oriental Flair Feature

An unusual double roof effect imparts a subtle oriental flavor to this fine split level home, just enough to add a spark of interest without being distractive.

The elegantly understated facade gives the house a rare quality — call it character — which seems to be on the wane in today's rush for super-efficiency. The house plainly is not extravagant, but there are so construction shortcuts either.

It contains three bedrooms and 2½ baths in a moderate basic area of 1,588 square feet on living and bedroom levels. Dimensions are equally modest: only 52" wide by 31'6" deep.

Architect Lester Cohen designed the house as H-21 in the House of the Week Series.

Inside, its clearly zoned floor plan revolves around a glamorous curved staircase core. The stairs rise gracefully from the entrance foyer to the living room level and then, in a continuing curve, to the balcony above. The rail is delicate and light, and planters on the lower two levels contribute charm. The transformation of a functional necessity into an eye-catching thing of beauty is an example of architect Cohen's artistic skill.

A second half-flight staircase joins the kitchen and lower level. Though it may appear at first to be a superfluous addition, as close as it is to the main staircase, homeowners who have tried the feature say, it clearly is a traffic circulation boon. It prevents intrusions into the formal living area and, equally important, saves countless steps.

The lower level features a graceful foyer with an extra large coat closet, a spacious recreation room, lavatory, and hidden laundry with an adjoining mud closet.

The sidee-ntry garage opens directly to the goyer, thus offering direct access to all three activity areas—kitchen, recreation room or living room.

ADDITIONAL DETAILS

A sweeping bow window in the living room benefits both the indoor and outdoor design of the house. It combines with an elegant fireplace wall as a foral point for furniture arrangements.

The dining room adjoins, and has 6' sliding glass doors leading to the rear terrace. The terrace also has a separate entry from the kitchen, convenient for outdoor dining.

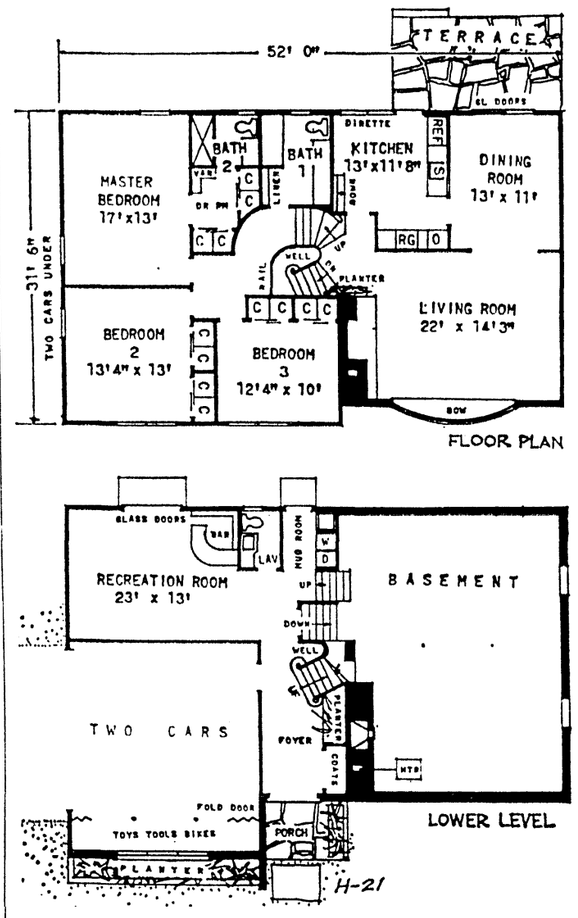

The kitchen is situated as the hub of the daytime activity area. The appliances are nicely arranged, and the room is large enough for a dinette area overlooking the backyard. Dimensions of the kitchen-dinette are 13' by 11'8".

Upstairs, the three bedrooms and two baths are well planned with no wasted hall space. Architect Cohen has even eliminated space consuming corners!

If inactivity is the order of the day for your child, he may—like one-third of our school children—be unable to pass minimum physical fitness tests. Many schools are stepping up their programs of physical education. But in a surprisingly large number of them, there is still not enough emphasis on daily, vigorous activity. For the sake of your child's physical and mental progress, make sure that your school puts sufficient emphasis on physical education. To help you evaluate the program in your school, send for the free leaflet offered by the President's Council on Physical Fitness, Washington 25, D. C.

Revolution Fact Of Life Today In North Neighbor

QUEBEC (AP) — Revolution sounds out of place in North America, but a kind of revolution is the central political fact of life in Canada today.

After nearly a century of uneasy partnership, the French-Canadians in Quebec are demanding a new deal with the nation's English-speaking majority.

MASTERS

They are determined to become masters in their own house, preferably through a stronger Quebec within a stronger Canada. The alternative, many believe, is an independent Quebec, an Alaska-sized nation stretching from New England to the Arctic.

The issues focus mainly on a bargaining for authority between the provincial government in Quebec and the federal government in Ottawa, but the threat of violence from an extremist minority is in the background.

"I think we should put a big bomb in the Parliament building in Ottawa and blow it up," a young French-Canadian terrorist said in Montreal, the hotbed of separatists seeking a break with English-speaking Canada.

In Quebec City, where a dynamic provincial government sits, a leading French-Canadian intellectual dismissed the terrorists as misguided juvenile delinquents.

DON'T HATE

'We don't hate the English," he said. "They just bore us."

Both views—the threat of violence and the feeling that French Canada is something special—have triggered a reaction of misunderstanding in English-speaking Canada. Many Canadians fear English-Canada will get fed up with Quebec and play into the separatists' hands.

Quebec wants a new relationship with Ottawa to chart its own political, economic and cultural destiny. Basically, it wants more Quebec tax dollars to stay in Quebec.

Canada's constitution divides power between the federal government and the 10 provinces Education, welfare and other key areas are provincial preserves. Several provinces besides Quebec are pressing Ottawa for more autonomy. Some tax demands, British Columbia's for example, go farther than Quebec's.

The problem centers on Quebec for two reasons. Friction has long existed between French and English Canadians. And Quebec has evolved from a backward, inward-looking cultural refuge to an awakened force fighting for its place in the sun.

From Ottawa's view, the federal government needs central power to even out differences between the have and have-not provinces. Its search for a formula to help meet Quebec's demands without upsetting the other provinces is a delicate task. Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson has said: "The whole of Canada is greater than the sum of its parts." In Quebec this statement was interpreted as meaning "He's saying they're better than we are."

To the young extremist in Montreal, the choice is "independence or death."

The threat of violence, denounced by all responsible authorities in Quebec, distorts the real picture. The only reliable survey taken in Quebec showed that 13 per cent of the population favor separatism. Fewer condone violence.

Interviews by The Associated Press in Montreal and Quebec City showed that all leaders responsible to a sizable following oppose separatism. No candidate running as a separatist has won an election in Quebec, although some have taken separatist stands after election.

The provincial government, the municipal government in Montreal, French-Canadian labor union and business leaders and the editors of the French-language press all oppose separatism. Premier Jean Lesage of Quebec says "separatism would be a disaster."

Responsible leaders have too much to lose to embrace separatism unless they are pushed into it, either by English-Canadians or French-Canadian extremists.

Quebec enjoys a higher living standard than many English-speaking parts of Canada. English-Canadian and U.S. financial interests dominate Quebec's economy and in turn control jobs. The province wants more money from Ottawa and enjoys a strong bargaining position politically with 75 seats in the 265-seat federal House of Commons.

The Quebec city of Hull is across the Ottawa River from nation's capital. Separatism seems strongest there and in Montreal—two cities where contact with English-Canadians is strongest. It is weak in Quebec City, 95 per cent French. In rural areas many French-Canadians have never heard of separatism.

But all insist on the recognition they contend is rightfully theirs.

In Montreal, the world's second largest French city, the French make up 65 per cent of the population but control 22 per cent of the city's economic life.

A feeling of second class citizenship stems from many factors: Shop girls in Montreal who speak only English, English Canadians saying "speak white," insurance policies and apartment leases in English, letters from federal officials in English although French and English are both official languages.

Many blame the late Premier Maurice Duplessis for keeping the province backward. Others say the Roman Catholic Church, dominant in Quebec, sometimes seemed to stand for a sort of submissiveness.

The advent of French-language television in 1953 tended to give the province a new unity. It opened cultural ties to France and created the feeling that Quebec was no longer alone. A new breed took over when the Lesage government came to power in 1960. It chartered plans for economic development and educational reform. One official describes the Lesage effort as "an attempt to move 100 years in 10."

The change from a quaint, picturesque, submissive Quebec has been too rapid for many English-Canadians to grasp.

Dropout Problems Cause Discussed

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Joe swept through high school with good grades and his senior class voted him the boy most likely to succeed.

That fall he marched off to college happily enough. But six weeks later he fled home, one more youngster in a huge and worrisome army of college dropouts.

Each year, one million American youths begin college. But before graduation day, more than half have quit.

LACK MONEY

Some lack money, some lack talent. But, by some estimates, at least half drop out because of emotional problems.

Now a special college dropout clinic has turned up clues to some of these reasons, as a first step toward preventing personal tragedies and waste of trained brainpower to run the nation's affairs.

The clinic at the William Alanson White Institute here has treated 43 college dropouts, both men and women, during the last two years.

One - third have successfully resumed college fulltime, and nearly as many are back in classes parttime, says Dr. Edgar A. Levenson, director of the dropout clinic.

Among reasons for dropping out — which may also apply to high school dropouts — clinic investigators found:

Some students had always dropped out of anything when the going got rough.

A few apparently were inevitably headed for psychotic episodes, wherever they were.

Some had bizarre ways of working at tasks. For example, assigned to do a brief report they would comb through 15 reference books trying "grandiosley to cover the entire field, and then get discouraged and quit."

Such students couldn't lean on or profit from the experience of others, and this "maverick quality" might produce original work if it were only channeled constructively, the clinic reports.

Some found college unhappy because of difficulty in dating.

Others had breezed through high school on glibness, but had poor study habits.

While some students who make poor grades enlist enough sympathy to get by, others manage to antagonize the school enough so they are dropped.

One quite startling finding, Dr. Levenson said, is that 25 per cent of the fathers of dropouts had themselves dropped out of college. The Depression years had forced some to quit, but others stopped for a variety of other reasons.

DISAPPOINTED

Seventeen per cent of fathers had run into career setbacks, and 10 per cent were disappointed in their own careers. In about a quarter of the homes, the father was gone, through death, separation or divorce.

It appeared that many fathers "may undermine their childrens' amibitions, all the while ostensibly pushing them to success, and demonstrating disapproval when they fail."

In many cases, mothers saw their children merely as extensions of themselves, rather than separate individuals, and when the child failed, they wailed, "What have I done?"

Other mothers were reluctant really to let their children go. The dropout "may then be seen as a symbolic act of rebellion and separation from the family, and, at the same time, a regression and return to an earlier, less stressful relationship with the mother."

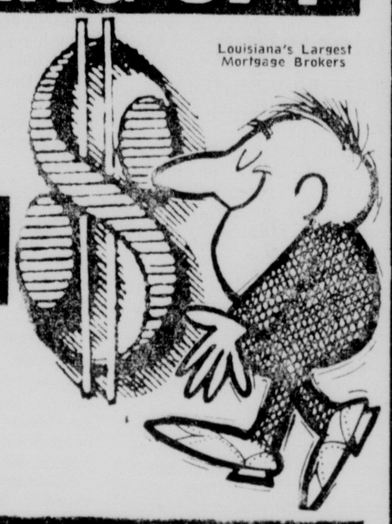

Dr. Levenson said the two years of experience had shown the feasibility of such a community clinic to help dropout students, and that it could be a valuable service to colleges in salvaging students.

Easter

Easter is traditionally known as the most joyous of all Christian holidays as it commemorates the resurrection of Christ. The name Easter comes from Eastre, the goddess of spring. During early days of the Christian church, people were not permitted to eat eggs during the Lenten season and so eggs became extremely popular on Easter Sunday. Easter eggs have long been Christian symbols of continuing life and resurrection. In pre-Reformation Days eggs were blessed and used in Easter ceremonies at Church.

Mary Jane Young Weds Raydell Wilson Thorn

Pedestal baskets of white gladioli and stock and an altar arrangement of the same blossoms flanked by white tapers in branched candelabra formed a setting in Covenant Presbyterian Church for the wedding Friday, March 27 of Miss Mary Jane Young and Raydell Wilson Thorn. Rev. Wayne W. Gray performed the double ring ceremony at 6 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Christine Terror Young, 1608 N. 4th and Howard S. Young, 2313 DeBastrop and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Thorn, Milhaven Road.

Mrs. Everette Lawson, organist, presented a program of nuptial music and accompanied the vocalists, Mr. and Mrs. William Herring. Mr. Herring sang "Because," and Mrs. Herring's selections were "O Perfect Love" and "The Lord's Prayer," as the couple knelt on the prie dieu.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown of white silk organza featured a lace bodice with scalloped neckline and long sleeves tapered to lily points over the wrists. Lace rose appliques embellished the full floor-length skirt which extended into a short train. Her fingertip veil of bridal illusion was held in place by a queen's crown of stephanotis, irridescent sequins and pearls. She carried a diamond shaped bouquet of butterfly roses and stephanotis centered with a white glamellia, showered with seed pearls and satin streamers.

Mrs. William H. Young, sister-in-law of the bride, served as matron of honor and bridesmaids were Mrs. Glen Ray Harrelson, Mrs. James Harper, Mrs. Kenneth Blue and Miss Billie Sue Dixon. Their short gowns of canary yellow peau de soie were styled with belled skirts and elbow sleeves and accented at the back waistline by two self-fabric roses. They wore yellow wedding ring hats with nose veils, matching slippers and short white gloves and carried baskets of Marguerite daisies.

Flower girl was Miss Terri McKnight, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius McKnight. She wore a full - skirted frock of yellow peau de soie with cowl neckline and short sleeves, with a matching headband and slippers. She also carried a basket of daisies.

Serving as best man for his brother was Gerald Thorn and groomsmen - ushers were Edward Naff, Jerry Holdiness, Gary Futch and William H. Young, brother of the bride. Johnny Albright, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Albright of West Monroe, was ring bearer.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Young was wearing a pink brocade costume suit with matching shoes and hat of pink petals and berries and long white gloves. Her corsage was of white glamellias. Mrs. Thorn, mother of the groom, wore a costume suit of royal blue silk linen with self - fabric hat, white irridescent shoes and bag and white gloves. She also wore a white glamellia corsage.

RECEPTION

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the parlor of the church. The reception table was covered with a tulle draped satin cloth, caught up with wedding bells and centered with an arrangement of white stock in a cupid compote, flanked by silver candelabra holding white tapers. Mrs Charles Albright and Miss Wilma Noble presided over crystal punch bowls at opposite ends of the table. The cake table was covered with a satin cloth, adorned by wedding bells and the guest book table held a white memory candle. Mrs. Byron Terror, aunt of the bride, served the wedding cake and Mrs. Riley Wallace presided at the bride's book.

Tea girls, designated by corsages of white carnations with yellow accents, were Miss Judy Neal, Miss Melany Wood, Miss Betty Ann Inabnett and Mrs. Vernon Anderson. Floating hostesses, who were also presented with carnation corsages, were Mrs. Alice Walter and Mrs. Myrtis Richardson of Winnsboro.

For a wedding trip to New Orleans the bride changed into a costume suit of Nile green silk linen with beige flower hat, bronze patent shoes and bag and the Glamellia corsage from her bouquet. Upon their return the couple will be at home in Monroe.

A graduate of Neville high school where she was a member of Delta Beta Sigma, the bride is presently a senior at Northeast Louisiana State College, where she is also employed. She is a member of Phi Mu and of the Northeast Honor Society. Mr. Thorn, a graduate of Ouachita Parish high school, is also a senior at Northeast.

Easter Eggs Christian Symbol Of Resurrection

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Aside from the deeply spiritual significance of Easter there are some facts and fancies connected with it which I think you will find interesting. Actually all of these reflect the same idea and feeling; a rebirth, a fresh and new start, and a time of great joy.

For instance, do you know why the rabbit, instead of the seemingly more appropriate hen, is supposed to leave the eggs?

Did your 4-year-old child or grandchild ever say something like, "That Easter bunny didn't leave the eggs; anybody knows that rabbits don't lay eggs"? My children didn't ask me and it shows how dumb I am that it has taken me this long to wonder about it myself.

The custom of the Easter bunny and the Easter egg is a very pretty one! The practice of giving eggs as gifts to friends and children on Easter Sunday arose because in the early days of the church eggs were forbidden food during Lent and were eaten on Easter Sunday as a celebration. They were a symbol of new life used by Christians to signify the resurrection and they were painted in gay colors to reflect the joy of Easter.

TRADITIONAL EGG GAMES

Through the centuries Easter eggs were traditional in many countries. The annual egg-rolling contest on the lawn of the White House in Washington is a descendant of those old-time festivities.

In pagan-times the hare was associated with the moon because it only came out to feed at night. since the moon is constantly being reborn the hare also came to symbolize the renewal of life. In Europe the hare and the moon were happily linked for these reasons. Today the gentler and prettier rabbit has taken the place of the hare.

Many old secular traditions associated with Easter still survive in remote parts of the world. There is the belief that the sun dances in the heavens on Easter morning. There is the belief that new fires should be started on Easter, lighted only by friction of wood or flint. At the glittering courts of Europe the exchange of an Easter kiss was once a ceremonious and happy rite.

CASTING OFF THE OLD

The modern custom of appearing in a new outfit on Easter Sunday goes back to the belief held in many places that it was unlucky not to wear some new article of clothing or adornment on Easter morning. This is again a symbol of casting off the old and beginning the new.

But, the idea of parading Easter finery, such as the famous Fifth Avenue Parade on Easter morning in New York City originated in the United States less than 100 years ago.

The Bermuda lily was so widely used for altar decoration that it became known as the Easter lily. The English word "Easter" is taken from the Teutonic roots of our language and the ancient Teutonic Spring Festivals, where the month of April was dedicated to Esstre, goddess of spring.

MISS MADELYN MARIE BRUSCATO

Miss Bruscato Engaged To Henry T. Poulan Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Lowery, 200 Ouachita Ave., Monroe, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of her daughter, Miss Madelyn Marie Bruscato to Henry Thomas Poulan Jr. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. Poulan, 811 Orange St.

The wedding is planned for Thursday, April 23 to be solemnized at 7:30 p.m. in the First Baptist Church of Monroe. Rev. Walter G. Mangham Jr. will perform the ceremony.

The bride-elect has chosen Miss Betty Thomas to serve as maid of honor and bridesmaids will be Miss Elnora Carso and Mrs. Jamie Nay Gelgard.

Mr. Poulan will attend his son as best man and chosen as groomsmen-ushers are Alfred Hempin, Ray Manhart, Mike Phillips, Jack Oglesbee and Paul Bruscato Jr.

Miss Bruscato is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. T. G. McCain and the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bruscato Sr. A graduate of Ouachita Parish high school she is presently attending Northeast Louisiana State College.

Mr. Poulan is the grandson of Mrs. Hattie Phillips and the late Mr. and Mrs. William Edgar Poulan. He also graduated from Ouachita Parish high school and is a student at Northeast.

The couple will establish a home in Monroe where Mr. Poulan is employed.

Spring Shoe Styles Both More, Less

Shoe styling is presently hesitating between an era not yet gone and one struggling to be born, as some poet once said. The tapered, shell-like "less shoe" is still very popular, but what about all the fashion fuss over sturdy heels and the "more shoe" look?

Spring will see many compromises between the two. Returning is the spectator pump, still somewhat tapered, but with rounded toe and stacked heel, often in black and white, blue and white or brown and white, complete with perforations.

Colorful shoes will be a strong trend, since so many spring suits are in white or soft beiges. With these two colors even multicolor shoes can be worn, if the designing is good.

The less shoe look will be represented by sandals, also having a big revival. For all at-home and patio occasions, sandals will be the thing, often quite wild and whimsical, worn with the new patio pajamas.

For evening, the tapered, pointed pump, with graceful wine glass heel will hold its classic place. There are a few other shoes around, such as the black satin T-strap shoe with black satin bow, but these are in high fashion, expensive lines, aren't likely to be seen on a great many women.

There's some talk about the matching shoe, but in many stores the full range of fashion colors will be hard to find.

Lace Appearing On Swim Suits

The trend to softer, prettier clothes is bringing an all-girl look to beach clothes. Lace is showing up for the first time as a fabric for swimsuits and little coats to go over them.

Ruffles, too, are returning, sometimes in little two-piece suits all tiered ruffles, at others as flounced beach shirts and shifts. The ruffled look has brought a return of Mexican wedding shirts and other Latin American themes that feature ruffles and big poufed sleeves.

Beach hats follow the softer trend by abandoning the nutty look in favor of the hatty look. A favorite will be the jersey turban scrarf with a separate straw brim to be placed above it, removed when leaving the beach.

MRS. H. WAYNE PILCHER

Miss Donna Dianne Wade Weds H. Wayne Pilcher

In a candlelight ceremony Friday, March 27 at 8:30 p.m. in Southside Methodist Church Miss Donna Dianne Wade, daughter of Mrs. Mattie Lou Whittington Wade, 1217 S. Second, became the bride of H. Wayne Pilcher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Pilcher, 909 Trenton.

Forming a setting at the altar was a mass arrangement of yellow gladioli flanked by branched wrought iron candelabra holding yellow cathedral tapers against a background of Southern smilax, and Easter lilies.

Rev. Lea Joyner performed the double ring vows following a program of wedding music by the organist, Mrs. Larry Jewitt and soloist Sonny Franks, cousin of the groom.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her brother-in-law, Sylvan Ardoin. Her gown of bridal peau de soie was fashioned with fitted basque bodice with bateau neckline scalloped with applique Chantilly lace and long sleeves ending in lily points over the hands. The skirt front styled with multiple tiers of Chantilly lace ruffles was topped with a peau de soie overskirt, terminating in a chapel train, defined with hand rolled roses at the back waist. Her bouffant veil of illusion was held in place by three hand rolled roses outlined in lace. She carried a bouquet of feathered white chrysanthemums and white roses with touches of yellow net.

Miss Sandy Gresham, niece of the bride, served as maid of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Susan Crow, Miss Sherry Edwards and Miss Nancy Barton. They wore identical gowns of yellow taffeta in afternoon length with fitted basque bodices, topped by jackets of Chantilly lace. They wore yellow hats and shoes and carried crescent bouquets of yellow carnations and pompons.

Flower girls, Sylvia Ann Ardoin and Penny Gayle Edwards, nieces of the bride, wore frocks of yellow organza with matching embroidered bolero jackets and carried colonial style bouquets of yellow carnations and pompons.

Serving as best man for his brother was Darrell Pilcher and groomsmen were Jerry Cascio, David Bennett and Jerry Sandifer. Ring bearer was Dale Edwards and train bearers were Michael Ardoin and Robbie Ardoin, all nephews of the bride.

Ushers were Pete Medak and Joe Solomon.

Mrs. Wade, mother of the bride, wore a navy blue crepe dress with front panel, collar and cuffs of pole blue floral motif. Her accessories were white and she wore a corsage of yellow pompon chrysanthemums and feathered carnations. The groom's mother, Mrs. Pilcher, chose a pink suit with white accessories and corsage of yellow pompons and feathered carnations.

A reception followed in the church Fellowship Hall where the bride's table was covered with a floor length white net cloth over yellow. Yellow and white pompons and miniature Easter lilies arranged in a crystal bowl flanked by yellow tapers formed the central decor for the table. Mrs. Sylvan Ardoin, sister of the bride, presided at the crystal bowl of yellow punch and Mrs. Joe Massey, cousin of the bride, served the white tiered cake, which was decorated with yellow roses and topped by wedding bells and a miniature bride and groom. Swans were used to separate the tiers. Miss Denise Ardoin, niece of the bride, presided at the guest registry table which was graced with a memory candle.

Democracy, Communism Discussed At DAR Meet

"Americanism - Communism" was the topic discussed by Pascal Norris, local attorney, at a meeting of Chief Tusquahoma Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, last Saturday at Highland Park Country Club.

Mrs. Jack Willis, program chairman, presented Mr. Norris, who illustrated on maps a timely discussion of the communist sections on the continents of Europe, Africa and Southeast Asia.

Mrs. Herman M. McGuire, regent, presided and after the ritual introduced Mrs. Phoebe Allen Hayes, a prospective new junior member. During the business session Mrs. Joseph B. Landreaux gave a report on the recent state conference held in Alexandria. Awards won there were presented to the respective chairmen.

Mrs. Eugene Dupuy Jr. gave a talk on National Defense and urged all daughters to write to their congressmen and senators on all issues, and gave the correct form for writing congressmen. She pointed out the duty of every American citizen to let their congressman know how they stand on issues in Washington.

It was reported that on March 10 Mrs. J. A. Rainbolt shipped 150 pounds of clothing to the Kate Duncan Smith DAR School in Grant, Ala. A letter of thanks was read from the Leed's Memorial Indian Mission in Elton, La., for the recent donation made to the Kosati Indians, who are Louisiana Indians.

The chapter was invited to see films at the Ouachita Parish Public Library during National Library Week April 12-18.

Mrs. Louis I. Craig, new chairman for resolutions, presented a resolution which was adopted by the chapter as follows: that the chapter goes on record as supporting the recommendation of the civic improvement committee of the West Monroe Chamber of Commerce to appeal to all its members to cooperate with other members of the community toward eliminating various forms of litter, trash and paper which create eye sores and hazards to the health of the community.

It was announced that Lt. Joseph Bowmar Society of the Children of American Revolution will present the program for April and members are urged to bring coupons for the CAR which are sent to the DAR Mountain Schools.

The social hour preceding the meeting was held in the private dining room where the regent's table held an arrangement of assorted spring flowers.

Ortis, Mrs. Joseph B. Landreaux, Miss Katie McGee, Mrs. J. A. Rainbolt, Mrs. J. Otto Miller, Mrs. James L. McGuire and guests were Mrs. Hayes and Mr. Norris.

Paris Hats Create Stir

Not in years have the hats in Paris collections caused such a stir as this spring. Part of the reason is that the new softer clothes, so detailed, so obviously something rather than the late nothings, simply demand hats.

But all the designers came up with new looks and ideas that caused the rest of the sensation. Star with St. Laurent, whose big brimmed hats squared off at the front. Go on to Balenciaga whose brim swept up at front, turned down in the back.

At Dior it was the Boy Scout hat, with high punched crown and flat sailor brim. At Chanel it was the rocker brim, a saucer shape. In fact, so brim-conscious is Paris that the occasional toque or turban suddenly looked quite old-fashioned.

Baubles Cover Low Decolletage

One way to shake husbands loose from a bauble THAT big is to wear one of those deep plunging necklines that has him blushing beet red. Then explain that you could cover more and still be daringly stylish if you had a jewel to wear there.

Designed for the ticklish situation are several decollette bras with hook-on apparatus for gems. Some come with their own gems, but only fake ones, and your husband surely surely wouldn't want you to settle for less than the real thing, would he?

Now Nylon Is Sculptured

They're sculpturing nylon, now, or at least that's the effect given by a new fabric of the laminated kind. Tightly woven nylon is bonded to Scott foam in a new way like roller printing. The adhesive is applied in a pattern, anything from alligator grain, dots, florals to quilted effects. When foam and fabric are combined, the portion of the fabric touched by the adhesive is deeply sculptured in an almost carved look.

The new process gives laminated nylon a softer feel. Laundering and dry cleaning actually improve it. Steam and hot water tend to shrink the fabric and expand the foam, accenting the puffy look. The adhesive "cures" with heat, so performs better.

There is no lovelier time in Monroe than Spring, when the flowering trees and shrubs and bulbs are at their most glorious; days are bright and fair; and even the rain is warm and gentle. One joy follows another as dogwood succeeds crabapple; azaleas replace camellias in bloom.

This past week our gardens have trotted out their finest efforts, delighting visitors in town from points north, east, and west. Here last weekend through Thursday of this week were MR. and MRS. WALLACE CAMPBELL of East Hartford, Connecticut, guests of the CORBIN TURPINS. Judy invited her bridge club, their husbands, and a few other friends of the Campbells to a small party at her home on Saturday night. The honoree wore a black sleeveless sheath with aqua trim.

On her table, Judy used a pair of hurricane globes filled with yellow tulips and daffodils. The buffet included crayfish etouffe, smoked ham, shrimp and cheese dip, and raw vegetables with sour cream dip.

The guests were invited for Sunday afternoon buffet at the home of the J. W. PERRYS in Perryville. Monday Wallace spoke to the Sales Executive Club meeting, and Tuesday guests and hosts motored to Natchez for the day.

Wednesday night, the Campbells were honored at an evening party at the home of DOT and FRED AMMAN. Sprays of Lady Banksia rose were used with yellow candles before the mirror in the living room. An Oriental flavor was noted in branches of redbud arranged with Chiness figurines on the glassed porch. Dot used her silver epergne, filled with azaleas, camellias, and daffodils on the dining room table.

Other out of town guests who were here for the above party were CINDY and BENTON WAKEFIELD, who arrived Wednesday from their new home in Munster, Indiana. With the boys, WAKE and WALTON, they were at the Holiday Inn until today.

A sherry party was planned for Cindy Thursday afternoon with JEAN MINTZ and JEAN BROWN as co-hostesses. The party was held in the Brown home on Pargoud boulevard. Cindy and her hostesses greeted guests in the entrance, which was decorated with all-yellow bouquet of daffodils, jonquils, Dutch iris, gladioli and freesia in a silver Revere bowl. The honoree wore for the party a spring suit of mauve pink mohair. Flowers in the living room were fresh violets and jonquils. In the den were ranunculas and anemones in brilliant reds and blues in a pewter pitcher.

For Easter Sunday, this is the best: John Donne's "Holy Sonnet":

Death, be not proud, tho some have called thee
Mighty and dreadful, for thou art not so;
For those whom thou think'st thou dost overthrow
Die not, poor Death; nor yet canst thou kill me.
From rest and sleep, which but thy picture be,
Much pleasure; then from thee much more must flow;
And soonest our best men with thee do go —
Rest of their bones and souls' delivery!
Thou'rt slave to fate, chance, kings, and desperate men,
And dost with poison, war, and sickness dwell;
And poppy or charms can make us sleep as well
And better than they stroke. Why swell'st thou then?
On short sleep past, we wake eternally,
And Death shall be no more: Death, thou shalt die!

There is no lovelier time in Monroe than Spring, when the flowering trees and shrubs and bulbs are at their most glorious; days are bright and fair; and even the rain is warm and gentle. One joy follows another as dogwood succeeds crabapple; azaleas replace camellias in bloom.

This past week our gardens have trotted out their finest efforts, delighting visitors in town from points north, east, and west. Here last weekend through Thursday of this week were MR. and MRS. WALLACE CAMPBELL of East Hartford, Connecticut, guests of the CORBIN TURPINS. Judy invited her bridge club, their husbands, and a few other friends of the Campbells to a small party at her home on Saturday night. The honoree wore a black sleeveless sheath with aqua trim.

On her table, Judy used a pair of hurricane globes filled with yellow tulips and daffodils. The buffet included crayfish etouffe, smoked ham, shrimp and cheese dip, and raw vegetables with sour cream dip.

The guests were invited for Sunday afternoon buffet at the home of the J. W. PERRYS in Perryville. Monday Wallace spoke to the Sales Executive Club meeting, and Tuesday guests and hosts motored to Natchez for the day.

Wednesday night, the Campbells were honored at an evening party at the home of DOT and FRED AMMAN. Sprays of Lady Banksia rose were used with yellow candles before the mirror in the living room. An Oriental flavor was noted in branches of redbud arranged with Chiness figurines on the glassed poren. Dot used her silver epergne, filled with azaleas, camellias, and daffodils on the dining room table.

Other out of town guests who were here for the above party were CINDY and BENTON WAKEFIELD, who arrived Wednesday from their new home in Munster, Indiana. With the boys, WAKE and WALTON, they were at the Holiday Inn until today.

A sherry party was planned for Cindy Thursday afternoon with JEAN MINTZ and JEAN BROWN as co-hostesses. The party was held in the Brown home on Pargoud boulevard. Cindy and her hostesses greeted guests in the entrance, which was decorated with all-yellow bouquet of daffodils, jonquils, Dutch iris, gladioli and freesia in a silver Revere bowl. The honoree wore for the party a spring suit of mauve pink mohair. Flowers in the living room were fresh violets and jonquils. In the den were ranunculas and anemones in brilliant reds and blues in a pewter pitcher.

Daisies, daffodils, Dutch iris, gladioli and freesia, all yellow, filled the footed silver bowl which centered the dining room table. Sherry was served by PEGGY GREENBAUM and MARIE COOKSTON, while ANN HOLMES and DORCAS WARREN alternated at the silver coffee service. Collecting Fine Items Takes Knowledge, Care

By BETTY YARMON
Women's News Service

NEW YORK (WNS) — Want to become a successful collector? The easiest way is to have unlimited wealth and unlimited time.

But if you're like most people — with limits to time and money — you'll have to exercise a certain amount of care.

Louise Leipner, who represents customers at auction sales held at Manhattan's Parke-Bernet Galleries, gives these hints for successful collecting:

1. Learn all there is to know about the things you are interested in collecting. Read books on the subject, stroll through museums, visit local antique shops. After a while you will come to know the distinguished marks that separate the fine from the ordinary. The best collector is the best-informed collector.

2. Learn current prices. The antiques shops are one source. Another is the auctions. By attending them regularly and keeping a record in the catalogues of what items are selling for, you will get to learn today's values. These of course will serve as a guide to your own bidding at auction.

3. Don't be a follower but develop your own tastes. This will stop you from losing interest within a short while in what you collect. If what you collect fits your own interests and way of life, you stand a better chance of developing a lifetime hobby.

4. Try to anticipate future trends. French impressionist painting are the current rage. How about collecting 17th century Dutch painters, one step removed from the Old Masters? It will be their time soon, and wouldn't it be nice if you were there before the crowd begins to gather?

5. Be discriminating. Economy must be kept in mind, certainly, but not at the expense of quality. Rather than buy something everytime you have a few extra dollars, save until you have enough to buy the best.

6. Don't be afraid to change your mood in collecting. If you have bought valuable things to begin with, at prices that are not out of line, you will find you can in turn sell them for roughly the same amount of money or more. This will give you the where-withal to start all over again — learning, buying, enjoying a new speciality.

7. At an auction sale, don't let your heart run away with your head. Before the sale starts be sure you have examined carefully whatever interests you. In that way you will avoid being disagreeably surprised if you find yourself the owner of something you don't want. Then, when you have set a maximum that you will pay, don't be tempted to go beyond your means to bid for it. Remember there is always a tomorrow — when something even more beautiful will be for sale.

Miss Leipner knows all about this temptation. For while she handles bids at Parke-Bernet mainly for out-of-town customers, she also does the bidding for some in-town customers who don't trust themselves not to be carried away by the bidding.

One last point: Don't be upset if you find yourself with the collecting bug. You're just being human. Children, without any advice from adults, collect marbles and stones. It's no wonder, then, that when they grow up they collect art, books, jewelry, furniture, silver, glass and a host of other items from the world of fine things.

YOUR PROBLEMS

Wedding Gifts Belong To Bride Regardless

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: We have searched the etiquette books and can't find the answer. The situation is so unusual, however, perhaps the answer can be found only in a psychiatrist's text book.

Miss X and Mr. Y were married in a beautiful church ceremony after months of planning. Six days later the bride returned to the home of her parents and announced that the marriage was finished. The groom is still honeymooning — by himself.

There is no chance of a reconciliation. The girl has made that clear.

What we want to know is this: Should the wedding gifts be returned? The couple also received some sizeable checks from relatives. Thank you for your guidance. — The Inquirers

Dear In: Married people are not required to return wedding gifts. It matters not whether the marriage lasted five minutes or 50 years.

In our society the wedding gifts belong to the bride. If, for purely personal reasons, the bride wishes to return certain gifts which came from the groom's relatives she can do so, but it is up to her.

Consult a lawyer about the checks. In some states this could be considered community property.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a bartender in a busy little club. My wife works there, too. She is a receptionist.

Rosie loves to dance and she is good at it. It seems that whenever I look up she is on the dance floor with some gink. I've told her this looks cheap and I don't like it. She says it's good for business.

We have been married three months and can't get by without her check so please don't tell me she ought to quit her job and stay home.

Maybe I should tell you we met at this club and Rosie used to dance with the customers before we were married. I didn't mind then, but I do now. Thanks a lot for any help you can give me. — Big Red

Dear Red: Rosie should stick to her receptionist duties. Giving up dancing with strangers is a small thing to ask in the interests of building a good marriage.

Dear Ann Landers: I have read your column for many years and agree wholeheartedly with most of your ideas. I would like to respectfully suggest, however, that you reword one piece of advice which you frequently give.

To the husband or wife who has lived through the trials and tribulations of a triangular affair you often say: "Forgive and forget." I believe it should be, "Forgive and learn from it." It is not possible to forget, even after many years.

There is something to be gained from every experience, even though it may appear to be a total disaster. I had a bitter and heartbreaking experience which involved an unfaithful husband and a close friend. It motivated me to look inward and do some serious soul-searching. I came out of it a whole person — and a better one.

Of course I still remember, but I forgave — and I learned from it. — Mrs. Va.

Dear Va: I agree that every experience can be a useful one if it teaches us something.

When I say "forget" I don't mean it literally. By "forgetting" I mean the incident should not be thrown into the teeth of the guilty person or used as a club with which to beat him over the head for the rest of his natural life.

Thank you for an excellent letter.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of Monroe Morning World enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

ART WITH COMFORT

One of the more important 1964 trends in interior decoration is the use of an art collection to serve as the dramatic focal point of a sitting room. One New York designer planned an interior for a garden enthusiast . . . . the art consisting of attractive line drawings and antique prints of various vegetables and fruits. A deep, comfortable latex foam rubber sofa and lounge chair were placed within easy viewing distance of the art display.

Clock Regulated Cigarette Case Dispenses Quota

AP Newsfeatures

The case against the cigarette fiend — the clock-regulated cigarette case — is suddenly a hot item in New York specialty stores.

Although not new, it was usually purchased as a gag (at about $10), until the "Smoking and Health" report of the advisory committee to the surgeon general of the Public Service stirred thousands into re-evoluating their tobacco intake.

There are several different kinds of these cigarette cases but all operate on the principle of remaining stubbornly shut until released by a clock mechanism. The nicotine-enslaved soul, it is hoped, can cut down by setting the clock for intervals of from 10 minutes to two hours.

However, there is no devise as yet to keep him from bumming other people's smokes in the meantime.

One time-locked case is equipped with a tiny alarm that signals the glorious moment of smoking enjoyment.

Unfortunately, it sometimes jars him back to the problem just as the miserable man trying to kick the habit finally manages to think of something else.

Collecting Fine Items Takes Knowledge, Care

By BETTY YARMON
Women's News Service

NEW YORK (WNS) — Want to become a successful collector? The easiest way is to have unlimited wealth and unlimited time.

But if you're like most people — with limits to time and money — you'll have to exercise a certain amount of care.

Louise Leipner, who represents customers at auction sales held at Manhattan's Parke-Bernet Galleries, gives these hints for successful collecting:

1. Learn all there is to know about the things you are interested in collecting. Read books on the subject, stroll through museums, visit local antique shops. After a while you will come to know the distinguished marks that separate the fine from the ordinary. The best collector is the best-informed collector.

2. Learn current prices. The antiques shops are one source. Another is the auctions. By attending them regularly and keeping a record in the catalogues of what items are selling for, you will get to learn today's values. These of course will serve as a guide to your own bidding at auction.

3. Don't be a follower but develop your own tastes. This will stop you from losing interest within a short while in what you collect. If what you collect fits your own interests and way of life, you stand a better chance of developing a lifetime hobby.

4. Try to anticipate future trends. French impressionist painting are the current rage. How about collecting 17th century Dutch painters, one step removed from the Old Masters? It will be their time soon, and wouldn't it be nice if you were there before the crowd begins to gather?

5. Be discriminating. Economy must be kept in mind, certainly, but not at the expense of quality. Rather than buy something everytime you have a few extra dollars, save until you have enough to buy the best.

6. Don't be afraid to change your mood in collecting. If you have bought valuable things to begin with, at prices that are not out of line, you will find you can in turn sell them for roughly the same amount of money or more. This will give you the where-withal to start all over again — learning, buying, enjoying a new speciality.

7. At an auction sale, don't let your heart run away with your head. Before the sale starts be sure you have examined carefully whatever interests you. In that way you will avoid being disagreeably surprised if you find yourself the owner of something you don't want. Then, when you have set a maximum that you will pay, don't be tempted to go beyond your means to bid for it. Remember there is always a tomorrow — when something even more beautiful will be for sale.

Miss Leipner knows all about this temptation. For while she handles bids at Parke-Bernet mainly for out-of-town customers, she also does the bidding for some in-town customers who don't trust themselves not to be carried away by the bidding.

One last point: Don't be upset if you find yourself with the collecting bug. You're just being human. Children, without any advice from adults, collect marbles and stones. It's no wonder, then, that when they grow up they collect art, books, jewelry, furniture, silver, glass and a host of other items from the world of fine things.

Polished Big-City Look Vogue In San Francisco

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

Q: I am going to San Francisco soon for three weeks. What kind of clothes and shoes will be suitable?

A: San Francisco is mild and damp. Light wool suits, dress-jacket costumes, knits, a top coat or all - weather coat, would form the basis of your wardrobe. San Francisco is a sophisticated city, so take hats, gloves, be prepared for a polished big - city look.

Q: What color accessories would be best with an off-white fur coat trimmed in deep brown? Could cranberry suede be worn with it? Would it be in good taste to wear slacks with this coat? The coat is three-quarter length, has quite large pockets.

A: Accessory colors can include black, brown, beige, bone, wine reds. The cranberry outfit can certainly be worn with it. The coat seems to be styled in the sportswear mode, so slacks could be worn with it in almost any color.

Q: Can I wear a pink suit for embarking and arrival on a European trip? I know it isn't practical, but I look well in pink.

A: The pink doesn't have to be pale pink, does it? Buy a deeper pink suit and enjoy yourself.

Q: My problem is girdles. I am 5 feet 2, weigh about 115 pounds, am short - waisted. I need a girdle that slims abdomen and waistline, but when I get a front - lace type it's too big in the waist. Where do I get fitted properly?

A: Not by buying over the counter. You should not have to wear a laced type of garment. Have you looked up shops in your area specializing only in foundations? They usually do a better fit job than large stores. Also, try writing foundation makers directly, such as Formfit, Gossard, Sarong, Warner.

Q: My bust is 34; hips, 38. What silhouette should I wear to disguise this?

A: Easy skirts are best, gored, pleated or flared at hemline, but smooth over hips, not gathered or full. Never sheaths!

If you have a question concerning fashion, send it to Florence de Santis, in care of this paper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Country Look Big For Homes

"The Country Look" is the season's hottest news in fashions — and in home furnishings.

The charm and warmth of old-fashioned farmhouse furnishings (or, call it the Early American if you wish) has been making a steady rise towards the top in popularity.

And no wonder—for furniture in this style offers simplicity, durability, and it's comfortable to live with.

Country look furnishings are colorful, happy and help to create a feeling of family closeness within the home.

Decorating in furnishings from the colonial era opens the door to braid rugs, copper decorator pieces, patchwork bedspreads and draperies, and much, much more.

The Country Look is not confined to Early American styled homes — it has been used beautifully in homes of every design. It can even be mixed successfully with furniture and furnishings of other periods.

Many families devote at least one room to Early American — usually the kitchen or den — because, its charm is irresistible!

Through the years, the popularity of home furnishings from other periods (French Provincial, Victorian, etc.) had continually gone up and down. But Early American has been a constant favorite.

Polished Big-City Look Vogue In San Francisco

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

Q: I am going to San Francisco soon for three weeks. What kind of clothes and shoes will be suitable?

A: San Francisco is mild and damp. Light wool suits, dress-jacket costumes, knits, a top coat or all - weather coat, would form the basis of your wardrobe. San Francisco is a sophisticated city, so take hats, gloves, be prepared for a polished big - city look.

Q: What color accessories would be best with an off-white fur coat trimmed in deep brown? Could cranberry suede be worn with it? Would it be in good taste to wear slacks with this coat? The coat is three-quarter length, has quite large pockets.

A: Accessory colors can include black, brown, beige, bone, wine reds. The cranberry outfit can certainly be worn with it. The coat seems to be styled in the sportswear mode, so slacks could be worn with it in almost any color.

Q: Can I wear a pink suit for embarking and arrival on a European trip? I know it isn't practical, but I look well in pink.

A: The pink doesn't have to be pale pink, does it? Buy a deeper pink suit and enjoy yourself.

Q: My problem is girdles. I am 5 feet 2, weigh about 115 pounds, am short - waisted. I need a girdle that slims abdomen and waistline, but when I get a front - lace type it's too big in the waist. Where do I get fitted properly?

A: Not by buying over the counter. You should not have to wear a laced type of garment. Have you looked up shops in your area specializing only in foundations? They usually do a better fit job than large stores. Also, try writing foundation makers directly, such as Formfit, Gossard, Sarong, Warner.

Q: My bust is 34; hips, 38. What silhouette should I wear to disguise this?

A: Easy skirts are best, gored, pleated or flared at hemline, but smooth over hips, not gathered or full. Never sheaths!

If you have a question concerning fashion, send it to Florence de Santis, in care of this paper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Country Look Big For Homes

"The Country Look" is the season's hottest news in fashions — and in home furnishings.

The charm and warmth of old-fashioned farmhouse furnishings (or, call it the Early American if you wish) has been making a steady rise towards the top in popularity.

And no wonder—for furniture in this style offers simplicity, durability, and it's comfortable to live with.

Country look furnishings are colorful, happy and help to create a feeling of family closeness within the home.

Decorating in furnishings from the colonial era opens the door to braid rugs, copper decorator pieces, patchwork bedspreads and draperies, and much, much more.

The Country Look is not confined to Early American styled homes — it has been used beautifully in homes of every design. It can even be mixed successfully with furniture and furnishings of other periods.

Many families devote at least one room to Early American — usually the kitchen or den — because, its charm is irresistible!

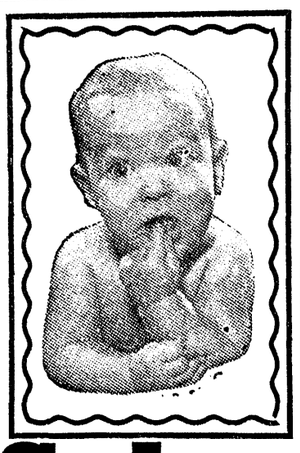

Through the years, the popularity of home furnishings from other periods (French Provincial, Victorian, etc.) had continually gone up and down. But Early American has been a constant favorite.

Bring Spring Indoors With Hanging Baskets

To create a feeling of spring the year around, why not fill your home with a variety of colorful and decorative flowers that are guaranteed not to wilt? How? The answer is artificial flowers. It is an ideal way to bring spring indoors.

The flowers look so real today it is difficult to tell them from nature's own, and there is a wide selection from which to choose.

One of the most attractive ways they are being utilized is in hanging baskets of rattan, says Violet Hackim, home advisor. They come in a variety of styles, such as a bird cage, a flower basket and another that can best be described an an inverted coolie hat. Lovely flower arrangements of varied assortments are contained in the baskets, or if you are inspired to make up your own arrangements, flowers can be purchased separately. Among the different varieties are marigold, snapdragon, rose, iris and zinnia.

They can be hung in a window corner, utilized to brighten up a dark corner (in this case be sure the flowers are light and bright in color) or hung over a dinette table. Interior decorators are suggesting the use of hanging baskets containing artificial flowers in bathrooms or just anywhere in the home your fancy dictates.

New Material Introduced For Women's Shoes

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

Having brought out a good synthetic patent, Patina, Du Pont has not introduced Corfam, a chemical compound which duplicates smooth and suede leathers. It is said that the material is porous and will allow the passage of moisture, a claim which the leather people are hotly contesting.

If the example of Patina may be taken, the new material will wear extremely well, but is not as supple, particularly in suede, as natural leather.

But it has advantages in that it can be wiped clean, even in the suede finish, and designers can cut it from uniform rolls. A number of top shoe designers like Julianelli, Newton Elkin and David Evins are using it in their spring lines.

Investor-owned companies pay taxes like other good citizens . . . yet the REA co-ops pay no federal taxes and very little local taxes. Although 99% of the rural homes in Louisiana now have electric service (2/3 of them from investor-owned companies), Washington promotors of REA keep pushing the co-ops to expand. As a result, 5 out of 6 new co-op customers are non-farm.

Shouldn't the REA co-ops either limit their services to rural areas . . . or pay the same taxes as investor-owned companies? So long as they don't, you pay the difference.

The flowers look so real today it is difficult to tell them from nature's own, and there is a wide selection from which to choose.

One of the most attractive ways they are being utilized is in hanging baskets of rattan, says Violet Hackim, home advisor. They come in a variety of styles, such as a bird cage, a flower basket and another that can best be described an an inverted coolie hat. Lovely flower arrangements of varied assortments are contained in the baskets, or if you are inspired to make up your own arrangements, flowers can be purchased separately. Among the different varieties are marigold, snapdragon, rose, iris and zinnia.

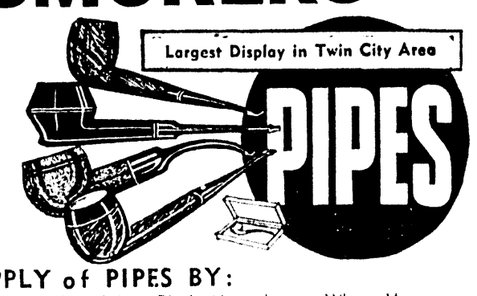

They can be hung in a window corner, utilized to brighten up a dark corner (in this case be sure the flowers are light and bright in color) or hung over a dinette table. Interior decorators are suggesting the use of hanging baskets containing artificial flowers in bathrooms or just anywhere in the home your fancy dictates.

New Material Introduced For Women's Shoes

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

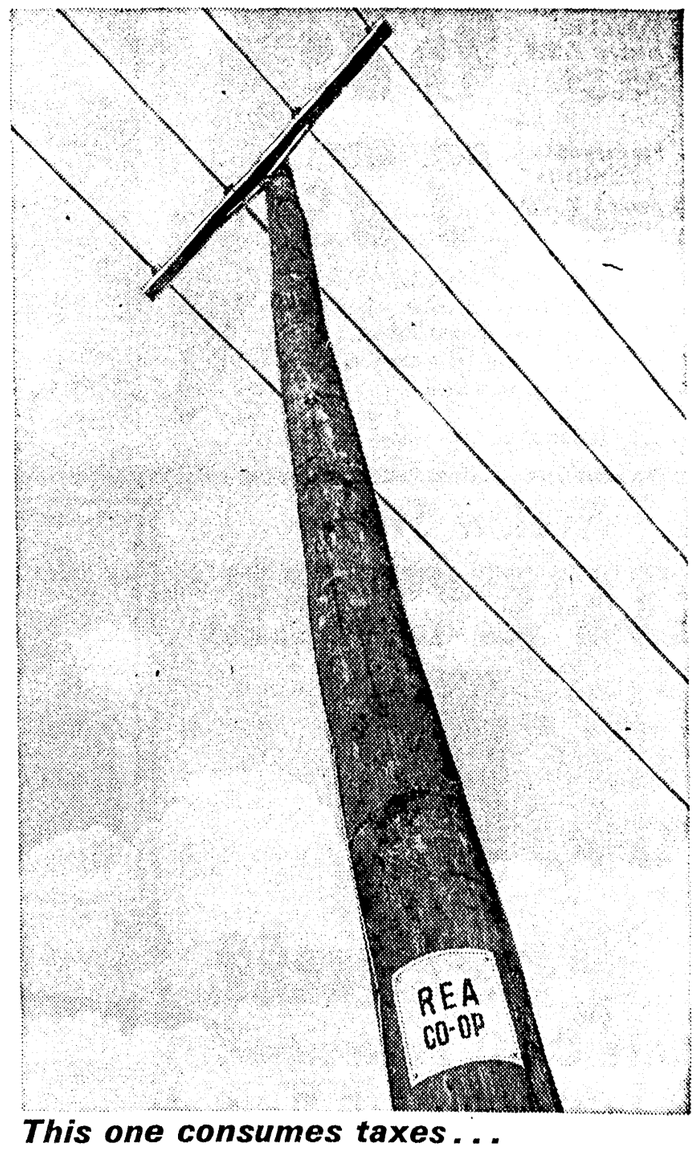

Having brought out a good synthetic patent, Patina, Du Pont has not introduced Corfam, a chemical compound which duplicates smooth and suede leathers. It is said that the material is porous and will allow the passage of moisture, a claim which the leather people are hotly contesting.

If the example of Patina may be taken, the new material will wear extremely well, but is not as supple, particularly in suede, as natural leather.

But it has advantages in that it can be wiped clean, even in the suede finish, and designers can cut it from uniform rolls. A number of top shoe designers like Julianelli, Newton Elkin and David Evins are using it in their spring lines.

This electric line pays taxes

. . . and it's your tax money it consumes!

Investor-owned companies pay taxes like other good citizens . . . yet the REA co-ops pay no federal taxes and very little local taxes. Although 99% of the rural homes in Louisiana now have electric service (2/3 of them from investor-owned companies), Washington promotors of REA keep pushing the co-ops to expand. As a result, 5 out of 6 new co-op customers are non-farm.

Shouldn't the REA co-ops either limit their services to rural areas . . . or pay the same taxes as investor-owned companies? So long as they don't, you pay the difference.

CAMERA Angles

David Douglas Duncan is a unique personality in the world of photography, unique in his individualistic attire, in his conversation which seems to light up and take wings when discussing photography and in his zealous drive to tackle new horizons in photo techniques.

Why would a camera artist who has produced such notable picture books as the "Private World of Pablo Picosso's "The Kremlin" and "Picassos"—all artistic, financial and photographic triumphs — want to seek a new approach, a new way to take pictures?

BORED

"After many years, I was bored with straight photography," he said bluntly. "I was looking for a new excitement, a new challenge Picasso probably started my restlessness by needling me about the unchanging format of photography, its lack of crative self-expression.

"I didn't know what I was looking for," Duncan recalled, ". . then I found it! I was in an optical shop in Germany. I was shown a special lens combined with a prism intended for a television camera for trick effects. I began to think of ways of adapting it to my Nikon camera.

"It started a period of experimentation and changes. Many months of picture taking brought forth my own designs with multiple lenses, different prism surfaces and ways to attach the contraption to the camera. I wound up with a 25-pound camera 'bazooka' which gave me exciting new images."

Duncan's use of the odd-ball camera, particularly in interpreting Paris and some of its artists and writers, received a dramatic, colorful display in a recent Saturday Evening Post. It led too, to a citiation awarded by the French Cultural Embassy for combining this unique view of Paris with artistic superiority in its photography.

MULTIVISIONED

The multivisioned pictures, all in color, are different, eye-catching and provocative. But not everyone is convinced they are better than Duncan's earlier work. There was excitement enough in straight photography when he covered the Korean crisis in 1950 resulting in his first book, "This is War." It remains a dramatic portfolio of men in battle.

In the following six years he photographed almost every trouble spot around the world. Perhaps excitement became routine and it was time for a change. In 1957 he resigned from his globe-trotting magazine job and focused on a new challenge . . . art and his friend Picasso.

Today Duncan and his wife make their home in Cannes, France, where he designs and publishes his own books. He is presently starting work on an autobiography and has assembled the pictures he made as a youngster, as a Life staff photographer, Marine Corps combat camerman and as a freelancer.

"I'm a 'string-saver,' " he admitted. "It's a good thing, too, because I've cached away negatives, pictures and notes of everything I've done. It's a challenge to put together the little pieces that sum up what you are today. Between that and my bazooka camera, I'll have enough camera, I'll have enough excitement for the next couple of years."

Gardens Site Of Puccini Opera Event

MANY (Special) — Puccini's immortal opera "Madame Butterfly," sung in English will be presented in a full dress production by the Shreveport Symphony Repertory Opera Company at Hodges Gardens south of Many on Saturday at twilight, May 2.

Said to be Giacomo Puccini's "most fragrant" opera, it will be a most fitting opening for the rose season in Hodges Gardens — an early May to winter's frost spectacular featuring thousands of modern roses, brilliant unnamed test specimens for All-America Rose Selections, yester-year once threatened with extinction.

LAKESHORE

To be held on the stage of the lakeshore theatre, the performance will star Jasmine Fleming Egan, lyric-spinto soprano, in the role of Cio Cio San and other members of the cast, who have recently performed in the opera in Shreveport, Natchitoches, Lafayette and Magnolia, Ark. In addition to Miss Egan, the company of 70 includes Hall Lyons, Lafayette tenor, in the role of Pinkerton; Dorothy Hepburn, mezzo - soprano of Shreveport who sang in the Hodges Gardens Christmas Festival, as Suzuki; Ken Dooley, Shreveport, as Sharpless; other Shreveport singers, Monas Harlan, James Smith, and Ann Hagens; the Shreveport Symphony Orchestra, directed by John Shenault; and the Repertory Opera Chorus.

Zolley Lerner, formerly of Hollywood, is in charge of staging. The sets are designed by James Hull Miller, internationally known theatre designer, author of numerous magazine and periodical articles distributed nationally and internationally. Costumes are by Betty Jones.

CURTAIN CALL

The opening of "Breath of Spring" is set for Friday, April 10, less than two weeks away. The innovation of a split run will be repeated with performances Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, April 10, 11 and 12, followed by a break of three days before resumption Thursday through Sunday, April 15-19. All seven performances will have an 8:15 p.m. curtain.

The customary mailing will go to members shortly enabling them to make advance reservations before the opening of the box office at Strauss Playhouse on April 8. For the last two shows about 45 per cent of all reservations have been ordered by mail in advance as members have discovered the convenience of this method, not to mention the greater assurance of obtaining the desired date and location.

AUDITIONS

While "Breath of Spring" takes its breather, executive director Richard M. Clark will hold auditions for "Take Her, She's Mine," at Strauss Playhouse on Monday, April 13, and Tuesday, April 14, at 7:30 p.m. This delightful comedy calls for a number of college-age boys and girls and several parent-teacher types. In all the cast totals 17, so there should be good odds in favor of securing a part.

Alice Peat and Julie Solomon and Mary Gill were the first to respond to our plea for the loan of furs. Each found a jacket we could borrow. We hope others will heed the call, for the script demands many more furs than we have in sight at the moment. In fact, "Breath of Spring" takes its title from a shade of mutation mink and the whole zany plot concerns the fur stealing machinations of respected senior citizens.

TAKE UP CRIME

How a retired brigadier, a voice coach, a china mender, a charity worker and a society matron decide to take up crime, how one successful venture leads to another, how their ex-convict maid tries to uphold the law and how Scotland Yard becomes involved are events that will be unfolded at Strauss Playhouse while you laugh three acts away.

With our membership attaining the 3,000 mark, Mary Ellison reports that we have run out of membership cards. If you joined Little Theatre recently and have not received one, you need not worry. With or without a card, your name is in our files, and you can make reservations for the last two shows with no concern on this score.

Jackie Woods gave Little Theatre a dozen pines to replace the hardwoods we have lost. Beryl Franklin, Charlie DePoe and Russ Kettenring have undertaken to get them planted.

INFORMATION

Anyone contemplating a theatre trip to New York would do well to consult with Miss Lallage Feazel. Having just attended 11 shows in 10 days, she is a mine of information on the current season.

Lallage reports that the outstanding hits for which tickets are scarce are "Hello, Dolly," the Carol Channing musical, "Barefoot In the Park," by the author of "Come Blow Your Horn," "Any Wednesday," a somewhat risque comedy with a notable performance by new discovery Sandy Dennis, and "The Deputy," a highly controversial drama.

Now Showing: From the super secret files of the U. S. Navy comes the whole incredible story of the deadliest weapon of World War II, "The Incredible Mr. Limpet," starring Don Knotts and Carole Cook. It's the funniest secret Fish Agent you will ever see on land or sea.

CURTAIN CALL

The opening of "Breath of Spring" is set for Friday, April 10, less than two weeks away. The innovation of a split run will be repeated with performances Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, April 10, 11 and 12, followed by a break of three days before resumption Thursday through Sunday, April 15-19. All seven performances will have an 8:15 p.m. curtain.

The customary mailing will go to members shortly enabling them to make advance reservations before the opening of the box office at Strauss Playhouse on April 8. For the last two shows about 45 per cent of all reservations have been ordered by mail in advance as members have discovered the convenience of this method, not to mention the greater assurance of obtaining the desired date and location.

AUDITIONS

While "Breath of Spring" takes its breather, executive director Richard M. Clark will hold auditions for "Take Her, She's Mine," at Strauss Playhouse on Monday, April 13, and Tuesday, April 14, at 7:30 p.m. This delightful comedy calls for a number of college-age boys and girls and several parent-teacher types. In all the cast totals 17, so there should be good odds in favor of securing a part.

Alice Peat and Julie Solomon and Mary Gill were the first to respond to our plea for the loan of furs. Each found a jacket we could borrow. We hope others will heed the call, for the script demands many more furs than we have in sight at the moment. In fact, "Breath of Spring" takes its title from a shade of mutation mink and the whole zany plot concerns the fur stealing machinations of respected senior citizens.

TAKE UP CRIME

How a retired brigadier, a voice coach, a china mender, a charity worker and a society matron decide to take up crime, how one successful venture leads to another, how their ex-convict maid tries to uphold the law and how Scotland Yard becomes involved are events that will be unfolded at Strauss Playhouse while you laugh three acts away.

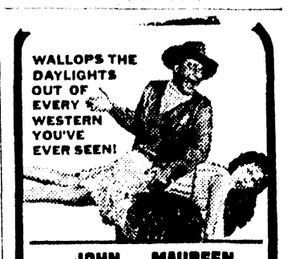

With our membership attaining the 3,000 mark, Mary Ellison reports that we have run out of membership cards. If you joined Little Theatre recently and have not received one, you need not worry. With or without a card, your name is in our files, and you can make reservations for the last two shows with no concern on this score.

Jackie Woods gave Little Theatre a dozen pines to replace the hardwoods we have lost. Beryl Franklin, Charlie DePoe and Russ Kettering have undertaken to get them planted.

INFORMATION

Anyone contemplating a theatre trip to New York would do well to consult with Miss Lallage Feazel. Having just attended 11 shows in 10 days, she is a mine of information on the current season.

Lallage reports that the outstanding hits for which tickets are scarce are "Hello, Dolly," the Carol Channing musical, "Barefoot In the Park," by the author of "Come Blow Your Horn," "Any Wednesday," a somewhat risque comedy with a notable performance by new discovery Sandy Dennis, and "The Deputy," a highly controversial drama.

Home And Garden

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Garden Show Beauty Scene

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

"Flora Tourcade" was the theme of the 16th annual Louisiana Garden Club Federation's Flower show held in Ruston, March 20-21, in the Memorial Gymnasium at Louisiana Tech. It was greatly enjoyed by many visitors from throughout the state.

This theme was so excellently interpreted in the many artistic designs which invited the exhibitor and the observer to take a tour of Louisiana. The designs brought out the history, geography, scenery, industry, and culture, natural resources, folklore and social life of our wonderful state. Congratulations are certainly due so many who had a part in making this the most successful and most beautiful flower show yet to be held by the LGCF clubs.

It may be taking a chance to list some of these without listing all, and, of course it would be impossible to list all who helped — but, to the general chairman, Mrs. John A. Wright we do say "thanks" for all she did. Then the flower show chairman, Mrs. H. C. Neely did such a wonderful job. We couldn't leave out Dr. John Wright, who was listed as the staging chairman, but we know he had a big hand in so many other things other than just the staging which in itself was a work of art.

HONORARY CHAIRMAN

Mrs. F. L. Jordan, our state LGCF president was our honorary chairman. She is so capable in her position and greatly loved by all of us. Mrs. Joe Madden, co-chairman of the flower show is greatly appreciated by all who worked with her. The Flower Show schedule proved most interesting — and challenging. Mrs. Ann Mooney was the chairman. Mrs. B. H. Talbot, chairman of horticulture schedule, and Mrs. J. D. Murry wrote the schedule for the juniors and high school gardeners. The list could go on and on listing the many who held responsible jobs in making our show a success, so I will say "Thanks" to all the rest — including the exhibitors who worked so seriously on their designs. As one individual, and a garden clubber I wish to say "thanks" to each.

AMONG WINNERS

Fifth District garden clubs made a wonderful showing in winning the awards, both in the Artistic Design Division and the Horticulture Division. I have a list of the Blue Ribbon award winners in the Design Division, but did not get a complete list of those in the Horticulture Division. They are:

Class 1 "Poverty Point," Mrs. Sonny Stephens, Garden Gate Garden Club; Winnsboro, La. Class 4 "Visions of Victoria," Mrs. Ralph Marionneaux, Monroe Garden Club.

Class 6 "Heirloom", Mrs. W. C. Reeves, Bernice, Bernice Garden Club. Class 13 "Ozone Belt," Mrs. John Tolar, Welcome Garden Club of the Twin Cities. Class 16 "Gulf Awash," Mrs. John Tolar, College Height's Garden Club, Monroe. Class 11 "Hillbillies at Home," Mrs. Willard L. Hageman, Bernice Garden Club. Class 22 "Shrimp Boat", Mrs. David Burk, Rayville Garden Club. Class 29 "Reflection," Art, Mrs. J. W. Keller, College Height's Garden Club, Monroe.

Class 34 "Lovely Louisiana," Farmerville Garden Club. Class 41 "Bound for the Forty Yard Line," Mrs. Blanch E. Tucker, Wisner. Class 42 "Gallery Gossip" Mrs. Ann Mooney, Jonesboro - Hodge Garden Club. Class 26 "Giants of Industry," Mrs. John P. Lewis, Monroe Garden Club. Class 43 "Anti-Bellum Elegance," Mrs. Elaine Taylor, Twilight Garden Club, Ruston.

Class 44 "Dramatic Flair," Mrs. E. W. Causey, Ruston Garden Club. Class 47 "Louisiana in Perspective," Mrs. V. S. Garnett, Monroe Garden Club. Class 48 "Business and Pleasure," Mrs. Jettie Barnum, Jonesboro-Hodge Garden Club.

The thirtieth Annual Convention of the LGCF was held simultanously in Ruston. This, too, was considered a tremendous success. The General Chairman for the Convention was Mrs. John A. Wright, Ruston. The Convention chairman was Mrs. C. J. Turpin, Monroe. The meeting was hosted by the Garden clubs of Lincoln Garden Council, Twin City Garden Club Council, of Monroe and West Monroe, and Fifth District. To all who made this meeting "Congratulations."

Another big event will take place soon. The Flower Show "Growing With West Monroe," will be staged by the Twin City Garden Club Council of Monroe and West Monroe. The Tulip Festival Show will be sponsored by the Downtown Merchants of West Monroe Chamber of Commerce, April 2 and 3. All of the Fifth District Garden Clubs members are invited to participate, also, the Home Demonstration Clubs, and Junior Clubs. This should prove to be a lovely show that will be enjoyed by many visitors. Don't forget the date. Also, now is the time to visit Bagwell's Garden, "Little Dutch Garden," 1307 Parnell St., West Monroe, to see the beautiful tulips now in their fullest bloom.

The Twin City Garden Club Council will meet Thurday, April 9, at 9:30 a.m. in the Julia Wossman Recreation Center.

Plan Garden With Thought To Salads

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

This being garden planning time in much of the country, give some thought to your 1964 salad bowl. Many of the ingredients needed for your salad may be grown in a relatively small space.

Some of the salad vegetables are vine crops and may be trained upward. These include tomatoes, which may be staked, and cucumbers, which may be guided to climb a fence, wires or trellis.

ATTRACTIVE

Pepper plants are small and attractive enough to be ornamental. Redishes should be grown in successive or overlapping crops to assure small, crisp results for the dinner table. Onions may be raised as a border item, and so may chives. Lettuce, especially those varieties with frilled or varicolored foliage, also are suitable for borders, or as boundary lines between flower and vegetable gardens.

Last summer, a patch of tomatoes grew on the curbline of Main Street, Oneonta, N.Y., in front of a gasoline service station. This garden began as a joke between the station operator and a friend, Joseph Boschetti Sr., who asked if he could use the tiny piece of land hemmed in by the station and concrete curbing.

Finances May Limit House Work

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

What can you do to improve your house while you wait for the money tree to bloom?

That's the attitude to take, rather than wishing for something you can't afford right now. Rejoice that you can afford another small improvement that can add to the family happiness and value of your house.

There is always room for one small plan when you own a house and even if you rent one. It's half the fun of running your own little estate.

DON'T SCOFF

The improvement you can afford this year may merely be an awning over an open porch or deck. Don't scoff. It may be the best hundred-or-so dollars you've spent in years. An awning can transform an outdoor extension of the house into an intimate, cozy thing. It's as if the house spread out its arms to bring the outdeck into the fold.

What other assets do you have on hand that may be improved with the little money you have?

An interesting or large tree, even if it is some distance from the house, can be the base of a patio, offering its outstretched limbs as shade. Properly landscaped with flower borders, this can be a spot that is truly enjoyable. The floor can be gravel or granite chips or even brick.

You can discover other outdoor areas if there isn't a big tree. The side of a sloping lawn offers great possibilities for shady hours and even for sun bathing, although the aim should be to build the outdoor patio where there is some sort fo shelter from sun and sudden showers.

PATIO NUCLEUS

Carports are often converted into patios because there is an overhang above that forms the beginning of a roof so that it can be laced with heavy vines until plans for a more permanent structure are complete.

People living on hilltops need not forego a patio because the ground slopes away sharply. Some of the most interesting patios and terraces may be built where the ground slopes away. Even some distance from the house, the ground may be terraced by erecting a cinder block wall in a free form shape, rectangle or what have you, filling in the area, and outlining it once it is level with a brick or stone wall or a fence that is in keeping with others on the property. Shrubs may then be planted to give the area additional interest and statuary and bird baths can give it character.

A very inexpensive patio may be built in stages from a poured concrete first-year project. An ideal place for this is between the house and garage, particularly if there are doors on both sides. The second year an awning may be added, or if the plan is to enclose it eventually so that it is useful in winter also, a window-screen arrangement may be the best bet.

Slate, flagstone, granite chips, gravel and brick make good floorings, and the choice often depends on where it is to be used. Granite and gravel will hug even the most irregular land, making it less expensive than other flooring but it needs some sort of edging as heavy rains will wash it away.

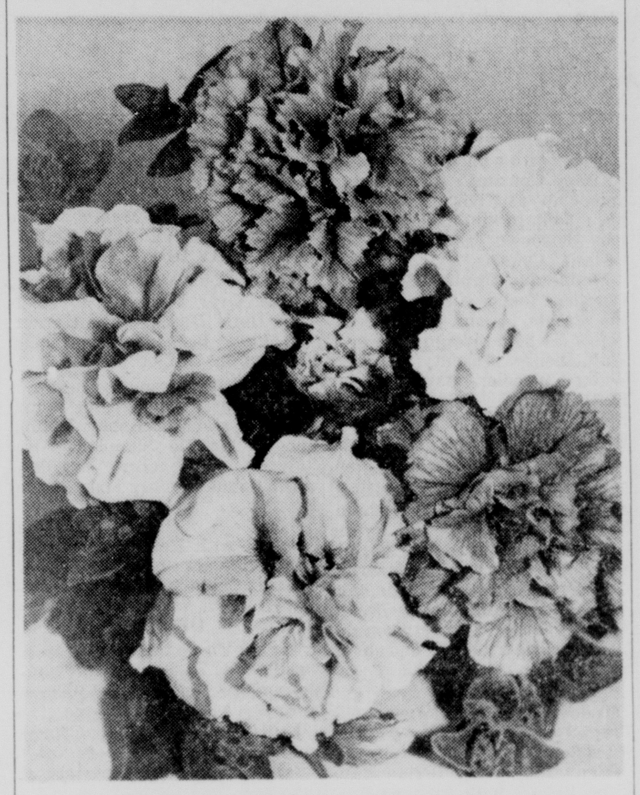

GET DIRECTIONS

If the do-it-yourselfer is to put down the patio floor, he should get directions for his product from the manufacturer. Soil must be dug out and put in for some floorings. A drainage plan is necessary and a pattern must be worked out. The design should be put on paper first for best results.

We should evaluate everything before making the first move, and that includes working out the site of the patio or terrace so that it is not too windy, too buggy, too sunny or too shady. If the proper restraint is exercised so we do not become so ambitious that the project can't be completed for lack of time or money, this should be a painless experiment whether it is done by a do-it-yourselfer or the experts. We should know where we are going and how much it will cost before we start.

STAMP NEWS

The government of Jamaica receives the kudos for issuing a set of three new stamps commemorating the success of Miss Carole Jean Crawford in the 1963 "Miss World" competition. Each stamp depicts a full-length view of the pretty Miss Crawford attired in a bathing suit, holding the scepter of her championship and wearing the crown as queen on her auburn hair. In the background, flanked by palm trees, is the throne. At the sides of the stamp are the inscriptions "Miss Jamaica 1963" and "Miss World 1963." The 3 pence is green, 1 shilling brown and 1-6 blue.

Papua and New Guinea have issued a new set of stamps honoring the first "Common Roll" elections to be held in that territory. There are two stamps in the set of identical design but

France has issued a new Civil Defense stamp dedicated to firemen, reports the French Ministry of Posts and Telecommunications in Paris. The new stamp shows three emblems: the arms of the Regiment of Firemen of Paris, created in 1811 by Napolean I; the emblem of the National Federation of Firemen of France, founded in 1881; and the emblem of the Battalion of Marine Firemen in Marseille, organized in 1939.

Ethiopia has issued a new set of five values honoring great empresses of Ethiopia. This is the third in a series of Ancient Leaders stamps from designs by Afework Tekle. The 10 cents features the Queen of Sheba, 990 B.C.; the 15 cents depicts Empress Helen, 1500 A.D.; the 50 cents illustrates Empress Seble-Wongel, 1530 A.D.; the 60 cents shows Empress Mentiwab, 1730 A.D; the 80 cents pictures Empress Taitu, 1890 A.D.

Flavor Test On Apples Is Problem

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

One of the biggest problems on one of the world's biggest fruit breeding farms is tasting apples.

The scene is the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station at Geneva. The station breeds so many varieties of apples that each tree is different, says Paris Trail of the staff.

This creates quite a problem in the fall. The apples aren't anywhere near uniform enough to be processed commercially, and the station is afraid to let the public pick them, lest the trees be damaged. So most of the apples rot.

First growth apples are not very sweet and, Trail says, have a tendency to bite back. After half a day of testing, your mouth is puckered and your stomach aches.

So the breeders take turns tasting for each other.

MANY FACETS

The station's efforts extend in many directions. Work is going on to find a cucumber that won't turn sour, as well as disease resistant strains; biological rather than chemical control of insects, an important project considering the "Silent Spring" uproar about chemicals. Some of the controls involve natural virus disease which kills insects such as the cabbage looper, leaf rollers, Japanese beetles and chafers. The insect killer is made with ground - up grubs already affected by the disease.

Of course, one scientist noted, the bacterium - diseased grubs used to produce this method of control are, in a sense, chemicals.

CALADIUMS

If you enjoy caladium in your garden, late winter is a good time to start tubers indoors in clay pots. Plant tubers so that the tops are half an inch under the soil. Keep them in humid, 70-degree temperature until the ground is warm enough to plunge them outdoors.

COVER PLANT

Taller perennials that are easy to grow are coreopsis and gaillardia. Coreopsis is bright yellow and gaillardia is bright and dark red, orange and yellow.

The perennial delphinium gives you two sets of blooms each year. After the first flowers have gone by, cut the stems (before seed pods form) to about a foot above the ground, thus retaining a few leaves to help promote growth. When new leaves have developed, remove the remainder of the old stalks.

There is a good reason to keep a few old leaves. If you don't, the plant may die. And rust may develop if you don't get rid of the old leaves later.

Many of the old delphinium are more rugged than the newer Pacific hybrids, which dislike heavy soil that is not adequately drained.

Not many insects bother delphinium. One pest, however, is the cyclamen mite, which may be controlled with kelthane. To inhibit mildew, spray with phaltan or actidione.

EXTENSION NEWS

Fine Array On Display

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

This Sunday should prove to be the most gorgeous day of the year because every fair lady, young or old, will be in her finest array, her new Easter outfit. The colors are beautiful this spring and it will surely be a parade of colors today.

It's truly a great day for the little folks with all the colored Easter eggs. It was said that the original purpose in coloring eggs was to imitate the brilliantly hued foliage that came with the first flush of spring. In the early days of the Christian church, eggs were colored red denoting the blood of Christ.

GARDENING

The secret to a better landscape development for you, Mrs. Gardner, may lie in the application of fertilizer on the lawn, on shrubs and on trees. March is the best time to do this as the response of these ornamentals to fertilizer is better in the early spring than at any other time of the year. Adequate moisture is present and plants need food to begin growth after a winter of little or no activity. For shrubs, use one-half cup of a complete fertilizer such as 8-8-8 or its equivalent per square yard covered by the plant. Distribute the fertilizer around the plant in every direction, but do not allow the fertilizer to touch the plant stems.

Trees should receive one pound of complete fertilizer per year of age of the tree. Place the fertilizer in a series of holes of four to six inches deep beginning about four feet from the trunk and extending out beyond the spread of the branches. The holes should be in rings around the tree each ring should be about four feet from the other.

For a lush, dark green lawn grass, fertilizer should be applied at the rate of 20 pounds per 1,000 square feet of lawn. Do not apply the fertilizer when grass leaves are wet. Water the lawn immediately after application to wash the fertilizer into the soil and to prevent burning the leaves.

HOBBY DAY

The annual Hobby Day will be held Tuesday, April 7 at the Agricultural Building in West Monroe. If you plan to help with handicraft during Bible School you will surely want to come and see all the lovely ideas Mrs. Leon Sims of Modern Homemaker Club, has prepared.

Mrs. Floyd Kent, of Thrifty Homemaker, will give you some ideas in using your scraps of felt.

Mrs. W. F. Carson, of Lamkin, has a new decorator pillow and several other interesting crafts.

Mrs. Robert Tate, president of the Lamkin Club, will give you early ideas for Christmas.

DRAPERY WORKSHOP

If you, Mrs. Homemaker, want to learn to make your draperies, come to the demonstration at the Agricultural Building Thursday, April 2 at 9:30 a.m. The demonstration will be over at noon. If you need additional help in making a draw drapery or how to figure the amount of material, your home demonstration agent will remain in the office Friday, April 3 to help you.

BUYING POULTRY

You, Mrs. Consumer, have seen the U. S. Department of Agriculture's inspection mark and grade shield on poultry. But did you know that these are two different ratings.

The inspection mark is required by law on all poultry moving in interstate commerce. It is your assurance that each bird has been examined and certified as wholesome, and processed in a sanitary manner.

The grade shield indicates the quality of the bird. Grading is not required by law. But much of the poultry sold in retail stores today is officially graded. The grades are based on the shape of the bird, the "Meatiness," amount and distribution of fat, and the number and extent of dressing defects. U. S. Grade A poultry is the finest. These birds are well fleshed, plump and have a good layer of fat.

A THOUGHT

Happiness comes when we stop wailing about the troubles we have and offer thanks for all the troubles we don't have.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

It's highly unlikely you'll ever see a home workshop that bears any resemblance to those glistening layouts that occasionally make an appearance in some publications. The housekeeping chores involved in keeping such workshops spotless would prevent them from ever being used for making or fixing things.

Conceding then, that a certain amount of disorder is inevitable, it still is possible to keep a home workshop reasonably neat, clean and safe with a minimum amount of trouble. The secret is in making it easy to put things in their proper place, whether it be tools, nails, lumber, sawdust or oily rags.

If you have a holder for screwdrivers, you're likely to return a screwdriver to it rather than placing it on a bench. If you have individual containers for nails and screws of different sizes, you want find the fasteners all over the place. If a lumber-storage rack is convenient, pieces of wood will wind up there rather than on the floor. And metal containers for sawdust and rags not only will encourage neatness, they'll help to prevent fires.

MAKE EASIER

In planning a workshop, you can make it easier for yourself by remembering certain fundamentals. Here are some of them:

If the workshop is large enough to keep your table saw in the center of the room, fine. If it isn't, better put retractable rubber casters on the legs of the saw stand so that it can be moved to the center when you're working with large pieces of wood.

It will be difficult to keep your tools from rusting if the workshop is in a damp basement. A dehumidifier of some sort may be a necessity.

Sweeping a basement floor will be a lot easier if you cover the concrete with resilient tiles or some other type of smooth flooring.

The thirtieth Annual Convention of the LGCF was held simultanously in Ruston. This, too, was considered a tremendous success. The General Chairman for the Convention was Mrs. John A. Wright, Ruston. The Convention chairman was Mrs. C. J. Turpin, Monroe. The meeting was hosted by the Garden clubs of Lincoln Garden Council, Twin City Garden Club Council, of Monroe and West Monroe, and Fifth District. To all who made this meeting "Congratulations."

Another big event will take place soon. The Flower Show "Growing With West Monroe," will be staged by the Twin City Garden Club Council of Monroe and West Monroe. The Tulip Festival Show will be sponsored by the Downtown Merchants of West Monroe Chamber of Commerce, April 2 and 3. All of the Fifth District Garden Clubs members are invited to participate, also, the Home Demonstration Clubs, and Junior Clubs. This should prove to be a lovely show that will be enjoyed by many visitors. Don't forget the date. Also, now is the time to visit Bagwell's Garden, "Little Dutch Garden," 1307 Parnell St., West Monroe, to see the beautiful tulips now in their fullest bloom.

The Twin City Garden Club Council will meet Thurday, April 9, at 9:30 a.m. in the Julia Wossman Recreation Center.

Plan Garden With Thought To Salads

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

This being garden planning time in much of the country, give some thought to your 1964 salad bowl. Many of the ingredients needed for your salad may be grown in a relatively small space.

Some of the salad vegetables are vine crops and may be trained upward. These include tomatoes, which may be staked, and cucumbers, which may be guided to climb a fence, wires or trellis.

ATTRACTIVE

Pepper plants are small and attractive enough to be ornamental. Redishes should be grown in successive or overlapping crops to assure small, crisp results for the dinner table. Onions may be raised as a border item, and so may chives. Lettuce, especially those varieties with frilled or varicolored foliage, also are suitable for borders, or as boundary lines between flower and vegetable gardens.

Last summer, a patch of tomatoes grew on the curbline of Main Street, Oneonta, N.Y., in front of a gasoline service station. This garden began as a joke between the station operator and a friend, Joseph Boschetti Sr., who asked if he could use the tiny piece of land hemmed in by the station and concrete curbing.

Finances May Limit House Work

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

What can you do to improve your house while you wait for the money tree to bloom?

That's the attitude to take, rather than wishing for something you can't afford right now. Rejoice that you can afford another small improvement that can add to the family happiness and value of your house.

There is always room for one small plan when you own a house and even if you rent one. It's half the fun of running your own little estate.

DON'T SCOFF

The improvement you can afford this year may merely be an awning over an open porch or deck. Don't scoff. It may be the best hundred-or-so dollars you've spent in years. An awning can transform an outdoor extension of the house into an intimate, cozy thing. It's as if the house spread out its arms to bring the outdeck into the fold.

What other assets do you have on hand that may be improved with the little money you have?

An interesting or large tree, even if it is some distance from the house, can be the base of a patio, offering its outstretched limbs as shade. Properly landscaped with flower borders, this can be a spot that is truly enjoyable. The floor can be gravel or granite chips or even brick.

You can discover other outdoor areas if there isn't a big tree. The side of a sloping lawn offers great possibilities for shady hours and even for sun bathing, although the aim should be to build the outdoor patio where there is some sort fo shelter from sun and sudden showers.

PATIO NUCLEUS

Carports are often converted into patios because there is an overhang above that forms the beginning of a roof so that it can be laced with heavy vines until plans for a more permanent structure are complete.

People living on hilltops need not forego a patio because the ground slopes away sharply. Some of the most interesting patios and terraces may be built where the ground slopes away. Even some distance from the house, the ground may be terraced by erecting a cinder block wall in a free form shape, rectangle or what have you, filling in the area, and outlining it once it is level with a brick or stone wall or a fence that is in keeping with others on the property. Shrubs may then be planted to give the area additional interest and statuary and bird baths can give it character.

A very inexpensive patio may be built in stages from a poured concrete first-year project. An ideal place for this is between the house and garage, particularly if there are doors on both sides. The second year an awning may be added, or if the plan is to enclose it eventually so that it is useful in winter also, a window-screen arrangement may be the best bet.

Slate, flagstone, granite chips, gravel and brick make good floorings, and the choice often depends on where it is to be used. Granite and gravel will hug even the most irregular land, making it less expensive than other flooring but it needs some sort of edging as heavy rains will wash it away.

GET DIRECTIONS

If the do-it-yourselfer is to put down the patio floor, he should get directions for his product from the manufacturer. Soil must be dug out and put in for some floorings. A drainage plan is necessary and a pattern must be worked out. The design should be put on paper first for best results.

We should evaluate everything before making the first move, and that includes working out the site of the patio or terrace so that it is not too windy, too buggy, too sunny or too shady. If the proper restraint is exercised so we do not become so ambitious that the project can't be completed for lack of time or money, this should be a painless experiment whether it is done by a do-it-yourselfer or the experts. We should know where we are going and how much it will cost before we start.

STAMP NEWS

The government of Jamaica receives the kudos for issuing a set of three new stamps commemorating the success of Miss Carole Jean Crawford in the 1963 "Miss World" competition. Each stamp depicts a full-length view of the pretty Miss Crawford attired in a bathing suit, holding the scepter of her championship and wearing the crown as queen on her auburn hair. In the background, flanked by palm trees, is the throne. At the sides of the stamp are the inscriptions "Miss Jamaica 1963" and "Miss World 1963." The 3 pence is green, 1 shilling brown and 1-6 blue.

Papua and New Guinea have issued a new set of stamps honoring the first "Common Roll" elections to be held in that territory. There are two stamps in the set of identical design but

France has issued a new Civil Defense stamp dedicated to firemen, reports the French Ministry of Posts and Telecommunications in Paris. The new stamp shows three emblems: the arms of the Regiment of Firemen of Paris, created in 1811 by Napolean I; the emblem of the National Federation of Firemen of France, founded in 1881; and the emblem of the Battalion of Marine Firemen in Marseille, organized in 1939.

Ethiopia has issued a new set of five values honoring great empresses of Ethiopia. This is the third in a series of Ancient Leaders stamps from designs by Afework Tekle. The 10 cents features the Queen of Sheba, 990 B.C.; the 15 cents depicts Empress Helen, 1500 A.D.; the 50 cents illustrates Empress Seble-Wongel, 1530 A.D.; the 60 cents shows Empress Mentiwab, 1730 A.D; the 80 cents pictures Empress Taitu, 1890 A.D.

Flavor Test On Apples Is Problem

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

One of the biggest problems on one of the world's biggest fruit breeding farms is tasting apples.

The scene is the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station at Geneva. The station breeds so many varieties of apples that each tree is different, says Paris Trail of the staff.

This creates quite a problem in the fall. The apples aren't anywhere near uniform enough to be processed commercially, and the station is afraid to let the public pick them, lest the trees be damaged. So most of the apples rot.

The apples are tasted, however, by the breeders, who find it a tough chore. Why?

First growth apples are not very sweet and, Trail says, have a tendency to bite back. After half a day of testing, your mouth is puckered and your stomach aches.

So the breeders take turns tasting for each other.

MANY FACETS

The station's efforts extend in many directions. Work is going on to find a cucumber that won't turn sour, as well as disease resistant strains; biological rather than chemical control of insects, an important project considering the "Silent Spring" uproar about chemicals. Some of the controls involve natural virus disease which kills insects such as the cabbage looper, leaf rollers, Japanese beetles and chafers. The insect killer is made with ground - up grubs already affected by the disease.

Of course, one scientist noted, the bacterium - diseased grubs used to produce this method of control are, in a sense, chemicals.

CALADIUMS

If you enjoy caladium in your garden, late winter is a good time to start tubers indoors in clay pots. Plant tubers so that the tops are half an inch under the soil. Keep them in humid, 70-degree temperature until the ground is warm enough to plunge them outdoors.

COVER PLANT

Taller perennials that are easy to grow are coreopsis and gaillardia. Coreopsis is bright yellow and gaillardia is bright and dark red, orange and yellow.

The perennial delphinium gives you two sets of blooms each year. After the first flowers have gone by, cut the stems (before seed pods form) to about a foot above the ground, thus retaining a few leaves to help promote growth. When new leaves have developed, remove the remainder of the old stalks.

There is a good reason to keep a few old leaves. If you don't, the plant may die. And rust may develop if you don't get rid of the old leaves later.

Many of the old delphinium are more rugged than the newer Pacific hybirds, which dislike heavy soil that is not adequately drained.

Not many insects bother delphinium. One pest, however, is the cyclamen mite, which may be controlled with kelthane. To inhibit mildew, spray with phaltan or actidione.

Fine Array On Display

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

This Sunday should prove to be the most gorgeous day of the year because every fair lady, young or old, will be in her finest array, her new Easter outfit. The colors are beautiful this spring and it will surely be a parade of colors today.

It's truly a great day for the little folks with all the colored Easter eggs. It was said that the original purpose in coloring eggs was to imitate the brilliantly hued foliage that came with the first flush of spring. In the early days of the Christian church, eggs were colored red denoting the blood of Christ.

GARDENING

The secret to a better landscape development for you, Mrs. Gardner, may lie in the application of fertilizer on the lawn, on shrubs and on trees. March is the best time to do this as the response of these ornamentals to fertilizer is better in the early spring than at any other time of the year. Adequate moisture is present and plants need food to begin growth after a winter of little or no activity. For shrubs, use one-half cup of a complete fertilizer such as 8-8-8 or its equivalent per square yard covered by the plant. Distribute the fertilizer around the plant in every direction, but do not allow the fertilizer to touch the plant stems.

Trees should receive one pound of complete fertilizer per year of age of the tree. Place the fertilizer in a series of holes of four to six inches deep beginning about four feet from the trunk and extending out beyond the spread of the branches. The holes should be in rings around the tree each ring should be about four feet from the other.

For a lush, dark green lawn grass, fertilizer should be applied at the rate of 20 pounds per 1,000 square feet of lawn. Do not apply the fertilizer when grass leaves are wet. Water the lawn immediately after application to wash the fertilizer into the soil and to prevent burning the leaves.

HOBBY DAY

The annual Hobby Day will be held Tuesday, April 7 at the Agricultural Building in West Monroe. If you plan to help with handicraft during Bible School you will surely want to come and see all the lovely ideas Mrs. Leon Sims of Modern Homemaker Club, has prepared.

Mrs. Floyd Kent, of Thrifty Homemaker, will give you some ideas in using your scraps of felt.

Mrs. W. F. Carson, of Lamkin, has a new decorator pillow and several other interesting crafts.

Mrs. Robert Tate, president of the Lamkin Club, will give you early ideas for Christmas.

DRAPERY WORKSHOP

If you, Mrs. Homemaker, want to learn to make your draperies, come to the demonstration at the Agricultural Building Thursday, April 2 at 9:30 a.m. The demonstration will be over at noon. If you need additional help in making a draw drapery or how to figure the amount of material, your home demonstration agent will remain in the office Friday, April 3 to help you.

BUYING POULTRY

You, Mrs. Consumer, have seen the U. S. Department of Agriculture's inspection mark and grade shield on poultry. But did you know that these are two different ratings.

The inspection mark is required by law on all poultry moving in interstate commerce. It is your assurance that each bird has been examined and certified as wholesome, and processed in a sanitary manner.

The grade shield indicates the quality of the bird. Grading is not required by law. But much of the poultry sold in retail stores today is officially graded. The grades are based on the shape of the bird, the "Meatiness," amount and distribution of fat, and the number and extent of dressing defects. U. S. Grade A poultry is the finest. These birds are well fleshed, plump and have a good layer of fat.

A THOUGHT

Happiness comes when we stop wailing about the troubles we have and offer thanks for all the troubles we don't have.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

It's highly unlikely you'll ever see a home workshop that bears any resemblance to those glistening layouts that occasionally make an appearance in some publications. The housekeeping chores involved in keeping such workshops spotless would prevent them from ever being used for making or fixing things.

Conceding then, that a certain amount of disorder is inevitable, it still is possible to keep a home workshop reasonably neat, clean and safe with a minimum amount of trouble. The secret is in making it easy to put things in their proper place, whether it be tools, nails, lumber, sawdust or oily rags.

If you have a holder for screwdrivers, you're likely to return a screwdriver to it rather than placing it on a bench. If you have individual containers for nails and screws of different sizes, you want find the fasteners all over the place. If a lumber-storage rack is convenient, pieces of wood will wind up there rather than on the floor. And metal containers for sawdust and rags not only will encourage neatness, they'll help to prevent fires.

MAKE EASIER

In planning a workshop, you can make it easier for yourself by remembering certain fundamentals. Here are some of them:

If the workshop is large enough to keep your table saw in the center of the room, fine. If it isn't, better put retractable rubber casters on the legs of the saw stand so that it can be moved to the center when you're working with large pieces of wood.

It will be difficult to keep your tools from rusting if the workshop is in a damp basement. A dehumidifier of some sort may be a necessity.

Sweeping a basement floor will be a lot easier if you cover the concrete with resilient tiles or some other type of smooth flooring.

PROF. ELLIS SANDOZ

Book By Tech Professor To Be Published

CHICAGO, Ill. (Special)—The Henry Regnery Co. Saturday announced it has signed a contract with Prof. Ellis Sandoz of Louisiana Tech to publish Sandoz' book, "Americanism: A Study in Myth and Theory."

Henry Regnery, president of the company, said, "We expect this work to become a basic study of American institutions and thought."

Regnery plans to publish the book in the early spring of 1965, but expects to have copies of the finished book available for classroom use some time in the fall of this year. It will be published first in a hardbound edition and is expected to sell for $4.95.

Sandoz remarked in a synopsis of the book, "The continuation in existence of the historically - grown order of our society is strictly dependent upon a vigilant awareness of the principles foundational to our society.

"A devotion to these principles has claimed the best talent of our people and the very lives of millions of our sons in the course of American history.

"It would little become us, the living, to permit our birthright to be squandered through social amnesia."

Sandoz' book was the subject of an hour - long speech by the noted conservative, Prof. Willmore Kendall, chairman of the department of political science at the University of Dallas, at a conference in Chicago March 14 on the thought of German philosopher of history, Eric Voegelin.

Kendall called the Sandoz work, which takes the critical method of Voegelin and applies it to the American political and intellectual experience, "a stunning achievement."

Voegelin himself has hailed Sandoz as "a man of unusual qualities. . .he is indeed a mind of first order."

The president of the company which will publish the book said, "I am most impressed by this manuscript," and told Sandoz, "You have written a book of major importance, and one which will be a great addition to our list."

The final chapter of the book relates the findings of the earlier sections of the study to bring the analysis into the present and to diagnose the contemporary crisis in American society.

"The heart of Americanism," Sandoz says, "lies in the love of liberty as the essential condition for the pursuit of happiness."

He concludes, "The price of liberty remains eternal vigilance. If the fight is worth the candle, the long - term success of the United States against international communism must not be purchased at the price of the extinguishment of the system of limited government and attendant liberty that is the hallmark and great virtue of this nation under the constitution."

Award Program Is Scheduled By Monroe Jaycees

The Monroe Junior Chamber of Commerce Saturday announced plans for their academic achievement awards program.

Director Ron Blate in charge of the project said the project is designed to honor the "outstanding high school scholars" in Monroe.

"We realize the dedication, hard work, and sacrifice it takes to achieve top grades. We feel that students who have made the necessary effort to achieve this high honor should be recognized by their community, and we are very pleased to be able to carry out this program," Blate said.

This project is carried out on a national level by more than 4000 Jaycee chapters.

Final dates for conclusion of the project will be announced later, along with the chairman named by the Jaycees. The project will conclude with a banquet held in honor of the students with a special guest speaker. Each honor student will be presented with a scholastic achievement award certificate.

WEST MONROE ELECTION

Voters To Decide On Expansion Of Hospital April 21

(Editor's Note: This is the first of three articles dealing with the proposed expansion program of the Glenwood Hospital in West Monroe. Property owners in Ward Five will ballot on the project in a special election April 21).

By MARY ANNE CORPIN
Staff Writer

April 21 is the day of decision for Glenwood Hospital. On that date, property owners throughout Ward five will vote on whether to double the size of the hospital via a bond issue.

Almost half of the proposed $1.7 million cost of the expansion program, or $830,000, will be provided by federal Hill-Burton funds — a grant without need for repayment.

The balance of the cost, $870,000, is sought through a bond issue, to be repaid over a 30-year period.

PLAN ENDORSED

Numerous civic, church and P-TA groups have endorsed the expansion program and proposed bond issue. The West Monroe Chamber of Commerce, Optimist Club, Kiwanis, Lions, Civitans, Junior Chamber of Commerce, Rotary, Central Trades and Labor Council, many churches, civic leaders, business groups, Parent - Teacher Associations, workers and garden clubs are on record in favor of the expansion.

Cost to the local property owner will be small. The expansion will require a one - half mill tax per thousand dollars of assessment.

This will result in a cost of 50 cents tax per year, for every $1,000 that property is assessed.

"This means that if you have a home that is assessed at $3,000, you will pay only $1.50 per year in taxes for the expansion," explains Tex Kilpatrick, chairman of the Glenwood Expansion Program and president of the West Monroe Chamber of Commerce.

At the present time, there is a two and one - half mill tax which was levied in 1959 for construction of the hospital. A half-mill maintenance tax expired on January 1. The proposal to be voted on April 21 would in effect only return the one - half mill to the rolls.

Passage of the expansion bond issue will mean a yearly property tax the same as has been in effect for the past five years, when the maintenance tax was levied.

EXAMPLE CITED

For example, the home assessed at $3,000 will pay a total tax of $9 per year. Should the bond issue fail to pass, the cost to such a property owner would be only $1.50 less per year. . .and the loss to the community would be great.

"The home of the average taxpayer is assessed at less than $3,000," Kilpatrick noted, "so you can see that this marvelous expansion will cost each of us only a very small amount of money.

"Only a half - mill tax is extraordinary, when you consider that the size of all facilities will be doubled, two extra stories will be added to the present building and a three-floor wing will be constructed."

Need for the hospital expansion is apparent.

Since the hospital opened on September 18, 1962, and tabulating figures through February 29, 1964, a total of 8,639 patients have been admitted to Glenwood hospital.

During this year and a half of operation, Administrator Ewell Singleton points out, "We averaged 85 per cent occupancy per month.

"The minimum number of patients that we have had on any one day was nine — on opening day. The maximum number was 119 in February of this year.

JUDGE COMMENTS

Judge Jesse S. Heard, chairman of the Board of Commissioners of Hospital Service District Number One, advises the Morning World: "We have been advised by qualified financial experts that a tax greater than the one paid in 1963 is not necessary to expand the hospital to the contemplated 50,500 square feet.

"If the same taxes paid in 1963 are paid to retire the bonds for a period of 30 years, they will be sufficient to approximately double the hospital in size.

"In other words, the hospital can be doubled in size without a payment of taxes per year greater than the taxes paid in 1963."

Presently, the hospital has four floors, and a 100 bed capacity, plus 22 bassinettes.

The expansion cannot be financed from revenues of the hospital. Bond experts have advised the Board of Commissioners that the hospital would have to be in operation a far longer time than it has been, before bond buyers would consider purchasing revenue bonds.

Neither the Methodist church which operates the hospital at request of local officials, nor the Board of Trustees of Glenwood receive any money or compensation whatsoever from the operation of the hospital, or for their services. The Commissioners also serve without any compensation.

All excess funds collected by the hospital, and which are not needed in the operation of the hospital, will be used for retirement of the ad valorem bonds which would be sold if the bond issue is approved April 21.

This means that the tax burden on ward five citizens would be reduced by this process.

TAX TO EXPIRE

The proposed one - half mill tax will expire five years after the present 2½ mill tax — 30 years from now.

The 2½ mill tax was set up to yield $1.2 million in 30 years. Since property valuation in the Hospital Service District is increasing monthly as new homes and business are constructed, the one - half mill tax will yield more taxes, proportionately, than the 2½ mill tax.

Only ward five property owners can participate in issuing ad valorem bonds for Glenwood Hospital, since Hospital Service District Number One has boundaries comparable to Ward Five. For this reason, the other wards west of the Ouachita River cannot vote on these bonds.

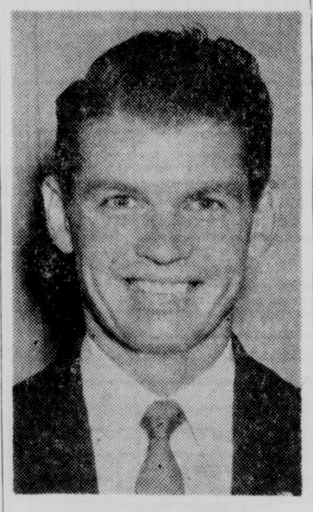

Starting last August, the demand for space by patients began to exceed the number of available beds. On occasions, it was necessary to turn patients away.

But the hospital can be doubled in size without increasing the millage which has been levied for the past five years, if the bond issue passes.

Monroe Group To Attend State Industry Meet

The 11th annual Louisiana Industrial Development Conference will be held in Lake Charles Thursday with G. C. Rawls, president of Louisiana Power and Light Company, to be the featured speaker.

The conference, which annually attracts about 300 businessmen and civic and political leaders throughout the state, will be held at the Lake Charles Country Club. A delegation from the Industrial committee of the Monroe Chamber of Commerce is slated to attend the conference, according to W. E. Whetstone, Chamber Industrial chairman.

Theme of this year's meeting is "Building for the Future," and all levels of industrial development and methods of attracting new industry to the state will be discussed according to Henry Davis, executive director of the Department of Commerce and Industry.

Davis said the aim of the conference is "to create a public awareness of the importance of economic growth and development and to help local groups to establish sound industrial programs." The meeting is being co-sponsored by the State Department of Commerce and Industry and the Louisiana State University College of Business Administration. The Lake Charles Association of Commerce is also co-operating in the meeting.

CHINESE MISSION

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP)—A three-man Nationalist Chinese good will mission headed by Communications Minister Shen Yi arrived in the oil sheikdom of Kuwait Friday.

Hanna To Head Annual YMCA Member Drive

Sam Hanna of the News-Star—World has been named chairman of the YMCA membership drive from April 6-22, according to Durwood Cann, chairman of the YMCA membership committee.

The drive will begin Monday, April 6th, and run until the YMCA's annual banquet, April 22.

Cann said, "The YMCA is a member of the United Givers Fund, but the memberships are needed to carry on the complete program of community service in local schools as well as to furnish the complete building facilities located at 1807 Glenmar Street."

About 150 volunteer workers will serve in the drive under the following captains:

Earl Lingle, Leo Wall, Wayne Woods, Harry Addison, Bob Powell, Bailey Grant, Elvis Stout, Welzie Garrett, Ira Phillips, George Moses, Ford Pipes Jr., Tom Mulhearn Jr., Jimmy Terry, James Rivers, D. C. Bernhardt, Jack Files, Jennings Wilkins, Mike John Jr., Mel Cook, Robert C. Downing, John Cardaro, John O. Clay and Dr. Doyle Hamilton.

Cann said the Toastmasters Club has formed a speakers bureau, explaining that any person or club needing information could obtain the services of a speaker by contacting the YMCA office.

Italian Premier Slates U.S. Visit

ROME (UPI)—Premier Aldo Moro pays a two-day visit to the United States next July, one of a series of visits by Italian officials designed to give this nation a bigger voice in Western affairs.

The joint announcement from Rome and Johnson City, Tex., Saturday said only that the official trip will take place July 7 and 8 and is at the invitation of President Johnson.

But in the past, and particularly this year, Moro and other Italian leaders have been carrying on "international diplomacy" designed to take the country out of the backwash of the Western big three.

WEST MONROE ELECTION

Voters To Decide On Expansion Of Hospital April 21

(Editor's Note: This is the first of three articles dealing with the proposed expansion program of the Glenwood Hospital in West Monroe. Property owners in Ward Five will ballot on the project in a special election April 21).

By MARY ANNE CORPIN
Staff Writer

April 21 is the day of decision for Glenwood Hospital. On that date, property owners throughout Ward five will vote on whether to double the size of the hospital via a bond issue.

Almost half of the proposed $1.7 million cost of the expansion program, or $830,000, will be provided by federal Hill-Burton funds — a grant without need for repayment.

The balance of the cost, $870,000, is sought through a bond issue, to be repaid over a 30-year period.

PLAN ENDORSED

Numerous civic, church and P-TA groups have endorsed the expansion program and proposed bond issue. The West Monroe Chamber of Commerce, Optimist Club, Kiwanis, Lions, Civitans, Junior Chamber of Commerce, Rotary, Central Trades and Labor Council, many churches, civic leaders, business groups, Parent - Teacher Associations, workers and garden clubs are on record in favor of the expansion.

Cost to the local property owner will be small. The expansion will require a one - half mill tax per thousand dollars of assessment.

This will result in a cost of 50 cents tax per year, for every $1,000 that property is assessed.

"This means that if you have a home that is assessed at $3,000, you will pay only $1.50 per year in taxes for the expansion," explains Tex Kilpatrick, chairman of the Glenwood Expansion Program and president of the West Monroe Chamber of Commerce.

At the present time, there is a two and one - half mill tax which was levied in 1959 for construction of the hospital. A half-mill maintenance tax expired on January 1. The proposal to be voted on April 21 would in effect only return the one - half mill to the rolls.

Passage of the expansion bond issue will mean a yearly property tax the same as has been in effect for the past five years, when the maintenance tax was levied.

EXAMPLE CITED

For example, the home assessed at $3,000 will pay a total tax of $9 per year. Should the bond issue fail to pass, the cost to such a property owner would be only $1.50 less per year. . .and the loss to the community would be great.

"The home of the average taxpayer is assessed at less than $3,000," Kilpatrick noted, "so you can see that this marvelous expansion will cost each of us only a very small amount of money.

"Only a half - mill tax is extraordinary, when you consider that the size of all facilities will be doubled, two extra stories will be added to the present building and a three-floor wing will be constructed."

Need for the hospital expansion is apparent.

Since the hospital opened on September 18, 1962, and tabulating figures through February 29, 1964, a total of 8,639 patients have been admitted to Glenwood hospital.

During this year and a half of operation, Administrator Ewell Singleton points out, "We averaged 85 per cent occupancy per month.

"The minimum number of patients that we have had on any one day was nine — on opening day. The maximum number was 119 in February of this year.

JUDGE COMMENTS

Judge Jesse S. Heard, chairman of the Board of Commissioners of Hospital Service District Number One, advises the Morning World: "We have been advised by qualified financial experts that a tax greater than the one paid in 1963 is not necessary to expand the hospital to the contemplated 50,500 square feet.

"If the same taxes paid in 1963 are paid to retire the bonds for a period of 30 years, they will be sufficient to approximately double the hospital in size.

"In other words, the hospital can be doubled in size without a payment of taxes per year greater than the taxes paid in 1963."

Presently, the hospital has four floors, and a 100 bed capacity, plus 22 bassinettes.

The expansion cannot be financed from revenues of the hospital. Bond experts have advised the Board of Commissioners that the hospital would have to be in operation a far longer time than it has been, before bond buyers would consider purchasing revenue bonds.

Neither the Methodist church which operates the hospital at request of local officials, nor the Board of Trustees of Glenwood receive any money or compensation whatsoever from the operation of the hospital, or for their services. The Commissioners also serve without any compensation.

All excess funds collected by the hospital, and which are not needed in the operation of the hospital, will be used for retirement of the ad valorem bonds which would be sold if the bond issue is approved April 21.

This means that the tax burden on ward five citizens would be reduced by this process.

TAX TO EXPIRE

The proposed one - half mill tax will expire five years after the present 2½ mill tax — 30 years from now.

The 2½ mill tax was set up to yield $1.2 million in 30 years. Since property valuation in the Hospital Service District is increasing monthly as new homes and business are constructed, the one - half mill tax will yield more taxes, proportionately, than the 2½ mill tax.

Only ward five property owners can participate in issuing ad valorem bonds for Glenwood Hospital, since Hospital Service District Number One has boundaries comparable to Ward Five. For this reason, the other wards west of the Ouachita River cannot vote on these bonds.

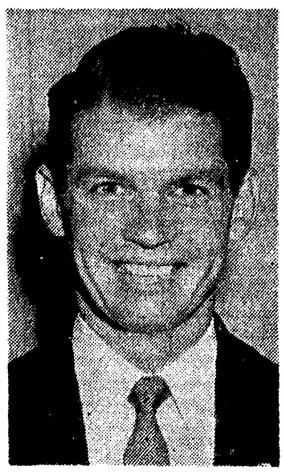

Starting last August, the demand for space by patients began to exceed the number of available beds. On occasions, it was necessary to turn patients away.

But the hospital can be doubled in size without increasing the millage which has been levied for the past five years, if the bond issue passes.

Italian Premier Slates U.S. Visit

ROME (UPI)—Premier Aldo Moro pays a two-day visit to the United States next July, one of a series of visits by Italian officials designed to give this nation a bigger voice in Western affairs.

The joint announcement from Rome and Johnson City, Tex., Saturday said only that the official trip will take place July 7 and 8 and is at the invitation of President Johnson.

But in the past, and particularly this year, Moro and other Italian leaders have been carrying on "international diplomacy" designed to take the country out of the backwash of the Western big three.

Smith County Wildcat Well Tests Are Run

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Production tests are underway at Triad Oil and Gas Company's Smith County wildcat, the Shelby No. 1, sec. 31-10n-16w, with operators perforating casing at 13,957-75 feet.

The venture was drilled to 14,280 feet with bottom formation being salt. Very little information was released by the operators.

It is reported tests will be run on several sands below 12,600 feet to evaluate commercial worth of the shows logged. The potential producer is two miles northeast of Mount Olive and and about four miles south of the Magee Field.

Austral Oil Co. is reported to have run drill stem tests at its Federal Lease No. 2, Sec. 14-4n-9e, in the recently found Bienville Forest Field of Smith County. Seven inch casing was set to 14,097 feet with electrical log run at 14,167 feet. The venture is an east offset to the discovery well that produces from the Smackover Lime Formation at 14,143 feet.

In Scott County, about six miles northwest of the Bienville Forest Area, Austral is drilling below 12,300 feet in its wildcat the Eichelberger No. 1, sec. 19-5n-9e, with the venture set to be drilled to 14,400 feet to test the Smackover Lime.

Also in Scott County, Pan American Petroleum Corp. has staked location for its wildcat, the U.S.A. No. 1, sec. 18-5n-8e, 12 miles northwest of the Bienville Forest Field. The venture is also scheduled as a Smackover Lime try with contract depth 15,000 feet.

In Jasper County Larue-Smith Production Co. has reopened an abandoned wildcat that was drilled to 13,473 feet and is deepening to 14,500 feet to test the Smackover Lime. The venture is the Gilmore No. 1, sec. 9-2n-13e, and was drilled by Kern and Monterey Oil Co. and abandoned in 1959. The well is four miles east of Paulding.

In the Quitman Bayou Field of Adams County, D. A. Biglane is testing his second well, the Board of Supervisors No. 2, sec. 1-8n-3w, after logging 45 feet of oil sand in the Wilcox Zone at 3,927-76 feet. Same operator just completed his Board of Supervisors No. 1, sec. 1-8n-3w, that set a record for thick sand in the Wilcox Zone with 60 feet of oil sand logged. The two other completions in the recently found field have logged 39 feet and 48 feet of oil sand.

Germany and Gulmon are running production tests at their Cotton Valley No. 1, sec. 18-8n-3w, one half mile northwest of the Biglane well after logging the 3,900 foot oil sand and a deeper Wilcox oil sand at 5,444 feet.

In the Bolton Field of Hinds County, American Exploration and X. M. Frascogna completed the Bolton Town Lots No. 3, sec. 24-6n-3w, pumping 260 barrels of oil per day from a sand at 10,693 feet.

Cotton Futures Close Irregular

At the close of trading Thursday (the Exchange was closed Good Friday), active futures contracts were up 50 cents to off 35 cents a bale for the week. The Previous week the market had been up 10 cents to $3.60.

Although the consensus was that the new farm bill would become law early in April, cotton traders continued to move cautiously.

Commission houses participated on both sides of the market during the week but volume represented by their transactions was limited.

Exports for the week ended Monday were estimated by the New York Cotton Exchange at 157,000 bales, compared with 145,000 a week earlier and 109,000 a year earlier. For the current season through March 23 exports had reached 3,793,000 bales against 2,263,000 at the same time last year.

Stock Mart Ends Week Of Gains, Losses

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market trading week last week was about evenly divided between advances and declines.

The list continued a "correction" from recent record highs on the first two days then displayed buoyancy in the concluding two sessions. The market and other financial institutions were closed for Good Friday.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged for the week at 301.7.

Even while the market was falling, strength was shown in airlines, steels and motors. Later in the week coppers, savings-and-loan holding companies, chemicals, electrical equipments and assorted issues did well. O 1,503 issues traded this week, 692 rose and 631 fell.

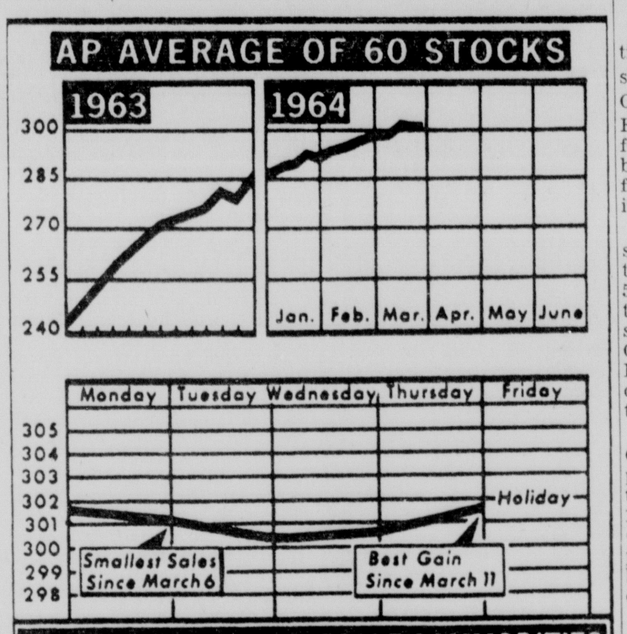

With the first quarter virtually finished, Wall Street analysts were looking ahead to publication of some dramatic increases in profits for many leading companies. Further good news and bullish statements from corporate officials are expected when the annual meeting season starts in a month. Brokers believe that news of this kind will attract more of the public back to the market.

Volume for the short week was 21,395,264 shares compared with 27,275,00 for the previous five trading days.

Steel production was reported at the highest level since late June. Construction contracts were well above the year-earlier rate. Machine tool orders, though down from the high rate of January, were substantially higher than a year ago.

U.S. Treasury bond prices, weakening since mid-February, neared the end of March still in a pronounced downhill slide.

Bond sales were $43,012,000 par value compared with $45,206,000 the previous week.

THE ASSOCIATED Press average of 60 stocks held unchanged this week at 301.7. Led by livestock the commodity index declined this week to 161.1 from 161.3 of last week. (AP Wirephoto)

Service Award Dinners Planned By United Gas

SHREVEPORT (Special) — Some 2,000 persons from throughout the Gulf South will gather here for the United Gas service award dinners on April 6 and April 9, according to Ed Parkes, president.

More than 1,100 active and retired employees with 25 or more years of service with United Gas Corp. and its wholly-owned subsidiaries, United Gas Pipe Line Co. and Union Producing Co., will be honored. Wives and others also will be in attendance.

United's general office automobile storage-garage buildings just off St. Vincent Ave. will be transformed into a giant banquet hall to accommodate the large number of long-time employees. As in the past several years, the size of the group being honored has necessitated the scheduling of dinners on two dates.

N. C. McGowen, chairman of the board of United Gas Corp. and a 50-year employee himself, will be principal speaker at both dinners. Parkes, who has 36 years with the company, will preside.

United Gas has more than 5,500 employees throughout the Gulf South, an area stretching from Laredo, Tex., to Pensacola, Fla., and including parts of Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, southern Alabama and northwestern Florida.

The first event will be held on Monday, April 6. It will be attended by those who this year reached the 25-year mark, all employees with 31 or more years of service, and all retired employees who had 31 or more years of service at the time of retirement.

On Thursday, April 9, the group will be made up of men and women scheduled to receive awards for 30, 35, 40 and 50 years of service, plus all active employees with 26 through 30 years of service, and retired employees with 25 through 30 years of service at the time of retirement.

Fifty employees who celebrated their 25th anniversary between July 2, 1963 and July 1, 1964, will be presented watched bearing service insignia. Lapel insignia will be presented to 93 employees marking their 30th anniversary, 57 celebrating their 35th year of service, seven who reached 40 years and one active employee who attained the 50-year mark since last July.

TSHOMBE'S VISA

LONDON (AP)—Home Secretary Henry Brooke told Parliament this week a visa has been granted to Moise Tshombe, ousted secessionist premier of the old Katanga province in the Congo, for a short visit to lecture at the Royal Institute of National Affairs. Tshombe has been in Spain.

OIL AT NEW LOW

Crude Reserves Down; Gas Rises

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Proved crude oil reserves in the United States have dropped to their lowest level since 1958.

Estimated crude reserves declined by more than 419 million barrels, the sharpest annual decline on record. Gas reserves increased only 3.9 trillion cubic feet compared to a 6 trillion gain in 1962.

The proved reserves estimates released this week by the American Petroleum Institute and the American Gas Association are in line with recent trends within the drilling segment of the industry.

The industry drilled only 43,550 wells last year, the lowest total since 1950. Included were only 8,550 exploratory or wildcat test wells. The peak year for drilling operations was 1956 when the 58,259 completions included 13,034 exploratory wells.

It was the third decline in four years for crude reserves with only six of the 23 producing states recording increases. Natural gas reserves increased in 14 of the 24 gas producing states.

Crude reserves as of Dec. 31 were estimated at 30.9 billion barrels, compared to 31.3 billion a year earlier and a record 31.7 billion at the end of 1961.

The decline in crude reserves was so general that changes in the rankings of the 23 producing states affected only Ohio and Nebraska. Ohio, with a new oil boom, took over seventeenth place by increasing its reserves from 77 million to 87 million. Nebraska dropped to eighteenth place as its reserves fell from 93 million to 83 million.

Oklahoma edged ahead of Kansas for third place by boosting its gas reserves from 18.2 trillion to 19.1 trillion cubic feet. Kansas meanwhile declined from 18.5 trillion to 17.9 trillion.

West Virginia took over ninth place from Colorado and a rather sharp decline dropped Utah from 11th to 13th place behind Arkansas and Alaska. North Dakota moved into the trillion cubic foot category for the first time to take over 15th place from Kentucky.

Louisiana was the only member among the top 11 oil states to boost its reserves in 1963 but her gain of only 1.9 million barrels was dwarfed by the 155-million barrel gain she recorded in 1962.

APPOINTMENTS

Olin Mathieson Chemical Corporation has announced the appointment of Henry H. Hunter as staff vice president for marketing services, and of John O. O'Neill Jr., as staff vice president for business planning. Both are new positions.

Hunter was formerly director of marketing services, in charge of advertising, public relations and market research. Market planning and commercial relations have been added to these responsibilities in his new post.

O'Neill was formerly assistant to the president. In his new capacity he will serve as chairman of Olin's planning staff committee.

Air Force Adopts Olin Development

A small package of concentrated power — a jet engine starter cartridge developed by Olin expressly for the U.S. air Force — has proved so successful in F-105 fighters and B-52 bombers that it is being adopted for other types of advanced military aircraft.

Two contracts for MXU-4-A solid propellant jet starter cartridges, totaling more than $6,500,000, have been awarded by the U.S. air Force to the associated products operations of Olin Mathieson Chemical Corp., Donald G. Milligan, vice president and manager of the operations, announced.

The Air Force is adopting Olin's concept of "packaged power" for such jet aircraft as the F-100, F-4C, C-135B and KC-135, Milligan said. The F-111 (TFX), a fighter plane, is expected to leave the drawing board also designed with the cartridge-starting concept.

The MXU-4-A solid propellant cartridge initially was developed by Olin for the F-105 Thunderchief, a supersonic fighter-bomber bult by Republic Aviation Corp. The jet starter cartridge weighs 11-½ pounds and is about the size and shape of a top hat minus the brim. It performs successfully in temperatures that range from 65 degrees below zero Fahrenheit to 160 degrees above.

Milligan said that the company is now engaged in development of gas generators to provide energy for auxiliary power units on many other strategic and tactical defense weapons, such as the Polaris, Minuteman and Lance missiles. Further, as a result of several government contracts, Olin's solid propellant gas generators are being tested for use as auxiliary power sources in space vehicles and reentry bodies.

PERFORMANCE

The reliability ratio of the MXU-4-A — 9,996 starts out of 10,000 — was established by more than a quarter-million cartridge starts. Significantly, many of these starts were made at extreme temperatures—from 65 degrees below zero Fahrenheit to 160 above.

The MXU-4-A starter cartridge operates at a pressure of 1,000 pounds per square inch. It is a self-contained unit housed in a rubber obturating case which, when the cartridge is actuated, instantaneously expands and seals the breech chamber.

The components of the MXU-4-A starter cartridge include a special solid propellant grain, an electrically fired ignition assembly (both exclusive Olin developments) and associated hardware.

OPERATION

A 12-volt storage battery can be used to actuate the ignition assembly of the MXU-4-A cartridge, which rests in the starter breech of the jet. Olin's solid propellant grain, an ammonium nitrate and rubber compound, is ignited instantaneously. The combustion gases flow at a high velocity through multiple nozzles and impinge on a small turbine wheel causing the wheel to rotate.

The gases accelerate the jet engine through a gear box to the necessary speed — approximately 2,800 revolutions a minute — effecting and sustaining rotation until start-up. (The engine's own power is dependent on speed, needed to pump the jet fuel and mix it properly with air to achieve the correct combustion.)

The staff at Olin's facilities in Marion, Ill., are pioneers in the development of solid propellants. Their technique and continuing research are geared to meet the critical requirements of the aircraft, missile and space industries, Milligan said.

Olin's associated products operations also manufacture, at various other plants, smokeless Ball Powder for NATO ammunition, gas generators for missile auxiliary power systems, and industrial safety flares.

Broad Trading Fails To Raise Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Price changes were rather broad at times in the grain futures market last week, but most contracts finished with only moderate gains or losses on the Board of Trade.

The single exception was May wheat, which mustered three successive advances and finished with a net gain of 4¾ cents a bushel, up 9 cents from its low point, which was posted in a rather heavy period of pressure on Monday.

The feed grains were slightly easier than a week ago. Rye and soybeans closed mixed with speculators showing a little more preference for the long side of most commodities at the end of the week.

At the end of the week, wheat was ⅛-4¾ cents a bushel higher, May $2.01-01¼; soybeans 2½ lower to ⅝ higher, May $2.61¾-7⅛; corn ⅜ to 2 cents lower, May $1.21¼-⅜; oats 1⅛-1⅞ lower, May 63⅝-¾ cents; rye ¾ lower to ¾ higher, May $1.30¾.

Business Quarter Is Big Success

By JACK LEFLER
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—The economy is winding up the first quarter of 1964 on a higher note than it began the year.

The consensus seems to be that it is headed still higher.

Construction contracts continue to soar.

The stock market has spurted to historic peaks.

The year started out with predictions that business would be good at least during the first six months. Now the indications are that the climb has farther to go.

Another government move to bolster the economy—an increase in depreciation allowances—began to show its effects in the first quarter. Corporations boosted their outlays for new plant and equipment. General Motors Corp. will spend $2 billion on expansion in 1964 and 1965.

Steel production during the week reached the highest level since last June with mills turning out 2,362,000 tons of ingots, up 2 per cent from the previous week.

Shipments for the first quarter were estimated at 20 million tons, an increase of 10 per cent over the like period last year.

The two-millionth passenger car of 1964 rolled off assembly lines during the week. Producers were talking about the likelihood of a record eight-million-car year. Last year sales totaled 7.7 million.

Construction contracts in February totaled $3,201,304,000, up 10 per cent from $2,917,263,000 in February 1963. The increase was paced by a 17 per cent rise on contracts for new residential buildings.

In the past year, he said, these records have been set: 70 million jobs; national production over $600 billion; more than 1.6 million new homes; new construction over $60 billion.

"And by all these measures," he said, "our prosperity continues to grow. In new construction, we should exceed $65 billion this year. The growth rate of our economy should be better than 6 per cent—about double the rate of the last decade. Our economy was never stronger, never better."

However, Johnson said this is not good enough "because the prosperity of which I speak is not being shared by all Americans."

Alaska Given Assurance Of Help By U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Assurances of help from federal and private sources flowed Saturday to the victims of Alaska's tragic earthquake. And the nation was told the disaster left its nuclear defenses unimpaired.

Speaking from his ranch in Texas, President Johnson pledged the full resources of the government to aid the stricken people of the nation's largest state.

The Red Cross acted for its millions of private supporters when it moved swiftly to pour men, medicines and other supplies into the devastated areas.

A Red Cross spokesman said that, as usual, the Red Cross will try to handle through its regular offices queries from those trying to determine what happened to relatives or friends in the disaster area.

However, he said that because of the almost complete disruption of commercial communications with hardest-hit cities, the gathering of such data is very slow. Those making inquiries should be prepared for delaye of perhaps several days in obtaining information, he said.

The Defense Department announced within hours that the radar warning systems which stretch across parts of Alaska and Canada continued to function normally in their ceaseless scanning of the skies for any plane or missile intruders from the Soviet Union across the polar cap.

And the Pentagon said also that within Alaska the key air bases at Anchorage and Fairbanks remained basically operational despite damage to auxiliary facilities at Elmendorf Air Force Base.

There were no reports of deaths among the 76,400 military personnel and dependents stationed in Alaska. The Coast Guard counted one man lost in a seismic wave southeast of Cordova.

Judge Denies Ban Order In Library Suit

BATON ROUGE (AP) —U. S. Dist. Judge E. Gordon West Friday denied a motion for a temporary restraining order in a suit attacking segregation in the public library at Clinton.

The suit was filed a day earlier for Henry Brown and several other Negroes who were arrested for disturbing the peace at the library March 7.

The petition asked the restraining order to prevent prosecution of the Negroes under state or city laws.

The suit also sought to prohibit library and state officials from causing the arrest of Negroes in peaceful use of the library.

No date has been set for hearing the suit on its merits for a preliminary and final injunction.

In other court action, the Justice Department presented Judge West with suits against the registrars of voters in both East and West Feliciana Parishes.

Judge West did not sign the temporary restraining orders the government sought against Fletcher Harvey of West Feliciana and Henry Earl Palker of East Feliciana.

The suit against Harvey seeks to force the West Feliciana registrar to open the rolls, which have been closed since Nov. 6—30 days prior to the first gubernatorial primary.

Affadavits from Negroes attached to the suit contend they have tried to register but Harvey tells them he has a suit pending against him in court, and therefore the registration rolls are closed.

Prior to the registration of 13 Negroes between last Oct. 17 and Nov. 6, no Negroes had been on the registration rolls of the parish since at least 1904, the suit says.

The suit against Palmer seeks to force the qualifying of Negroes who had been purged from registration rolls of that parish.

It also seeks to enjoin the registrar from disqualifying Negro applicants to register.

Hearings on the merits of the two suits have not yet been set.

Police Break Up Demonstrations In Pennsylvania

CHESTER, Pa. (AP) — Civil rights demonstrators who resisted police trying to break up a sitdown in the heart of the city's business district were hauled off to jail Saturday. At least six were injured and treated at hospitals.

The demonstrations — there were three Saturday—apparently were part of a series promised throughout the Easter weekend by the Chester Committee for Freedom Now. They protest alleged de facto segregation in Chester schools.

About 65 were arrested and charged with disorderly conduct, failure to obey police and unlawful assembly. Police, swinging riot sticks where resistance was met, dragged women and small children into buses and took them to police stations.

Mayor James Gorbey, who was on the scene, said later that his city had reached a crossroads, that the demonstrations have given it a choice of living by law and order or "degenerating into another Jacksonville . . . as each man becomes a law unto himself."

The first of Saturday's three demonstrations was at the busiest intersection of downtown Chester at 12:30 p. m., during the height of the late Easter shopping crush. The demonstrators sat in the middle of a three-way intersection singing and chanting.

As police waded in to break up this sitdown, two others started in other downtown areas. Those arrested came from all three scenes.

One of those arrested and, with the demonstrators, hauled off to jail in a bus was Bert Hodge, a photographer for the Delaware Valley Daily Times. Hodge said he was knocked down by a policeman while trying to take pictures of the sitdown.

"I was taken to the station house and placed in a detention area," Hodge said. "They detained me for about an hour, and then refused to book me. They gave me back my camera and told me to go."

Stanley Banch, leader of the Committee for Freedom Now, said the demonstrations would continue.

Smith County Wildcat Well Tests Are Run

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Production tests are underway at Triad Oil and Gas Company's Smith County wildcat, the Shelby No. 1, sec. 31-10n-16w, with operators perforating casing at 13,957-75 feet.

The venture was drilled to 14,280 feet with bottom formation being salt. Very little information was released by the operators.

It is reported tests will be run on several sands below 12,600 feet to evaluate commercial worth of the shows logged. The potential producer is two miles northeast of Mount Olive and and about four miles south of the Magee Field.

Austral Oil Co. is reported to have run drill stem tests at its Federal Lease No. 2, Sec. 14-4n-9e, in the recently found Bienville Forest Field of Smith County. Seven inch casing was set to 14,097 feet with electrical log run at 14,167 feet. The venture is an east offset to the discovery well that produces from the Smackover Lime Formation at 14,143 feet.

In Scott County, about six miles northwest of the Bienville Forest Area, Austral is drilling below 12,300 feet in its wildcat the Eichelberger No. 1, sec. 19-5n-9e, with the venture set to be drilled to 14,400 feet to test the Smackover Lime.

Also in Scott County, Pan American Petroleum Corp. has staked location for its wildcat, the U.S.A. No. 1, sec. 18-5n-8e, 12 miles northwest of the Bienville Forest Field. The venture is also scheduled as a Smackover Lime try with contract depth 15,000 feet.

In Jasper County Larue-Smith Production Co. has reopened an abandoned wildcat that was drilled to 13,473 feet and is deepening to 14,500 feet to test the Smackover Lime. The venture is the Gilmore No. 1, sec. 9-2n-13e, and was drilled by Kern and Monterey Oil Co. and abandoned in 1959. The well is four miles east of Paulding.

In the Quitman Bayou Field of Adams County, D. A. Biglane is testing his second well, the Board of Supervisors No. 2, sec. 1-8n-3w, after logging 45 feet of oil sand in the Wilcox Zone at 3,927-76 feet. Same operator just completed his Board of Supervisors No. 1, sec. 1-8n-3w, that set a record for thick sand in the Wilcox Zone with 60 feet of oil sand logged. The two other completions in the recently found field have logged 39 feet and 48 feet of oil sand.

Germany and Gulmon are running production tests at their Cotton Valley No. 1, sec. 18-8n-3w, one half mile northwest of the Biglane well after logging the 3,900 foot oil sand and a deeper Wilcox oil sand at 5,444 feet.

In the Bolton Field of Hinds County, American Exploration and X. M. Frascogna completed the Bolton Town Lots No. 3, sec. 24-6n-3w, pumping 260 barrels of oil per day from a sand at 10,693 feet.

Cotton Futures Close Irregular

At the close of trading Thursday (the Exchange was closed Good Friday), active futures contracts were up 50 cents to off 35 cents a bale for the week. The Previous week the market had been up 10 cents to $3.60.

Although the consensus was that the new farm bill would become law early in April, cotton traders continued to move cautiously.

Commission houses participated on both sides of the market during the week but volume represented by their transactions was limited.

Exports for the week ended Monday were estimated by the New York Cotton Exchange at 157,000 bales, compared with 145,000 a week earlier and 109,000 a year earlier. For the current season through March 23 exports had reached 3,793,000 bales against 2,263,000 at the same time last year.

Stock Mart Ends Week Of Gains, Losses

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market trading week last week was about evenly divided between advances and declines.

The list continued a "correction" from recent record highs on the first two days then displayed buoyancy in the concluding two sessions. The market and other financial institutions were closed for Good Friday.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged for the week at 301.7.

Even while the market was falling, strength was shown in airlines, steels and motors. Later in the week coppers, savings-and-loan holding companies, chemicals, electrical equipments and assorted issues did well. O 1,503 issues traded this week, 692 rose and 631 fell.

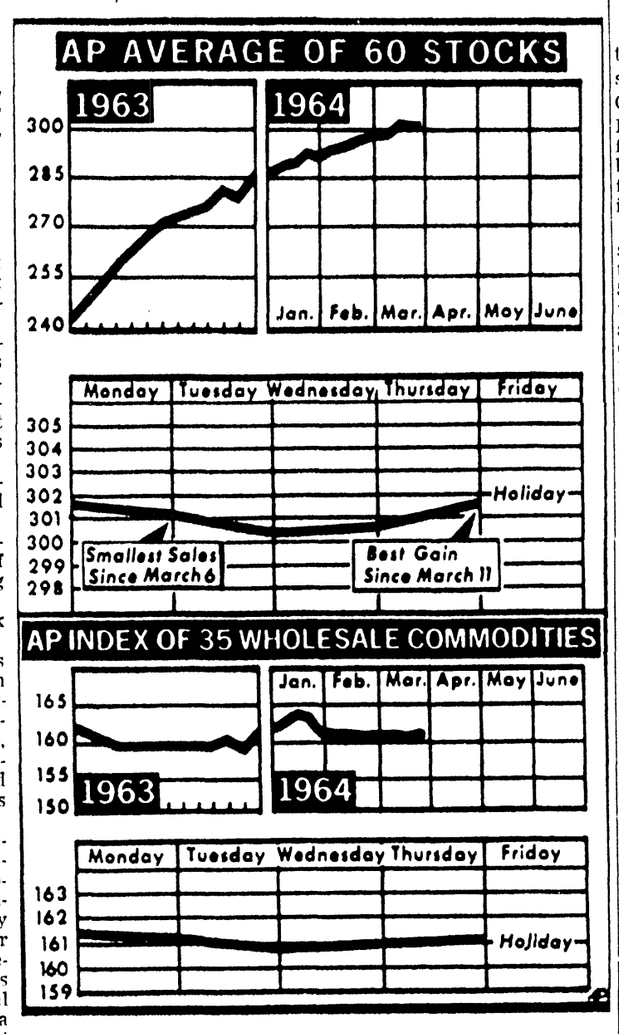

With the first quarter virtually finished, Wall Street analysts were looking ahead to publication of some dramatic increases in profits for many leading companies. Further good news and bullish statements from corporate officials are expected when the annual meeting season starts in a month. Brokers believe that news of this kind will attract more of the public back to the market.

Volume for the short week was 21,395,264 shares compared with 27,275,00 for the previous five trading days.

Steel production was reported at the highest level since late June. Construction contracts were well above the year-earlier rate. Machine tool orders, though down from the high rate of January, were substantially higher than a year ago.

U.S. Treasury bond prices, weakening since mid-February, neared the end of March still in a pronounced downhill slide.

Bond sales were $43,012,000 par value compared with $45,206,000 the previous week.

THE ASSOCIATED Press average of 60 stocks held unchanged this week at 301.7. Led by livestock the commodity index declined this week to 161.1 from 161.3 of last week. (AP Wirephoto)

Service Award Dinners Planned By United Gas

SHREVEPORT (Special) — Some 2,000 persons from throughout the Gulf South will gather here for the United Gas service award dinners on April 6 and April 9, according to Ed Parkes, president.

More than 1,100 active and retired employees with 25 or more years of service with United Gas Corp. and its wholly-owned subsidiaries, United Gas Pipe Line Co. and Union Producing Co., will be honored. Wives and others also will be in attendance.

United's general office automobile storage-garage buildings just off St. Vincent Ave. will be transformed into a giant banquet hall to accommodate the large number of long-time employees. As in the past several years, the size of the group being honored has necessitated the scheduling of dinners on two dates.

N. C. McGowen, chairman of the board of United Gas Corp. and a 50-year employee himself, will be principal speaker at both dinners. Parkes, who has 36 years with the company, will preside.

United Gas has more than 5,500 employees throughout the Gulf South, an area stretching from Laredo, Tex., to Pensacola, Fla., and including parts of Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, southern Alabama and northwestern Florida.

The first event will be held on Monday, April 6. It will be attended by those who this year reached the 25-year mark, all employees with 31 or more years of service, and all retired employees who had 31 or more years of service at the time of retirement.

On Thursday, April 9, the group will be made up of men and women scheduled to receive awards for 30, 35, 40 and 50 years of service, plus all active employees with 26 through 30 years of service, and retired employees with 25 through 30 years of service at the time of retirement.

Fifty employees who celebrated their 25th anniversary between July 2, 1963 and July 1, 1964, will be presented watched bearing service insignia. Lapel insignia will be presented to 93 employees marking their 30th anniversary, 57 celebrating their 35th year of service, seven who reached 40 years and one active employee who attained the 50-year mark since last July.

TSHOMBE'S VISA

LONDON (AP)—Home Secretary Henry Brooke told Parliament this week a visa has been granted to Moise Tshombe, ousted secessionist premier of the old Katanga province in the Congo, for a short visit to lecture at the Royal Institute of National Affairs. Tshombe has been in Spain.

OIL AT NEW LOW

Crude Reserves Down; Gas Rises

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Proved crude oil reserves in the United States have dropped to their lowest level since 1958.

Natural gas reserves, however, rose to a record level in 1963 although the increase was not impressive.

Estimated crude reserves declined by more than 419 million barrels, the sharpest annual decline on record. Gas reserves increased only 3.9 trillion cubic feet compared to a 6 trillion gain in 1962.

The proved reserves estimates released this week by the American Petroleum Institute and the American Gas Association are in line with recent trends within the drilling segment of the industry.

The industry drilled only 43,550 wells last year, the lowest total since 1950. Included were only 8,550 exploratory or wildcat test wells. The peak year for drilling operations was 1956 when the 58,259 completions included 13,034 exploratory wells.

It was the third decline in four years for crude reserves with only six of the 23 producing states recording increases. Natural gas reserves increased in 14 of the 24 gas producing states.

Crude reserves as of Dec. 31 were estimated at 30.9 billion barrels, compared to 31.3 billion a year earlier and a record 31.7 billion at the end of 1961.

Natural gas reserves climbed to 276 trillion cubic feet compared to the year earlier record of 272 trillion.

The decline in crude reserves was so general that changes in the rankings of the 23 producing states affected only Ohio and Nebraska. Ohio, with a new oil boom, took over seventeenth place by increasing its reserves from 77 million to 87 million. Nebraska dropped to eighteenth place as its reserves fell from 93 million to 83 million.

Changes in gas rankings affected nine states.

Oklahoma edged ahead of Kansas for third place by boosting its gas reserves from 18.2 trillion to 19.1 trillion cubic feet. Kansas meanwhile declined from 18.5 trillion to 17.9 trillion.

West Virginia took over ninth place from Colorado and a rather sharp decline dropped Utah from 11th to 13th place behind Arkansas and Alaska. North Dakota moved into the trillion cubic foot category for the first time to take over 15th place from Kentucky.

Louisiana was the only member among the top 11 oil states to boost its reserves in 1963 but her gain of only 1.9 million barrels was dwarfed by the 155-million barrel gain she recorded in 1962.

Payments in the United States and Canada by Prudential averaged $7.6 million each business day during the year for a total of $1.87 billion.

APPOINTMENTS

Olin Mathieson Chemical Corporation has announced the appointment of Henry H. Hunter as staff vice president for marketing services, and of John O. O'Neill Jr., as staff vice president for business planning. Both are new positions.

Hunter was formerly director of marketing services, in charge of advertising, public relations and market research. Market planning and commercial relations have been added to these responsibilities in his new post.

O'Neill was formerly assistant to the president. In his new capacity he will serve as chairman of Olin's planning staff committee.

Air Force Adopts Olin Development

A small package of concentrated power — a jet engine starter cartridge developed by Olin expressly for the U.S. air Force — has proved so successful in F-105 fighters and B-52 bombers that it is being adopted for other types of advanced military aircraft.

Two contracts for MXU-4-A solid propellant jet starter cartridges, totaling more than $6,500,000, have been awarded by the U.S. air Force to the associated products operations of Olin Mathieson Chemical Corp., Donald G. Milligan, vice president and manager of the operations, announced.

The Air Force is adopting Olin's concept of "packaged power" for such jet aircraft as the F-100, F-4C, C-135B and KC-135, Milligan said. The F-111 (TFX), a fighter plane, is expected to leave the drawing board also designed with the cartridge-starting concept.

The MXU-4-A solid propellant cartridge initially was developed by Olin for the F-105 Thunderchief, a supersonic fighter-bomber built by Republic Aviation Corp. The jet starter cartridge weighs 11-½ pounds and is about the size and shape of a top hat minus the brim. It performs successfully in temperatures that range from 65 degrees below zero Fahrenheit to 160 degrees above.

Milligan said that the company is now engaged in development of gas generators to provide energy for auxiliary power units on many other strategic and tactical defense weapons, such as the Polaris, Minuteman and Lance missiles. Further, as a result of several government contracts, Olin's solid propellant gas generators are being tested for use as auxiliary power sources in space vehicles and reentry bodies.

PERFORMANCE

The reliability ratio of the MXU-4-A — 9,996 starts out of 10,000 — was established by more than a quarter-million cartridge starts. Significantly, many of these starts were made at extreme temperatures—from 65 degrees below zero Fahrenheit to 160 above.

The MXU-4-A starter cartridge operates at a pressure of 1,000 pounds per square inch. It is a self-contained unit housed in a rubber obturating case which, when the cartridge is actuated, instantaneously expands and seals the breech chamber.

The components of the MXU-4-A starter cartridge include a special solid propellant grain, an electrically fired ignition assembly (both exclusive Olin developments) and associated hardware.

OPERATION

A 12-volt storage battery can be used to actuate the ignition assembly of the MXU-4-A cartridge, which rests in the starter breech of the jet. Olin's solid propellant grain, an ammonium nitrate and rubber compound, is ignited instantaneously. The combustion gases flow at a high velocity through multiple nozzles and impinge on a small turbine wheel causing the wheel to rotate.

The gases accelerate the jet engine through a gear box to the necessary speed — approximately 2,800 revolutions a minute — effecting and sustaining rotation until start-up. (The engine's own power is dependent on speed, needed to pump the jet fuel and mix it properly with air to achieve the correct combustion.)

The staff at Olin's facilities in Marion, Ill., are pioneers in the development of solid propellants. Their technique and continuing research are geared to meet the critical requirements of the aircraft, missile and space industries, Milligan said.

Olin's associated products operations also manufacture, at various other plants, smokeless Ball Powder for NATO ammunition, gas generators for missile auxiliary power systems, and industrial safety flares.

Broad Trading Fails To Raise Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Price changes were rather broad at times in the grain futures market last week, but most contracts finished with only moderate gains or losses on the Board of Trade.

The single exception was May wheat, which mustered three successive advances and finished with a net gain of 4¾ cents a bushel, up 9 cents from its low point, which was posted in a rather heavy period of pressure on Monday.

The feed grains were slightly easier than a week ago. Rye and soybeans closed mixed with speculators showing a little more preference for the long side of most commodities at the end of the week.

At the end of the week, wheat was ⅛-4¾ cents a bushel higher, May $2.01-01¼; soybeans 2½ lower to ⅝ higher, May $2.61¾-⅞; corn ⅜ to 2 cents lower, May $1.21¼-⅜; oats 1⅛-1⅞ lower, May 63⅝-¾ cents; rye ¾ lower to ¾ higher, May $1.30¾.

Business Quarter Is Big Success

By JACK LEFLER
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—The economy is winding up the first quarter of 1964 on a higher note than it began the year.

The consensus seems to be that it is headed still higher.

Steel production has climbed to a nine-month high.

Automobile production and sales are booming.

Construction contracts continue to soar.

The stock market has spurted to historic peaks.

President Johnson said during the week: "More Americans are more prosperous than at any time in history."

The year started out with predictions that business would be good at least during the first six months. Now the indications are that the climb has farther to go.

One of its first concrete benefits was its help in boosting Easter sales to a record, up an estimated 5 per cent over last year.

Another government move to bolster the economy—an increase in depreciation allowances—began to show its effects in the first quarter. Corporations boosted their outlays for new plant and equipment. General Motors Corp. will spend $2 billion on expansion in 1964 and 1965.

Steel production during the week reached the highest level since last June with mills turning out 2,362,000 tons of ingots, up 2 per cent from the previous week.

Shipments for the first quarter were estimated at 20 million tons, an increase of 10 per cent over the like period last year.

The two-millionth passenger car of 1964 rolled off assembly lines during the week. Producers were talking about the likelihood of a record eight-million-car year. Last year sales totaled 7.7 million.

Production during the week was estimated at 166,900 cars, up from 164,807 the previous week and 159,504 a year ago.

Sales for the March 1-20 period totaled 414,529 cars, a substantial gain over the 387,426 for the like period a year earlier.

Construction contracts in February totaled $3,201,304,000, up 10 per cent from $2,917,263,000 in February 1963. The increase was paced by a 17 per cent rise on contracts for new residential buildings.

President Johnson made his assessment of the economy in an address to the national legislative conference of the AFL-CIO building and construction trades.

In the past year, he said, these records have been set: 70 million jobs; national production over $600 billion; more than 1.6 million new homes; new construction over $60 billion.

"And by all these measures," he said, "our prosperity continues to grow. In new construction, we should exceed $65 billion this year. The growth rate of our economy should be better than 6 per cent—about double the rate of the last decade. Our economy was never stronger, never better."

However, Johnson said this is not good enough "because the prosperity of which I speak is not being shared by all Americans."

Alaska Given Assurance Of Help By U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Assurances of help from federal and private sources flowed Saturday to the victims of Alaska's tragic earthquake. And the nation was told the disaster left its nuclear defenses unimpaired.

Speaking from his ranch in Texas, President Johnson pledged the full resources of the government to aid the stricken people of the nation's largest state.

The Red Cross acted for its millions of private supporters when it moved swiftly to pour men, medicines and other supplies into the devastated areas.

A Red Cross spokesman said that, as usual, the Red Cross will try to handle through its regular offices queries from those trying to determine what happened to relatives or friends in the disaster area.

However, he said that because of the almost complete disruption of commercial communications with hardest-hit cities, the gathering of such data is very slow. Those making inquiries should be prepared for delays of perhaps several days in obtaining information, he said.

The Defense Department announced within hours that the radar warning systems which stretch across parts of Alaska and Canada continued to function normally in their ceaseless scanning of the skies for any plane or missile intruders from the Soviet Union across the polar cap.

And the Pentagon said also that within Alaska the key air bases at Anchorage and Fairbanks remained basically operational despite damage to auxiliary facilities at Elmendorf Air Force Base.

There were no reports of deaths among the 76,400 military personnel and dependents stationed in Alaska. The Coast Guard counted one man lost in a seismic wave southeast of Cordova.

Judge Denies Ban Order In Library Suit

BATON ROUGE (AP) —U. S. Dist. Judge E. Gordon West Friday denied a motion for a temporary restraining order in a suit attacking segregation in the public library at Clinton.

The suit was filed a day earlier for Henry Brown and several other Negroes who were arrested for disturbing the peace at the library March 7.

The petition asked the restraining order to prevent prosecution of the Negroes under state or city laws.

The suit also sought to prohibit library and state officials from causing the arrest of Negroes in peaceful use of the library.

No date has been set for hearing the suit on its merits for a preliminary and final injunction.

In other court action, the Justice Department presented Judge West with suits against the registrars of voters in both East and West Feliciana Parishes.

Judge West did not sign the temporary restraining orders the government sought against Fletcher Harvey of West Feliciana and Henry Earl Palker of East Feliciana.

The suit against Harvey seeks to force the West Feliciana registrar to open the rolls, which have been closed since Nov. 6—30 days prior to the first gubernatorial primary.

Affadavits from Negroes attached to the suit contend they have tried to register but Harvey tells them he has a suit pending against him in court, and therefore the registration rolls are closed.

Prior to the registration of 13 Negroes between last Oct. 17 and Nov. 6, no Negroes had been on the registration rolls of the parish since at least 1904, the suit says.

The suit against Palmer seeks to force the qualifying of Negroes who had been purged from registration rolls of that parish.

It also seeks to enjoin the registrar from disqualifying Negro applicants to register.

Hearings on the merits of the two suits have not yet been set.

REST CURE LEAVE

Police Break Up Demonstrations In Pennsylvania

CHESTER, Pa. (AP) — Civil rights demonstrators who resisted police trying to break up a sitdown in the heart of the city's business district were hauled off to jail Saturday. At least six were injured and treated at hospitals.

The demonstrations — there were three Saturday—apparently were part of a series promised throughout the Easter weekend by the Chester Committee for Freedom Now. They protest alleged de facto segregation in Chester schools.

About 65 were arrested and charged with disorderly conduct, failure to obey police and unlawful assembly. Police, swinging riot sticks where resistance was met, dragged women and small children into buses and took them to police stations.

Mayor James Gorbey, who was on the scene, said later that his city had reached a crossroads, that the demonstrations have given it a choice of living by law and order or "degenerating into another Jacksonville . . . as each man becomes a law unto himself."

The first of Saturday's three demonstrations was at the busiest intersection of downtown Chester at 12:30 p. m., during the height of the late Easter shopping crush. The demonstrators sat in the middle of a three-way intersection singing and chanting.

As police waded in to break up this sitdown, two others started in other downtown areas. Those arrested came from all three scenes.

One of those arrested and, with the demonstrators, hauled off to jail in a bus was Bert Hodge, a photographer for the Delaware Valley Daily Times. Hodge said he was knocked down by a policeman while trying to take pictures of the sitdown.

"I was taken to the station house and placed in a detention area," Hodge said. "They detained me for about an hour, and then refused to book me. They gave me back my camera and told me to go."

Stanley Banch, leader of the Committee for Freedom Now, said the demonstrations would continue.

DAYTONA BEACH INVASION

Police Reinforced To Check Students

DAYTONA BEACH (AP)—Police leaves were canceled and a 40-man reserve force stood by for action Saturday as a horde of vacationing college students took over the beach of this Florida East Coast city.

Police Chief Oscar Folsom, expecting the invasion force to swell to 75,000 before the end of the Easter weekend, put his regular officers on 12-hour shifts and alerted the reserves.

Boys outnumbered girls by an estimated 10 to 1, a situation that raised a serious threat of trouble.

In Fort Lauderdale, once the favorite gathering spot of the students, a shortage of girls in the spring of 1961 led to boredom, then to excessive drinking, and finally to rioting in the streets.

Thus far, arrests at Daytona Beach have averaged about 100 a day, mostly for drinking in public. One coed was treated at a hospital after a firecracker was tossed into her car by a prankster.

At Fort Lauderdale, less than 10,000 students were on the beach and police said they expected only a few hundred more over the weekend.

But the Daytona beach was jumping. Girls in bikinis and the boys in Bermuda shorts squirmed and twisted to swinging music. Bars were jammed and beer sales zoomed.

More students flowed in by car, plane and train. Those on skimpy budgets came down the highways, hitchhiking. One youth, leaning on unneeded crutches, found it easier to get rides.

A New York University coed gave this explanation why most of the students switched to Daytona:

"Lauderdale has a bad name after the riots, you know. But Daytona is okay. Parents will give the kids cars, money and the okay to come to Daytona."

Monroe-Tulane Conference To Be Held April 19

D. Ryan Sartor, Monroe attorney, and Mrs. Sartor, have been named co-chairman of the 1964 Monroe - Tulane University Educational Conference to be held April 19 at the Paragon Club.

The conference is a half-day series of panel discussions by leading Tulane faculty members presented by the university as a program for continuing education.

Featured will be discussions by nine faculty members representing the fields of psychology, American Literature, journalism, music, education and history.

Discussion subjects will include problems of college admissions, Shakespearian drama, and philosophy and psychology of clothing styles in America, and common markets in capitalistic and non-capitalistic countries of Europe.

Discussion moderators will be Monroe civic, business and professional leaders.

The Monroe - Tulane Conference in the final in a series of six educational - cultural panel discussions presented by Tulane in cooperation with Tulane alumni clubs in Louisiana and Texas during March and April.

Sartor, who received a bachelor of arts degree in 1952 and a law degree in 1955 from Tulane, has practiced law in Monroe since 1959. While at Tulane he was editor-in-chief of the Tulane Law Review.

Mrs. Sartor, the former Olive Moss of Lake Charles, is the fourth generation of the Moss family to attend Tulane. Her great grandfather, the late Dr. A. Hugh Moss, received a medical degree in 1879 and her grandfather, the late Clement B. Moss, earned a law degree in 1896.

Her father, Dr. Walter O. Moss, received a bachelor of science degree in 1925, a medical degree in 1927 and a graduate master of science degree in 1931 from Tulane, and her mother, the late Clara Guthrie Moss, was awarded a bachelor of arts degree.

Town Dedicates Truman Bridge

MARATHON, Fla. (AP) — A 100-foot bridge over which former President Harry S. Truman has been walking in his morning constitutionals was dedicated Saturday in his honor.

"This reminds me of a small town on the 4th of July, and that is the nicest thing I could say," Truman told the gathering.

Derailed Train Ties Up Traffic

BUNKIE, La. (AP) —A Texas and Pacific freight train derailed Saturday at Rosa—about 10 miles south of Bunkie.

The T&P chief clerk in Alexandria, John Harrell, said five cars were off the tracks. The derailment tied up traffic in the main line. A wrecker was sent to the scene.

The freight train, out of Alexandria, was bound for New Orleans.

DAYTONA BEACH INVASION

Police Reinforced To Check Students

DAYTONA BEACH (AP)—Police leaves were canceled and a 40-man reserve force stood by for action Saturday as a horde of vacationing college students took over the beach of this Florida East Coast city.

Police Chief Oscar Folsom, expecting the invasion force to swell to 75,000 before the end of the Easter weekend, put his regular officers on 12-hour shifts and alerted the reserves.

Boys outnumbered girls by an estimated 10 to 1, a situation that raised a serious threat of trouble.

In Fort Lauderdale, once the favorite gathering spot of the students, a shortage of girls in the spring of 1961 led to boredom, then to excessive drinking, and finally to rioting in the streets.

Thus far, arrests at Daytona Beach have averaged about 100 a day, mostly for drinking in public. One coed was treated at a hospital after a firecracker was tossed into her car by a prankster.

At Fort Lauderdale, less than 10,000 students were on the beach and police said they expected only a few hundred more over the weekend.

But the Daytona beach was jumping. Girls in bikinis and the boys in Bermuda shorts squirmed and twisted to swinging music. Bars were jammed and beer sales zoomed.

More students flowed in by car, plane and train. Those on skimpy budgets came down the highways, hitchhiking. One youth, leaning on unneeded crutches, found it easier to get rides.

A New York University coed gave this explanation why most of the students switched to Daytona:

"Lauderdale has a bad name after the riots, you know. But Daytona is okay. Parents will give the kids cars, money and the okay to come to Daytona."

MEXICAN GIFT

MEXICO CITY (AP) — An image of Mexico's patron saint, our Lady of Guadaloupe, will be sent to France as soon as a shrine at Lourdes is completed. The gift of the Mexican people is a sculpture in gold, bronze and silver, and set with precious stone, by artist Francisco J. Lopez.

Town Dedicates Truman Bridge

MARATHON, Fla. (AP) — A 100-foot bridge over which former President Harry S. Truman has been walking in his morning constitutionals was dedicated Saturday in his honor.

Three hundred residents of Duck Key, where Truman is vacationing, gathered for the ceremony. The bridge, over a canal, had no name.

"This reminds me of a small town on the 4th of July, and that is the nicest thing I could say," Truman told the gathering.

Derailed Train Ties Up Traffic

BUNKIE, La. (AP) —A Texas and Pacific freight train derailed Saturday at Rosa—about 10 miles south of Bunkie.

The T&P chief clerk in Alexandria, John Harrell, said five cars were off the tracks. The derailment tied up traffic in the main line. A wrecker was sent to the scene.

The freight train, out of Alexandria, was bound for New Orleans.

WANT-AD WONDERS Trade Mark

"Scotch Watch" Goose Returned To Work Through Want Ad

At Dumbarton, Scotland, thousands of barrels of Ballentine's Scotch Whiskey are guarded by a proud squad of white Chinese geese who are considered keener of ear, sharper of eye and twice as quick tempered as any dog.

When one named Clemetine disappeared, a Want Ad was placed in the Lenox Herald in Dumbartonshire, Scotland, offering L50 reward. Sure enough she was found wandering along Loch Lomond and returned to the "Scotch Watch Patrol" a sadder—but no longer a silly goose.

WANT-AD WONDERS Trade Mark

"Scotch Watch" Goose Returned To Work Through Want Ad

At Dumbarton, Scotland, thousands of barrels of Ballentine's Scotch Whiskey are guarded by a proud squad of white Chinese geese who are considered keener of ear, sharper of eye and twice as quick tempered as any dog.

When one named Clemetine disappeared, a Want Ad was placed in the Lenox Herald in Dumbartonshire, Scotland, offering L50 reward. Sure enough she was found wandering along Loch Lomond and returned to the "Scotch Watch Patrol" a sadder—but no longer a silly goose.

STEVE CANYON

by MILTON CANIFF

AFRICA...

COL. CANYON, I AM AGAINST ANYTHING MILITARY...

BUT SINCE I HAVE NO MONEY, I CANNOT REFUSE YOUR OFFER TO FLY ME BACK TO MY MISSIONARY POST...

HOWEVER, DO NOT EXPECT ME TO TELL YOU ANYTHING ABOUT THE NEW GOVERNMENT—OR ITS ACTIVITIES...

FAIR ENOUGH, MRS. YEER, BUT YOU REALIZE THAT YOU WILL BE MY COVER, DON'T YOU?

I WILL TELL NO LIE TO PROTECT YOU

YOU KNOW, IT'S IRONICAL! — I COULD HAVE GIVEN YOU ANY WILD LINE...

AND FLOWN YOU BACK TO YOUR FLOCK IN SAFETY...

BUT BECAUSE I TOLD THE TRUTH, I MAY BE A CANDIDATE FOR A FIRING SQUAD!

COL. CANYON, MY HUSBAND WAS A GOOD MAN WHO, I THOUGHT, HAD PUT THE MILITARY WORLD BEHIND HIM...

BUT HE DESERTED OUR FLOCK TO WARN THE PENTAGON...

...OF WHAT HE SUSPECTED WAS A RED THREAT!

I CONSIDER ALL THAT—AS WELL AS YOUR REACTION—TO BE A CHILDISH GAME OF WAR NERVES!

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

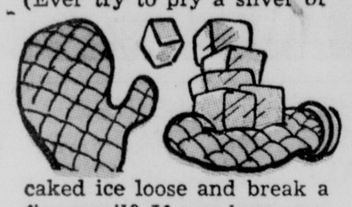

DEAR FOLKS:

When you get ready to defrost your freezer or refrigerator . . . try using an old quilted mitten (the type used for removing things from your oven or barbecue grill).

It's a knockout!

You can pick up all the ice without freezing your hands.

You will enjoy the job, instead of dreading it. Saves broken fingernails, too! (Ever try to pry a sliver of caked ice loose and break a fingernail? If you have you will know what I mean!)

Heloise

SCENT OF SACHET

DEAR HELOISE:

While chatting with my neighbor about our favorite ways of doing laundry, she said she sprinkles sachet on her ironing board before ironing.

I tried it this morning and it's the greatest. Not only the clothes, but the whole room smells sweet. It makes ironing far more pleasant.

"More Ironing"

TINY DUSTER

DEAR HELOISE:

I have found that a good two-inch paint brush is the handiest thing to keep in my cleaning box. It is great for picture frames, lamp shades and hard-to-get-at corners. It's extremely easy to wash before using again. I don't know how I ever got along without it.

Mrs. Leo Fairchild, Jr.

BAKING DAY

DEAR HELOISE:

For ladies who mix bread . . . the job will be easier if you use plastic or rubber gloves.

I can mix the dough with my gloves on and slip my hands out of them when necessary.

When it comes time to pound the bread down again, I put my hands back in the rubber gloves. My hands stay clean as they were before I put them in the gooey mixture.

Beverly Silcek

OUTDOOR BLEACH

DEAR HELOISE:

When I tried to remove the coffee stains from table linens by pouring boiling water on them, it splattered over everything.

I now wash the linens with detergent and lay them on the grass. I then take a tea kettle of boiling water, pour it over the spots and let the cloth dry while still on the grass.

Matilda

QUICKIE CLEANER

DEAR HELOISE:

Have you ever tried using an old knitted mitten to clean venetian blinds? Man, it's the greatest! Really "grabs" the dust. A real quick way to do a job without damage to your hands, too.

Throw the mittens in your laundry after each cleaning.

Jerome Green

DEAR HELOISE:

For those who have trouble with face powder spilling in their dresser drawers, try this:

I use empty jars such as those that contain garlic salt, onion salt, etc.

By putting the powder in the jars and replacing the plastic cap with the holes in it, one can sprinkle the proper amount of powder needed on the puff.

This is a wonderful way to pack powder in a suitcase, too, because the top can be screwed back on the cap, which prevents spilling.

Helen Reddoch

TIME FOR A SHINE

DEAR HELOISE:

I keep an old pair of socks in my shoeshine box.

When I shine shoes, I just slip the socks over my hands and presto . . . I don't get a bit of stain on my hands!

Hazel Juhl

MORE STARCH, PLEASE

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's a tip for those with husbands who like extremely stiff collars and cuffs, but insist that shirts be washed and ironed at home. I take an old linen handkerchief, dampened in water, and place it over the collars and cuffs before ironing. This is especially good when using cold starch. It also prevents the iron from sticking to the material.

You might have to pull the handkerchief loose from the material, because it will stick, but it will not scorch. Give the collar and cuffs a final pressing and that's all there is to it.

If you iron the inside of the cuffs and collar first, this will also prevent wrinkles.

D.S.

PEANUT BAKED BEANS

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's a suggestion from a "woods-camp" cook:

Add a handful of large peanuts (either raw or roasted) to a pot of baked beans when cooking them, and it will give the beans an entirely different flavor.

Resourceful Scott

TWO TRICKS

DEAR HELOISE:

For quick and easy pickled beets . . . put a can of whole, sliced or diced beets in the juice left from sweet pickles or sliced cucumber pickles. Let these sit in the refrigerator for a few days.

For years I wrestled with toothpick boxes and spilled toothpicks until I finally put them in an old Worcestershire bottle. Besides keeping the toothpicks clean, now I can shake one at a time out of the bottle. This is especially handy on picnics.

E. B.

TOWEL BARS

DEAR HELOISE:

For those who live in small homes and lack enough towel space in the bathroom, remove the lower screws from your towel racks and substitute cup hooks. Additional towels and washcloths can be hung on these hooks.

Miss Christine

PROBLEM THUMBS

DEAR HELOISE:

I sewed a white sock onto each sleeve of my baby's pajamas and it broke him of the thumb-sucking he had been doing while asleep.

He may cry one or two nights, but it does work.
